BILLION DOLLAR HURDLE HOLDS UP TELEVISION

Harbord Says We'll Have It in 3 Years.

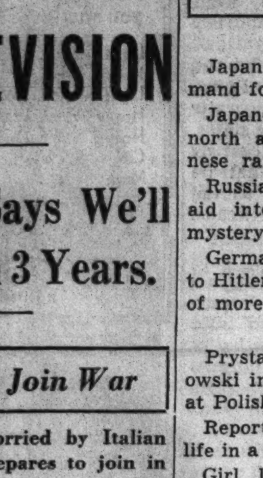
France May Join War

PARIS—France, worried by Italian radio attacks, prepares to join in European war of air waves. Page 2.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Time and a billion dollars are the two hurdles in the path of television in this country, but within three years radio sound pictures may be within reach of the American public, Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, chairman of the board of Radio Corporation of America, said today.



Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord.

Harbord, who during the world war was a major general and chief of staf of the American expeditionary forces, described the progress of television up to date, the problems confronting its development, and possibilities of the future during the course of an interview in his Radio City office.

Visions Great Industry.

The general sees in television a marvelous new entertainment medium and a new great industry which will make a sizable dent in the ranks of the unemployed. But the soldier in his makeup prevents him from advancing toward his objective until he fully is prepared.

From a technical viewpoint television has been well nigh perfected, said the board chairman of R. C. A., but a far flung transmission must be constructed at an enormous cost before a football game, a political orator flinging his arms about, or the rhythmic movement of violin bows in the string section of a symphony orchestra can be flashed upon the turn of a dial into as many homes as now have radios.

Such a transmission plant must be built because of the peculiar nature of the ultra-short waves used in television. These waves are confined to "horizon range," or virtually to the limit of vision, instead of following the curve of the earth as radio sound waves do.

Billion Dollar Building Plan.

"Besides this billion dollar building program which we are facing," said Gen. Harbord, "the art of television is progressing so rapidly that if we sold sets to the public today they might be obsolescent in a short time."

Gen. Harbord swung around in his chair and twisted the dial on a cabinet radio. A program of classical music floated softly into the office.

"Now, we can talk with that as a background, we can play bridge, do housework or carry on other activities," he went on, "but we don't know yet that a family will sit for two hours with eyes glued on a television screen 7½ by 10 inches."

Today's outlook for the transmission of sight through space falls naturally into several important phases which were outlined by Gen. Harbord and supplemented by Ralph R. Beal, director of research for R. C. A., Clarence Farrier, television coördinator for the National Broadcasting company, and other officials.

Sums Up Important Points.

These points may be summed up as follows:

1. The financial problem is first and foremost. Until the billion dollars or a substantial part of it can be raised to defray the investment costs television will remain a laboratory baby. Furthermore, until the infant industry can stand on its feet commercially with sponsors willing to pay for programs which in turn will support the enterprise, television won't walk out of the nursery and into American life.

2. The billion dollar cost is divided about equally between the transmitters that would have to be built throughout the country and the 90,000 mile network of coaxial cables which engineers have estimated would be required if television is to embrace

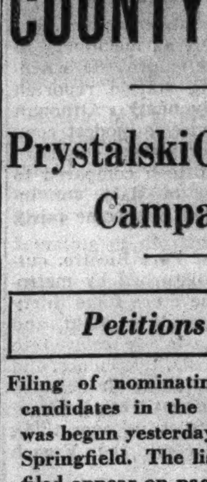
POLISH LEADERS BATTLE OVER COUNTY JUDGE

Prystalski Opens His Campaign.

Petitions Filed

Filing of nominating petitions for candidates in the April primaries was begun yesterday in Chicago and Springfield. The lists of those who filed appear on pages 6 and 7.

Circuit Judge John Prystalski opened his campaign yesterday for the Democratic nomination for county judge. He declared that if elected he will not be subservient to any political organization or individual, and he promised Cook county "honest elections and clean ballot boxes" if he becomes the head of local election machinery.



Benjamin Adamowski.

The judge is the candidate of the regular Democratic organization and is opposed by Edmund K. Jarecki, who has held the office for 16 years and who was refused indorsement by his party last week. Judge Prystalski's speech came as the climax to a turbulent three hour meeting of the Polish-American Democratic organization yesterday afternoon.

Adamowski Defends Jarecki.

Presumably called together to make a blanket indorsement of the party ticket as drawn by the Democratic county central committee, the meeting was interrupted by a red-hot defense of Judge Jarecki delivered by Benjamin S. Adamowski, youthful majority leader in the state house of representatives and one of Gov. Horner's aids.

Adamowski, known as a forceful debater in the legislature, criticized the Polish group for its failure to "raise one little finger in defense of Judge Jarecki when Pat Nash dropped him from the ticket." He talked before Judge Prystalski was given the floor.

Assails Committee's Attitude.

"Has this organization of Polish leaders become merely an executive committee which meets only when the county central committee says it should and ratifies only what the county central committee tells it to?" Adamowski cried. "Are we supposed to swallow all this and say, 'O. K., brother! You do the dictating from now on'?"

After praising Judge Prystalski for his long years of public service Adamowski continued:

"How do we know that if the organization succeeds in its plan this time the same thing won't happen again in four years? We owed it to Judge Jarecki, who brought credit to his people in his years as a public servant, to defend him. But not a single individual raised a little finger for him. Here was a person in whom we had justifiable pride and we did nothing to aid him."

Prystalski's Friends Speak.

Before Judge Prystalski took the floor, several loyal organization leaders, headed by Ald. Frank E. Konkowski [26th], replied to Adamowski's charge with a counter-complaint that Judge Jarecki had virtually abandoned his fellow Democrats, and "evidently had 'gone high hat.'" Ald. Konkowski declared: "Jarecki deserves no consideration from this or any other party. Jarecki is for no organization or party! Jarecki is only for Jarecki!"

Others clamored for the floor, but Chairman Bernard Majewski finally calmed the meeting and after a glowing introduction, called upon Judge Prystalski. The veteran jurist grinned in a fatherly manner at Adamowski, then began his opening speech of the campaign.

Confident of Election.

"I'm your candidate for county judge. I've made no promises to any man or organization as to the conduct of the office of county judge. No one has exacted or asked any promise from me as to what I'm going to do after I'm elected—and I will be elected!"

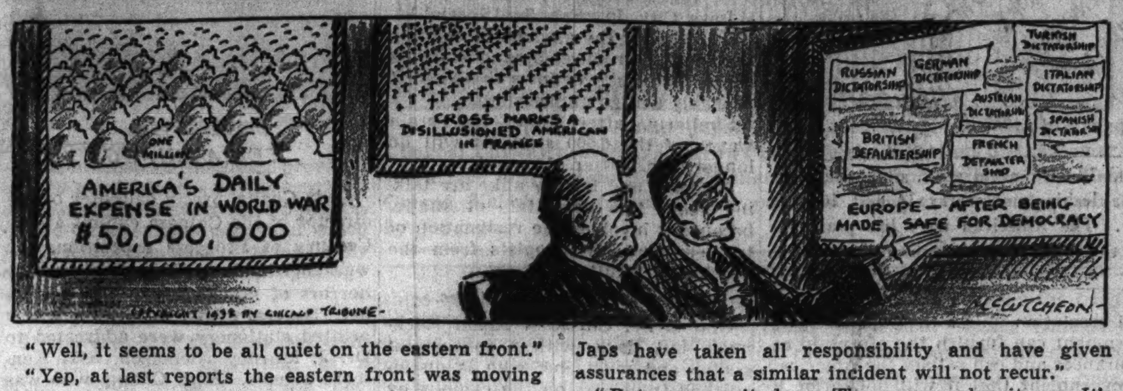
SOME ANTI-FOREIGN WAR TALK



"Well, it seems to be all quiet on the eastern front."

"Yep, at last reports the eastern front was moving back."

"Anyway, I'm glad the Panay incident is settled and out of the way. Now we can speak out without fear of embarrassing the President in the midst of a grave diplomatic controversy."

"Yeah, but if another such incident occurs won't it be a lot more serious?"

"Sure. That's what I'm afraid of. When we started writing notes to Japan it reminded me too much of Wilson and his notes to Germany. The majority of American people didn't want to see this country drawn into the war over in Europe, but it got drawn in just the same. The Panay incident started off on the same pattern. The overwhelming majority of Americans don't want to see this country drawn into a major war over in Asia——

"——Seven thousand miles away, in a continent where we haven't a foot of territory and only a couple hundred million dollars of invested capital—just about enough to finance such a war for four or five days."

"That's the way it looks when we're sober. But Uncle Sam is a great party for going on a sentimental spree when his emotions are stirred. And there are a lot of clever propagandists who know how to fan his emotions to the boiling point. We've seen how it works."

"Then what's the answer? Where do we get off if we don't put up a stiff front?"

"Well, in the first place, we can learn from Great Britain. When they get in a jam they don't send provocative ultimatums. They don't get in so deep they can't back out. That's lesson number one. The next is to keep our shirts on. In the case of this war in China we must keep in mind these incidents occur in a state of war mad excitement. The business of killing is going on savagely. If outsiders get into the war zones they are in danger. Even if they go in to protect their own nationals they can't hope to be immune. A lot of things can happen. Overzealous officers, reckless soldiers, war maddened patriots, all of them in an abnormal state. We can't expect them to suspend the war while we go about our errands of mercy."

"And another thing you will notice. Our citizens who are making their living over there, they don't want to leave their homes. Our government warns them to get out, sends officers to assist them to safety, and they say, 'We'll stick it out.' Well, there you have all the ingredients of trouble."

"Now take the Panay business. It's been settled, leaving considerable irritation on our side. But the Japs have taken all responsibility and have given assurances that a similar incident will not recur."

"But suppose it does. The papers play it up. It's important news, especially after the promises given by Japan. National pride gets het up. Indignant citizens demand action! It is always easy to lash the people to the boiling point when our national pride is wounded. If you inject a word of caution you are called yellow. Any citizen who speaks against permitting ourselves to be dragged into war with Japan on the commercial or sentimental issues involved is derided. And yet the most belligerent Jingo will be saying the same thing after the war has raged three or four years. He will be on the housetops wanting to know who in hell got us into such a jam!"

"Supposing an incident occurs. The President writes another note, stiffer in tone. As long as this tense situation lasts the loyal citizen is supposed to do nothing to cripple or embarrass the President. The voice of the good American who remembers how empty the slogans are and who does not want, on any pretext short of invasion, to be dragged into an Asiatic war because of some war mad incident in the heat of a battle zone or because of the threats to our relatively small commercial interests—that voice must be stilled. He must not speak out!"

"That voice is a big one! We have only recently seen how strong it is, when the Ludlow amendment divided congress almost half and half and was defeated only by the appeals of the President, the secretary of state, and the speaker of the house. The Republicans voted 63 for the amendment and only 19 against. The people don't want to find themselves jockeyed into another foreign war, either by design or circumstances. They want a word to say whether or not the nation is dragged into a foreign war. They don't like to feel that loyalty requires them to 'muffle' their voices at the only time they can effectively protest against the greatest calamity that can befall them."

"The cry of 'Save civilization' is empty. The Chinese and Japanese have been civilized for thousands of years. The Chinese have exalted scholars and merchants; the Japs have glorified warriors and artists."

"The fact of the matter is that the people of a free nation such as ours should be allowed to speak. The only time they can speak is before war is declared. Loyalty does not require that they suspend entirely the right to express an opinion so widespread and overwhelming that congress cannot mistake its significance."

"Every loyal citizen knows that, once war is declared, he must do all in his power to support the nation's effort to win the war. In case of threatened invasion every American would willingly fight."

WHALE LOOKS TOWN OVER, BUT CAN'T FIND THE WAY TO GO HOME

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 5.—[U. P.]—The first whale to come in through the Golden Gate and become trapped in San Francisco bay in eight years was searching frantically tonight for the narrow passage by which he gained entrance. "He's covered with barnacles and crazy as a loon," said Capt. Louis L. Lane, old time master of a whaler who now skippers a freighter. "He is a gray or California whale, plentiful in the North Pacific but rare this far south."

700,000 BOOKS READ BY HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS

More than 700,000 books supplied by the board of education in addition to the regular texts were borrowed for home reading last year by 120,000 high school pupils, the American Library association reported yesterday to the school board.

Volumes on aviation, photography, stamp collecting, astronomy, and marionettes were the favorites. Each of the forty-six high schools and their branches is equipped with a library which is supervised by the Chicago public library board.

JURY'S VERDICT IS COMPROMISE; BOTH SIDES RIGHT

New York, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Boody, McLellan & Co., brokers, were suing Irving M. Lesch for $495 in commissions allegedly due for handling stocks. Lesch contended he lost $500 on the stocks because the brokers weren't on their toes. The jury decided both sides were right and that they should call it quits. Justice C. J. Garrison dismissed the case and ordered a new trial.

Socrates and Plato Cause a Slight Stir in Boston

Boston, Mass., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Socrates and Plato were found by the police tonight after a search of several hours. The two boys, twins, 11 years old, were reported missing by their father, Seraphin Parsos. They were merely visiting relatives.

Mystery Plane Plunges Into Hudson River

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A widening splotch of oil on the icy Hudson river hid tonight the fate of an airplane which, witnesses said, plunged into the water after circling aimlessly over this area for more than an hour.

Soldiers and cadets from the United States Military academy recovered pieces of wreckage, but were unable to learn the type or size of the craft.

Capt. Foster Fellers, who operates a ferry between West Point and Garrison across the river, said the plane appeared to explode as it fell into the water about 100 yards from his boat.

300 Searchers Take to Boats.

He said he thought it was "a large plane with more than one motor"; that it alternately descended and rose, blinking its landing lights as if in distress, then passed by ten feet above his ferry and crashed. Fellers said he proceeded immediately to the spot, but could find no trace of the plane.

Private Joseph Sanders of the military police at West Point reported seeing the plane plunge into the water, and within a short time more than 300 searchers were in boats.

Drifting ice floes hampered operations. The searchers grappled in water ranging from 50 to 170 feet deep. Searchers said they had little hope of recovering or identifying the sunken plane before morning.

Report No Plane Missing.

Aviation men who joined the search said they believed fog rising from the river might have caused the pilot to lose his way. Residents of several Hudson river towns told police of an airplane circling about, flashing its landing lights, more than an hour before the reported crash.

Newark, N. J., airport officials said all transports in its area were accounted for, and other fields reported no planes missing.

The provost marshal's office at West Point reported that state police several hours after midnight had called off all attempts to find the plane because of danger in the icy condition of the river.

Two Killed in California.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 5.—[U. P.]—Two men were killed tonight when their cabin monoplane crashed into an isolated area of the Del Rey hills. The victims were identified as Virgil G. Wilkinson, 44 years old, of El Segundo and Netherby S. Rankin, 30, Los Angeles student flyer. Both men bailed out. Rankin's parachute caught on a wing of the plane and his body was found in the débris. Wilkinson's body was found a mile from the scene of the crash.

HITS HOUSE, UPSETTING PIANO ON WOMAN, BUT HE BEATS THE STORK

Chesterfield, Ind., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Marvin Cummins of Yorktown beat the stork to a hospital here, but he was in such a hurry that his automobile went out of control, crashed into the home of Mrs. Mary Miller, overturned a piano and injured Mrs. Miller slightly. Cummins, who suffered a slight concussion, arrived at the hospital a few minutes before his wife, already there, gave birth to a daughter.

MAN WITH $7,000 LIVES ON CANNED PEAS FOR 9 DAYS

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Police found Albert Burroughs, 61 years old, of Bloomington, Ill., semi-conscious in a bed in a small hotel here today, the room littered with opened cans of peas.

Burroughs rented the room two weeks ago and had bank books indicating he had more than $7,000 on deposit in Urbana, Bloomington, Champaign, Kankakee, and Peoria.

Burroughs, while being taken to a hospital murmured: "Some people call me a bum. But I can show them. I've got money."

Burroughs indicated to the police that he had eaten nothing but canned peas for nine days.

Women Called Safest Drivers of Automobiles

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Police Captain F. E. Timmons of the Des Moines trafic detail declared today that women are the safest drivers and he indorsed back seat driving. Speaking on a police sponsored safety broadcast, Captain Timmons declared that while women motorists hold 25 per cent of the driver's licenses issued in Iowa, they figured in only 9 per cent of the accidents reported to police and the state motor vehicle department. "I have known of instances to back seat drivers preventing serious accidents," he said.

Sailor's Delight

Staf reporters of The Tribune using the names "Omaha Eddie Brennan," "Joe Boyle of Buffalo," and "Sandusky Sam Krug" investigated Chicago relief shelters and wrote stories on what they saw. Herewith is the story of another reporter who spent several hours recently in a special shelter for seamen.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Chicago is more than just "any old port" to the sailor of the American merchant marine. It's the place where he's so welcome when he's out of work that the Chicago Relief administration has reserved separate quarters for him, set up special provisions for his comfort and convenience, and exempted him from many of the rigors imposed on regular reliefers.

He and his fellows make up the local relief setup's most exclusive circle, a virtual private club for indigent seamen, on the top floor of the relief shelter at 1310 South Ashland avenue.

Just Like That.

He says that he's living on top of the relief world right now because President Roosevelt and John L. Lewis of the C. I. O. are "just like that." For the National Maritime union put the Chicago setup across. And the N. M. U. is the affiliate of the C. I. O. that is now alienating merchant seamen's old affections for the American Federation of Labor's International Seamen's union.

A Tribune reporter, hearing that this "club" was for former navy men, applied for "membership" at the C. R. A. transportation headquarters at 758 Harrison street. In a pocket of his shabby clothes were his navy discharge and papers showing that he had served overseas with the destroyers during the war.

He learned from a Mr. Levin, the case worker in charge of continuous care for seaman, that Chicago's snug haven is not for naval sailors, and that it is no advantage to have been in the country's armed service.

Union Card a Help.

"You gotta have your Copeland book," is the way Mr. Levin put it. It was not until later that the investigator learned that an N. M. U. card is also a big help.

From fellow relief seekers the reporter gleaned that a Copeland book is the federally issued log wherein is recorded the holder's service aboard privately operated vessels of United States registry. Like a passport, it bears a photograph of the owner.

"Y'all can git one fo' 50 cents, like Milwaukee Happy did," a friendly Negro volunteered. "He jes' went to the old postoffice an' told the steamboat inspector he lost his ol' book. He didn't have no birth certificate, but two of the boys swore he was born where he said he was. Didn't cost him nothin' but fo' bits fo' photographts."

It appeared that Milwaukee Happy must have had something the inves-

RESENT DEMAND THAT THEY TELL WARSHIP PLANS

Tokio Press Shows Ire at Note.

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Feb. 6 [Sunday].—Japan is being hauled into court to answer questions outside the jurisdiction of that court. This is the opinion of Japanese leaders regarding the identical American and British notes delivered to the Tokio government last night, calling on Japan to reveal whether it is building warships of more than 35,000 tons, the limit fixed by the American-British-French naval treaty of 1936. Japan is not a signatory of the treaty.

While official quarters declined to comment, it is plain that the notes are regarded as unwelcome. The Japanese policy is to find out what other countries are doing, and then to build accordingly, and Tokio is not pleased at having the tables turned.

Call Step High Handed.

Some circles brand the Anglo-American step as "high handed." The attitude of the Japanese government, it is reported, will be decided after a careful study has been made by the Japanese foreign office and naval authorities.

The newspaper Tokio Asahi predicted that the Japanese government will voice sweeping objections to notifying others of construction plans for capital ships and to limiting the tonnage of individual ships, as well as gun caliber.

"Japan is not under treaty obligations to make such notifications and accordingly will not need to comply with the Anglo-American request," the paper said. "It is rather high-handed for these countries to add that 'if assurances are not given by Japan they will apply the escalator clause.'

Sees U. S. Ready to Build Ships.

"That Great Britain, France, and America proposed to open such discussion with Japan, despite their knowledge of certain opposition, must be taken to show their intention to place themselves in a favorable position to carry on armament expansion by declaring Japan to be an armament expanding nation."

The newspaper Nichi Nichi said that Japan is required to take counter measures from a standpoint of quality.

"As an inferior naval nation Japan must observe strict secrecy regarding powers of her ships; namely, tonnage and caliber of guns," Nichi Nichi said.

"Japan is in position now to construct capital ships of any tonnage freely. It is believed impossible for Japan to notify other countries of her naval building program."

DEMAND JAP NAVY PLAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The American navy stands ready to lay the keels of a fleet of the mightiest men of war the world has known if Japan spurns the joint demand of the United States, Great Britain, and France for a showdown on the size and armament of battleships.

Naval plans for a supergiant of approximately 44,000 tons displacement, possibly carrying eighteen inch guns, were revealed tonight with this government's note giving Japan fifteen days to declare whether she is building or plans to build vessels in excess of 35,000 tons, the maximum fixed by the London treaty of 1936. Signatories of this treaty were the United States, Great Britain, and France.

May Invok Escape Clauses.

If Japan does not give assurance that she will hold to the limitation, although she is not a signatory to the document, the three powers served notice they will invoke clauses of the pact which permit them to build superbattleships. The treaty provides that if any nation should build in excess of the document's limitations, a signatory power can do likewise by serving notice of intention to other signatories to compete with the offending nation.

Almost identical notes of the three powers said failure to reply will be taken as verification of reports that Japan is building a 43,000 ton vessel.

Admission that such construction is under way without doubt will spur the navy building race, it was believed.

[The London note has been dispatched to Tokio and while the state department in Washington was proceeding with apparent assurance that Paris would join in the action, the French note was still being debated last night with the expectation that it would be sent today.]

Way Open for Discussion.

The notes left an avenue open for discussion of the size of vessels which may be built in excess of the limitations of the London treaty. This was considered, however, to be nothing more than a diplomatic nicety and little hope for Japanese coöperation was entertained.

The United States navy has been working on plans for a battleship of between 43,000 and 44,000 tons. It is believed that no other nation will build a craft of larger displacement because larger craft would not be able to pass through the Panama canal. The canal's largest locks are 110 feet wide and 1,000 feet long.

Propose Second Canal.

The naval expansion program has centered attention on the proposal for construction of a sea level canal in Central America, probably in Nicaragua, to supplement the one across the Isthmus of Panama. The need of a new canal has been emphasized for speedy transfer of the fleet from one ocean to another. Estimates of the cost range around 720 million dollars.

The navy also has plans for 18 inch guns. At present battleships carry 14 and 16 inch guns. The larger gun would deal a heavier wallop at the receiving end but would not carry that wallop a great deal farther than a 16 inch gun. For this reason navy officers do not believe that any vessels built in excess of 35,000 tons will carry 18 inch guns. It is believed that a capital ship of about 44,000 tons, armed with twelve 16 inch guns —more formidable than any vessel afloat—will be America's answer to Japanese building beyond treaty limits.

Cost 80 to 100 Millions.

Navy officers said that a 44,000 ton superbattleship probably would cost 80 to 100 million dollars, compared with an estimated 64 million dollars for the North Carolina and Washington now under construction. Such a supership, however, probably would be approximately 684 feet long, much shorter than the three largest commercial liners, the Normandie, 981 feet; the Queen Mary, 975, and the Berengaria, 883, all of them near the limit length for passage through the Panama canal.

The most costly battleships now in commission, 32,000 tons, cost 27 million dollars each when built, but construction costs have risen so that similar vessels today would cost more than 60 millions, experts said.

The navy began construction of six 43,200 ton battleships during the war. They were scrapped under the provisions of the abrogated Washington and London naval treaties before completion.

The American note, demanding a reply by Feb. 20, was lodged in the Japanese foreign office at Tokio by Ambassador Joseph C. Grew. At the same time representatives of Great Britain and France deposited notes identical except on minor points.

The similar language of the notes was taken here as conclusive evidence that this country has entered into a virtual alliance with Great Britain for mutual protection of interests over the seven seas. The state and navy departments have dismissed other evidence of what at the mildest is "a working agreement" by insisting there are no plans to combine the American fleet, wholly or in part, with that of any other nation in the event of war.

Vigorous denials were made here on Tuesday at a time when Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, was meeting with Herschel V. Johnson, American chargé d'affaires at London, Capt. Russell Wilson, American naval attaché, and British naval experts. Also present was the French naval attaché.

Demands Policy Be Revealed.

It was not until today that with the release of the notes the subject matter of the conference became known. This disclosure added fuel to the demand by Senator William E. Borah [R., Idaho] that President Roosevelt reveal his foreign policy to the nation.

It was also learned that the President authorized the sending of the note at yesterday's cabinet meeting.

The Japanese reply to the American note, if any, will arrive here before the house naval affairs committee completes action on the 800 million dollar building program the President presented in his special message on national defense. Whatever action Japan may take probably will be reflected in the recommendations the committee will adopt.

Chairman Carl Vinson [D., Ga.] of the committee said today that the bill now before his committee which would authorize a 20 per cent increase in navy strength, will permit this country to construct battleships of any tonnage.

"With reference to the size of battleships I will be guided by the administration when it receives the information it has requested from Japan," Vinson said.

"It is to be regretted that Japan did not go along with England, France and the United States in the exchange of naval information.

"Secretary of State Cordell Hull did the right and proper thing in making his demand for Japanese plans. If Japan is going to build battleships over 35,000 tons, we will be compelled to do the same."

The militant ultimatum to Japan followed close on the heels of a pacific gesture in the far east. Last night the state department announced that the United States had decided to reduce the number of its armed forces in China. The 808 officers and men of the 15th United States infantry, which had been on duty in China since 1911, will go home in March, it was announced.

Battleships and Guns Compared

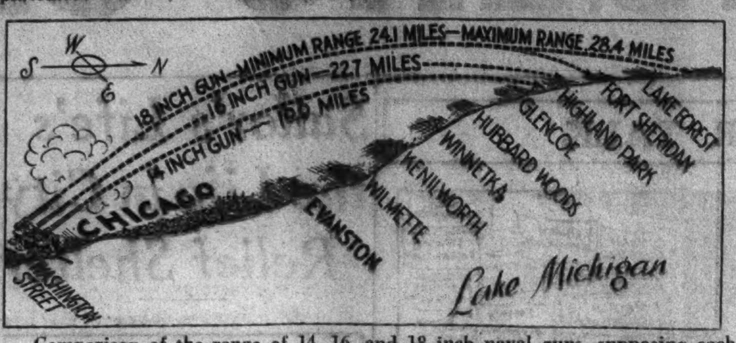
How a superbattleship of 44,000 tons (outlined in white), which the United States proposes to build if Japan refuses to reveal its naval construction plans, would look as compared to the Queen Mary, one of the largest commercial liners, and to a battleship of 35,000 tons (shown in gray), the maximum displacement fixed by the London treaty of 1936.



Comparison of the range of 14, 16, and 18 inch naval guns, supposing each fired shells northward from Chicago. Battleships now carry 14 and 16 inch guns, the latter the limit fixed by treaty. The American navy has plans for 18 inch guns, Japan having been reported to be planning a weapon of that size.

TEXT OF U. S. NOTE

The text of the state department's note demanding that Japan reveal whether it is building or plans to build warships in excess of 35,000 tons, the maximum fixed under the London treaty of 1936 signed by the United States, Great Britain, and France, follows:

"1. The Japanese government will be aware that under the London naval treaty 1936 the American government is precluded from constructing capital ships [i. e., vessels of more than 10,000 standard displacement or with a gun of more than eight inches] which exceed 35,000 tons or carry a gun more than 16 inches, or which are of less than 17,500 tons or carry a gun of less than 10 inches. As regards cruisers [i. e., vessels of not more than 10,000 tons with gun of not more than 8 inches] the American government is limited to a maximum of 8,000 tons with 6 inch guns.

"2. The Japanese government has unfortunately not seen its way to subscribe to the London naval treaty nor has it hitherto felt able to give any assurances that treaty limits would in practice be adhered to by it.

Right of Escalation.

"3. As the Japanese government will be aware, the naval treaty gives the American government a right of escalation in the event of building not in conformity with treaty limits by a power not a party thereto. There have for some time been persistent and cumulative reports, which in the absence of explicit assurances from the Japanese government that they are ill-founded, must be deemed to be authentic, that Japan has undertaken or intends to undertake construction of capital ships and cruisers not in conformity with the above mentioned limits.

"The American government has therefore decided that it will be necessary for it to exercise its right of escalation unless the Japanese government can furnish the aforesaid assurances and can satisfy the American government that it will not, prior to Jan. 1, 1943, lay down, complete or acquire any vessel which does not conform to the limits in question, without previously informing the American government of its intention to do so and of tonnage and caliber of the largest gun of the vessel or vessels concerned.

Calls for Early Reply.

[The date of Jan. 1, 1943, mentioned in the note, refers to the limit of time, according to the Washington naval treaty of 1923, wherein the replacement of United States existing battleships by new ones should have been completed.]

"4. In view of the forthcoming publication of naval estimates and necessity for giving other treaty powers information as to intended American construction, the American government will be glad to receive a reply not later than Feb. 20 next. Should no reply be received by that date or should the reply be lacking in the desired information and assurances, it will be compelled to assume that the Japanese government either is constructing or acquiring or has authorized the construction or acquisition of vessels not in conformity with the limits referred to.

"The American government would thereupon be obliged, after consultation with the other naval powers with which it is in treaty relations, to resume full liberty of action. If, however, the Japanese government though engaged in, or intending to engage in, construction not in conformity with treaty limits, were willing to indicate forthwith the tonnages and calibers of guns of the vessels which it was constructing, or was intending to construct, the American government for its part would be ready to discuss with the Japanese government the question of the tonnages and gun calibers to be adhered to in future if Japan were now prepared to agree to some limitation. It would, however, be necessary that such consultation should be completed by May 1."

Psychology Shakeup Sets Students Talking.

(The second article of Marcia Winn's series, "Romance on the Campus?" will be found in today's Graphic Section. It concerns the girls of Smith college at Northampton, Mass.)

BY MARCIA WINN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Regardless of the amount of emotion that spring produces among students at the University of Iowa this year, it probably will go unmeasured.

Similarly, after June, the brain waves of the 6,500 students will no longer be a matter of record.

Students and faculty alike are talking about this new state of affairs, because it involves the resignation of two eminent psychologists from the university faculty.

Measures Co-Eds' Emotions.

One is Dr. Christian Alban Ruckmick, tall, dark, with a continental goatee and mustache, who is distinguished from afar on the campus by his fur cap. His list of scientific accomplishments is as long as the delinquent tax list, and he measured student emotions, particularly those of the co-eds, on what he called a derm-ohm-graph—to the students an emotion meter.

Dr. Ruckmick was professor of psychology. He specialized in the field of human emotions. Since his resignation was turned in last fall, later announcement of its acceptance by the university was a surprise to no one but Dr. Ruckmick. He says his original resignation was withdrawn, although since September he has conducted no classes.

Campus Is Startled.

The resignation of Dr. Lee Edward Travis, debonair young head of the psychology department, startled the campus, however, because Dr. Travis, who measured students' brain waves by an electrical gadget attached to their ear lobes, was highly popular. So was psychology.

Neither professor will discuss his status. Ruckmick, with a flash of brown eyes, declared: "Anything I said would be libelous." Travis, who will continue at the university until June, explained his silence in one word, "Personal."

But the students talk, talk, talk, and principally about the emotion meter. The brain wave recorder [Dr. Travis established the theory of characteristic brain waves] is of less interest in proportion to student understanding of it, but the emotion meter —who isn't interested in emotions?

The emotion meter works on the principle of a galvanometer, as do lie detectors, and measures electrical currents generated by activity in the sweat glands of the hand. Under emotion, Ruckmick and others contend, the sweat glands become more active.

Red Light Marks Emotion.

Dr. Ruckmick's meter was placed in a small soundproof laboratory, about 5 by 10 feet in size. The walls were draped with black. The subject, usually a student of psychology, sat in a chair, or reclined on a cot, with his or her left hand bandaged. Inside the bandage two tiny copper electrodes were clamped against the hand.

Ruckmick then sought to produce such emotions as fear, horror, joy, embarrassment, surprise, disgust, and anger. If emotion were shown, a red light glowed in a nearby machine.

To induce emotion soft music might be played, a horror story read aloud, an obnoxious odor introduced, or questions asked that might excite the listener. Or the stimulus might be a written word, such as "gun," to which the reaction might be fear.

Many of the tests were given with three or four students as observers. Others were given at night, without an audience.

CELIA CHANG.

Celia Chang, pretty daughter of the director of the Chinese exhibit at the Century of Progress exposition, has written friends in Chicago about the horrors of war in her native Shanghai. Several of her letters on flower printed stationery were addressed to Dr. J. Murney Nicholson, 5833 Kenmore avenue. Miss Chang, who was educated in the United States and in China, attended many parties in Chicago while she was here with her father.

Youth Confesses Killing His Grandmother for $18

Buffalo, W. Va., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Bob McCoy, 21 years old, pleaded guilty tonight to a murder charge a few minutes after he had viewed the body of his grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Ellen Oldaker, 75 years old, who he is accused of slaying for $18. The youth looked at the body at an undertaking establishment, where the hearing was held before Magistrate V. N. Meedings and said, "I'm guilty." The body of Mrs. Oldaker was found in the vegetable cellar adjacent to her home.

FRANCE MAY JOIN IN EUROPEAN WAR OF THE AIR LANES

Government Eyes Italian Radio Attacks.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 5.—France, being drawn deeper and deeper into Europe's radio war, is speeding up its defense against it. If it continues to grow worse France will build up a broadcasting counter-offensive, as Great Britain did against Italy.

Italian attacks on France are made from the Bari station, in southern Italy. The anti-French propaganda was for a time directed at Arabia, but recently has been largely disseminated in Rumania.

Government Listens In.

So far France's defense has consisted only of receiving machinery in Paris and diplomatic protests whenever this receiving station reported anything unusually nasty. Although this receiving service is modest compared to that of some other countries —a personnel of fifteen compared to Berlin's personnel of sixty, for instance—it has recently become fairly efficient.

The station is at Fort Bicetre, outside of Paris, undisturbed by metropolitan noises. There are some thirty receiving sets operating night and day. The broadcasts are relayed to the ministry of posts, telephones, and telegraphs in the Rue de Grenelle, in the heart of Paris, where a crew of polyglot listeners pick up everything which might interest the French government.

Record Important Speeches.

About fifty broadcasts are received per day and reports on the hot ones are immediately made to the ministry of foreign affairs and any other departments which might be interested. Besides these urgent reports there are four regular reports every day.

In the case of an especially interesting broadcast—Mussolini's or Hitler's, for instance—the speech is recorded so that it can be carefully gone over afterward and be kept on file. This habit made it possible to catch Mussolini some time ago using a rude word in speaking about democracies. What he said might be translated as "those democratic herds," but the Italian newspapers toned down the expression.

POLISH LEADERS BATTLE OVER COUNTY JUDGE

Hear Prystalski and Friend of Jarecki.

ney's recent statement concerning "vote stealing by the organization," Judge Prystalski declared: "The state's attorney cries out, 'They're stealing votes! What? Is the Democratic organization a bunch of thieves? Are you gentlemen all thieves?"

Many in the crowd smiled with the speaker as he added: "Well, if you are, let me tell you there'll be no stealing after I'm elected."

Ready for Honesty Issue.

Then Judge Prystalski concluded in ringing tones: "I'm willing to meet with any one who doubts my honesty. I'd like the state's attorney to show where any of my actions in past years have ever indicated I am dishonest or have ever stolen anything. If that's going to be the issue, I'll meet it—and any other issue they care to bring forth."

Immediately after the speech, Ald. Konkowski moved that the Polish group fully indorse the Democratic organization's county and state slates. The only dissenting vote was cast by Adamowski, who explained that he had already gone on record as opposing the choices of the party heads.

SPANISH REBELS OPEN THIRD DRIVE TO REGAIN TERUEL

Loyalists Capture Key to Granada in South.

MADRID, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Gen. Francisco Franco's insurgent troops launched a powerful counter offensive on the Teruel front today after weeks of inactivity. The third insurgent drive to recapture the vital eastern Spanish city of Teruel struck about thirty miles north near Singra while insurgent air raids continued unabated against unfortified cities along Spain's Mediterranean coast.

A government communique admitted that the insurgents, who sought to relieve government pressure at Singra, had captured Pancrudo, half way between Teruel and Belchite. At the same time heavy fighting broke out in the sector around Teruel proper which the government invested more than a month ago.

The government reported its troops routed the rebels from positions on strategic Muela de Teruel hill and then repulsed three counter attacks.

Rebels Bomb Alicante.

Rebel warplanes dropped more than 200 bombs on Alicante, Tarragona, Reus, Sagunto, and other east coast cities during the day. The total casualties reported were two killed and thirty injured. Five insurgent planes and one government craft were said to have been shot down during the raids.

Discovery of currency and securities worth 100,000,000 pesetas in the ruins of the Bank of Teruel was reported by official quarters today.

[The peseta is not quoted in American foreign exchange lists as a result of the war.]

Government militiamen were said to have found the valuables while razing the bank building where the insurgents made one of their last stands before surrendering. The structure was demolished by shell fire.

Loyalists Gain Key to Granada.

HENDAYE, France [At the Spanish Frontier], Feb. 5.—(AP)—Spanish government sources declared today a successful attack on the Granada front had opened new possibilities for advances in Southern Spain where battle lines have remained unchanged for months. In this attack government forces captured Pena de la Mata, a dominating height twelve miles from Granada, important city on the southern front which they had tried to approach several times unsuccessfully.

The operation enabled the loyalists to effect a junction of their lines, one approaching along the road from Jaen to the north and the other from Murcia to the east.

Government advices admitted a long hard campaign would be necessary to cover the intervening twelve miles to Granada, but said the capture of Pena de la Mata would facilitate further advances.

[Other dispatches said a Spanish government communique admitted rebels had taken Sierra Alcorcon on the southern Granada front, but only after three days' fighting and at the cost of many casutlaties.]

SEEK MICHIGAN BANKER IN CITY AS EMBEZZLER

Michigan state police centered a search in Chicago last night for R. Herbert Watts, 65 years old, former banker of Adrian, Mich., who allegedly embezzled $84,000. He disappeared Jan. 7.

Lieut. Edward Cooper of the Michigan state police, told Detectives William Lawler and Robert Ryan of the confidence detail, he traced Watts here two weeks ago.

Police were told that he allegedly embezzled $20,000 from an Adrian bank, of which he was receiver, and $64,000 from a cemetery association, of which he was treasurer. A warant for his arrest, issued last month, mentioned only the specific sum of $2,500 as taken from the cemetery association.

A la the 1850s

Children of families prominent in Chicago society took a page yesterday out of the childhood of their grandfathers and grandmothers and put it to modern dance tunes. Their grandparents, eighty years ago, met at Clark and Monroe streets to dance the schottische and the polka, skipping and bowing to the satisfaction of James Edwin Martine, their young dancing master.

Yesterday the children — fifty of them, boys and girls—celebrated the founding in 1858 of the Martine Terpsichorean parlor with a party at the Lake Shore Athletic club. They danced swing numbers, but they were dressed in costumes of former years, the girls in crinolines and powdered wigs . Their masters were James Edwin Martine's daughter, Edwina Weckler, and his grandson, James Lee Weckler.

Mrs. Weckler, who was her father's protégé until his retirement at 85, fifteen years ago, will turn over the school next year to her son, who is 22. With it will go a scrapbook bulging with pictures of three generations of Chicagoans in their dancing school days.

19 German Sailors Feared Dead; Wreckage Washed Up

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—Nineteen German sailors were believed to have died at sea. Wreckage of the 2,000 ton Hamburg freighter Richard Borchardt was washed up on the island of Heligoland in the North sea. The ship, bound for Spain with a load of coal, had been missing for days.

JAPS OPEN DUAL DRIVES TO SEIZE VITAL RAIL LINE

Press Chinese Corridor from North, South.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 6. [Sunday]—(AP)—Japanese troops stabbed at both sides of China's double edged central front today but on the southern side, Chinese reported, the Japanese were held back by Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's field guns. On this southern edge of the vital corridor which the Chinese are trying to defend, the opposing forces faced each other in the frozen bottomlands of the Hwai river, about ninety miles south of Suchow, keystone of the Chinese defense.

The Japanese contended they had crossed the Hwai and were driving against Kuchen, thirty miles farther north along the disputed Tientsin-Pukow railway.

In southeastern Shantung province, on the northern side of the corridor, a Japanese column from Tsingtao occupied Chucheng while another which had been driven out of Mengyin by a Chinese counter attack a week ago recaptured that town.

Operate on Broad Sector.

It appeared that the Japanese were crushing Chinese opposition in a broad sector, since Chucheng and Mengyin are about eighty-five miles apart. Chinese sources said four Japanese divisions were in Shantung province for the push southward toward the east-west Lunghai railway and its junction with the Tientsin-Pukow line at Suchow.

While Japanese troops hammered the central front, warships and planes harassed south China areas to prevent reinforcement of China's central front defenses. Authorities of Kwangtung province had planned to dispatch fresh troops northward this week, it was disclosed, but instead they were rushed to defense positions along the southern coast.

The Boca Tigris forts in the delta of the Pearl [or Canton] river below Canton withstood and returned the fire of Japanese warships trying to open the river gateway to the populous city. Bombing planes pounded at the forts.

200 Americans Periled.

More than 500 missionaries in the province, outside of Canton, Macao and Hongkong, the British crown colony, were endangered by the bombings. Nearly 200 of the missionaries are Americans.

A spokesman for civil and military authorities of Canton told of reports of an attempt to overthrow the Nationalist regime in favor of a Japanese controled puppet government. He said the situation was well in hand and that martial law and the halting of river navigation between Canton and Hongkong were more of a precaution than a suppression of revolt. More than 100 suspected anti-Nationalist agitators were arrested.

In Shanghai the Japanese still were deadlocked with representatives of outside powers, including the United States, over the payment of customs and whether customs receipts should be deposited in the Yokohama Specie bank until the issue is settled.

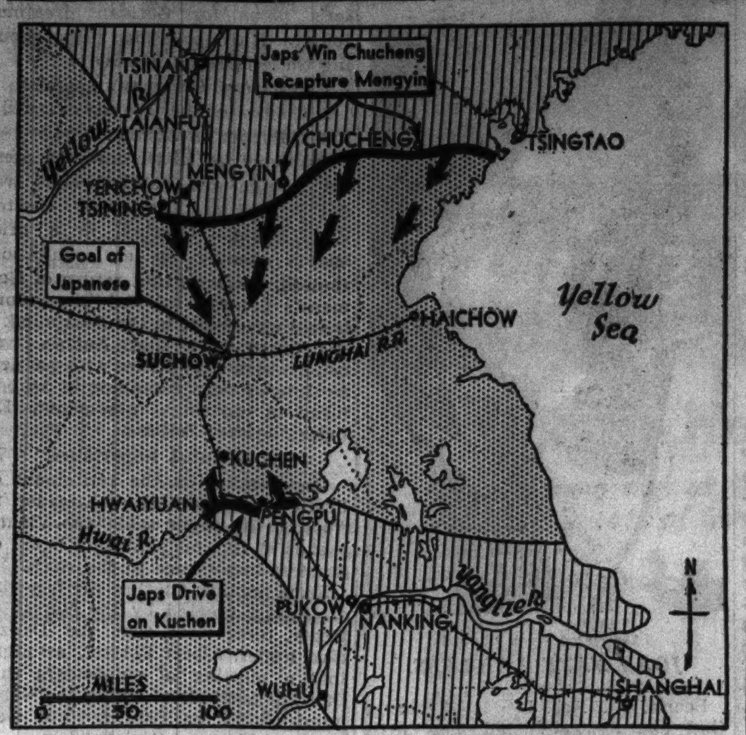
Japs Object to Compromise.

The compromise proposal of consular officials that the customs collections be turned over to an international committee and deposited in banks of various nationalities was reported rejected by the Japanese. The situation has become the subject of nearly daily conferences among Clarence E. Gauss, American consul general; Paul Emil Naggiar, French consul general; R. G. Howe, British chargé d'affaires, and Japanese authorities.

The increasing number of Japanese ships docking without examination or customs payments—which are required of vessels of other nations—made the future of customs Shanghai's principal international problem.

Assurances asked by the United States as a condition of settlement were understood to embody the traditional "open door" policy [integrity of the customs service and equality of treatment], together with uninterrupted servicing of China's foreign loans and boxer indemnities.

Japanese Pinch North China Corridor



From north and south Japan's war machine rolled toward the Lunghai railway yesterday. Arrows indicate the direction of the powerful drives designed to pinch off the rich hinterland defended by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's troops. Lined portions show area already seized by Japanese.

RUSSIA GRANTS DEMAND OF U. S. IN SPY MYSTERY

MOSCOW, Feb. 5.—(AP)—A representative of the United States embassy will visit Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens on Monday, it was disclosed today, in the hope of solving the mystery of her trip to Russia and her arrest.

Mrs. Rubens, an American citizen, has been held incommunicado since Dec. 9, when she was arrested on suspicion of espionage. Soviet authorities today acceded to demands of the United States that a diplomatic representative be permitted to interview her.

Whether she will be held for trial was not disclosed, but it was believed she would be tried with the man who entered the country with her as her husband. Their passports gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson of New York.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—United States officials tonight expressed hope that the questioning of Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens in Moscow will enable them to apprehend individuals engaged in what is believed to be a fake passport mill.

Claims 507 Spanish Planes Destroyed by Italian Flyers

ROME, Feb. 5.—[U. P.]—The semi-official Fascist aviation weekly Le Vie del l'Aria said today that Italian flyers serving in Spain have destroyed 507 loyalist planes, mostly in aerial combat, since the beginning of the Spanish civil war. The destroyed planes include 144 Russian Rata planes, 123 American Curtiss planes, and French planes, the publication said.

Steinway Pianos
were a cultural contribution
"IN OLD CHICAGO"

PIANOS MUSIC
LYON & HEALY, SMITH & NIXON

After the Fire of 1871, Lyon & Healy transacted business in this old frame church, at the corner of Wabash Avenue and 16th Street.

CHICAGO was still a stripling when first the voice of Steinway was heard in the lakeside village. Throughout the march of time from "brown stone mansions" to penthouse apartments and suburban cottages, Steinway has been the symbol of all that is superlative in pianos . . the instrument preferred by the musically great—the piano desired in discriminating homes.

GERMANY HAILS HITLER'S GRAB OF MORE POWER

Promoted Army Leaders Pledge Fealty.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—Forty high army and air force officers, including more than twenty generals, who were promoted either in rank or position in yesterday's shakeup of the German army, called at the chancellory today and solemnly renewed their pledges of loyalty to their supreme commander, Reichsfuehrer Hitler. The officers were headed by Hermann Wilhelm Goering, the newly created field marshal, who is Hitler's most trusted aid and now becomes the highest ranking officer of the army.

Most Germans were pleased with the reorganization of the government and army, in which Hitler proclaimed himself "chief of national defense." The changes, the Germans feel, "will increase Germany's striking power."

Becomes "Field Lord."

[Attempting to analyze the German shakeup, a correspondent of the New York Times cables "The one cardinal factor emerging from the confusing multiplicity of changes is that Hitler has concentrated control of all military, political, and economic policies in his own hands and thus has assumed that dominant position that the late Gen. Erich Ludendorff wanted to have filled with a 'field lord' in order to supervise the moral, military, and economic mobilization of the nation for totalitarian war. It is a concentration of power in one hand to a degree not attempted before in modern times except by Premier Mussolini of Italy."]

Some alarmists see in the reorganization "increased influence of the more daring and reckless men in the cabinet." They point especially to Joachim von Ribbentrop, former ambassador to England, who is the new Nazi foreign minister. Von Ribbentrop is known as an ardent Nazi.

The army accepted the change quietly. Gen. Werner von Fritsch, ousted commander in chief of the army, was in his offices today, straightening out his papers and preparing to turn over his office to Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, his successor.

[This appeared to disprove London reports that Gen. Von Fritch had been arrested.]

Soldiers Still Run Army.

Army leaders upon analyzing the changes found that, contrary to fears they had entertained all of last week, key posts in the army remained in the hands of men who are soldiers, according to the Prussian tradition, and not politicians.

Army leaders were relieved to find that no changes were made in the general staf, when Gen. Ludwif Beck and his aids remained at work, untouched by the shakeup. They expressed belief that the reshuffle, in which thirteen generals were dismissed, did not decrease the army's military efficiency, although they deeply regretted the elimination of Gen. Von Fritch from active service.

Although for years the ousted defense minister, Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg, had been celebrated as one of the outstanding leaders of Germany, the press today showed the general resentment over his recent marriage to Erika Gruhn, a carpenter's daughter, by failing to express a single word of regret over his "resignation."

It is understood that when new ambassadors are appointed to Austria, Italy, and Japan to replace the three ambassadors to these countries who were recalled yesterday, the German ambassador to Moscow will be transferred to another post, because the Nazis do not plan to keep an ambassador in the soviet capital. K. K. Yurenev, the Russian ambassador to Berlin, has been absent from his post since last summer, and many have assumed he was among the victims of Dictator Stalin's purge of diplomats.

Nazis Renew Demands.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—(AP)—The Nazi high command swung its new and unopposed control of Germany's powerful army and centralized foreign policy behind Reichsfuehrer Hitler's plans for German greatness tonight. Nazi spokesmen began shouting these insistent demands:

1 Return of Germany's colonies.
2. Control of the free city of Danzig.
3. Influence in Austria.

Just how far Hitler now will press his foreign and political aims was not yet plain. The newly created Field Marshal Goering, in a brief speech opening an art exhibition, showed, however, that return of Germany's pre-war colonial possessions is still uppermost in the Nazi mind.

A broad hint that Austria was being watched by Hitler with particular interest was contained in an editorial in Goering's newspaper, Essener National Zeitung.

"Of Greatest Importance."

Commenting on the retirement of Franz von Papen as ambassador to Austria, the paper said "the Vienna post is at this moment once again of greatest importance to the reich."

From another quarter, the free city of Danzig, created by the Versailles treaty, came word that the Danzig Nazi leader, Albert Forster, last night told a meeting of sub-leaders that Danzig "must stand before the world unmistakably as 100 per cent German and National Socialist."

Nazi demands for better treatment of German minorities, especially in Czechoslovakia, have been emphasized so frequently of late that action is believed near. Its nature probably will be disclosed by Hitler at the reichstag session called for Feb. 20.

The Fuehrer's shakeup brought a long list of appointments to new positions. Men of comparative youth were given new responsibilities. Many persons, not so well known, also gained pivotal positions.

Dietrich Made Press Chief.

As a special secretary of state in charge of press relations, Dr. Otto Dietrich took office in the propaganda ministry. For many years he has been Hitler's personal press chief.

At the ministry of economics Rudolph Brinkman, who has been in the United States many times as deputy of Hjalmar Schacht, retired minister of economics, was made a secretary of state.

Hitler promoted to the rank of major general his personal adjutant, youthful looking Col. Karl von Bodenschartz, and made him cabinet chief of Goering's office.

Two young military officers, Maj. Gen. Fritz Loeb and Hermann von Hanniken, were put in as directors of the four year plan organization to bring Germany economic self-sufficiency.

Envoys May Be Retired.

The fact was apparent that Hitler considered it the moment for young understudies to take greater responsibility and replace older men whose assistance at first was indispensable in building the new Germany. A similar shakeup was expected at the foreign office.

It was considered almost certain that two of the recalled ambassadors, Herbert von Dirksen from Tokio and Von Papen from Austria, would be retired and that only Ulrich von Hassell, coming home from Rome, would continue in the foreign service. Von Hassell's work in bringing Hitler and Mussolini together so closely was said to be deeply appreciated by the Fuehrer.

JOAN FAYE LAWLESS.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A charge that she had abducted her little brother from San José, Cal., last week gave Joan Faye Lawless an opportunity for some first hand newspaper experience.

Miss Lawless, who is 18 and a freshman in journalism at Bradley Polytechnic institute, answered the charge with a story which was published under her by-line in a Peoria newspaper.

The complaint was filed by her mother, Mrs. Cora Petersen, in San José. Mrs. Petersen, claiming custody of the boy, alleged her daughter had run off with him by airplane. She said she believed her divorced husband, living in Peoria, was to blame.

NEW NAZI ARMY CHIEF BEGAN HIS MILITARY CAREER AS A YOUTH

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, new commander-in-chief of the German army, started his rising military career as a boy under the old imperial régime.

Son of an army general, Von Brauchitsch received his education in a military academy and entered the imperial German army as a second lieutenant when he was 18 years old. He is now 56.

He received many promotions after he got his army commission and was transferred to the general staf.

He succeeded Marshal Werner von Blomberg as commander of the First Army division in 1933 when Von Blomberg became war minister and was appointed commanding general of the First Army corps in 1935 when Germany regained armament equality.

O, MRS. CURTIS: HERE IS $10,000 WAITING FOR YOU

Hartford, Mich., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Receivers for the closed Olney National bank of Hartford, who have been unable to find Mrs. Mary Curtis, opened her safety deposit box in the institution's vaults and found $10,000 in cash and securities.

Receiver W. R. Payne said the last report of Mrs. Curtis was that she went to Chicago nearly five years ago. Her husband, Edward Curtis, has been divorced and remarried.

A sister of Mrs. Curtis, Mrs. Anna Koeka of Cedar Rapids, Ia., has brought suit to determine disposition of the contents of the deposit box.

GIRL GIVES LIFE TO SAVE MOTHER FROM HER FATHER

Maddened Parent Also Wounds Son.

In the fog outside a humble dwelling at 457 West 25th place a high school girl, 17 years old, risked and lost her life last night to save her mother and a baby sister from the homicidal rage of her drunken father.

As the man, Joseph Novak, 43 years old, fired a pistol at his wife and the infant, the girl, Rose Novak, interposed.

"Run, mamma!" she cried. "If he shoots again I'll get it."

Novak fired again. His bullet struck the heroic daughter in the back and lodged in her heart. She collapsed and died as the mother and the little sister, Wilma, 2 years old, found safety in the fog. The killer, who had already shot and seriously wounded his son, John, 21 years old, flung away his pistol and fled.

Found Hiding in Basement.

Novak didn't run far. He went to the basement next door at 453 25th place and was found there, hiding under blankets and a mattress, by Sergt. Michael Cleary and a squad early today. He seemed in a stupor, but managed to mutter, "I'm sorry. I guess I must have been out of my head. It was the food."

The family quarrel that ended in tragedy began shortly after 6 p. m., when Novak reached his home after several stops in taverns. He strode into the kitchen and asked what he was to have for supper. His wife, Caroline, replied, "spaghetti."

"I want steak," growled her husband.

Girl Grapples with Father.

Seizing a flatiron, he attempted to strike his wife with it. Mrs. Novak picked up the baby and fled to the dining room. John and his sister Frances, 21 years old, and the self-sacrificing Rose grappled with the infuriated father. They wrested the iron from him.

"You've been beating people enough around here," said John.

"I'll kill you!" shouted Novak.

Running into a bedroom, he picked up his pistol. John ran down the rear steps. A bullet clipped him in the shoulder. Novak turned back into the house. His wife, carrying the screaming, terrified Wilma, ran down the front stairs to the street. He pursued. Behind him were Frances and Rose.

Son Is Shot Again.

Mrs. Novak took refuge in a gangway to the west. Her maddened husband started toward it. John, who had run around the house, grappled with his father and was shot again—this time in the abdomen.

From the gangway there was no opening at the rear. As Novak pressed into it Frances ran to call the police. Rose, however, followed him into the dark passage. Bumping against him, she disconcerted his aim, and Mrs. Novak, still holding the baby, darted past the infuriated man. That was when Rose was shot.

Novak is a truck driver, but has not worked regularly since October. Members of the family and William Hrdlicka, a roomer in the home, said that he was a steady drinker and quarrelsome.

John Novak was taken to the People's hospital, where his condition was critical.

Father Slays Daughter, Shoots Son

Tragic suffering distorts the features of Mrs. Caroline Novak, in Peoples' hospital with her son, John, 21, critically wounded by her enraged husband, who shot and killed a daughter. Another son, Joseph Novak Jr., is in rear.

GIRL OF 5, TIED IN ATTIC SINCE INFANCY, SAVED

Uniontown, Pa., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Emaciated and crippled, Alice Harris, 5 years old, tonight responded slowly to the gentle treatment of attendants in the county home, where she was taken from a dark attic of an old farmhouse, her home, humane agents charged, since infancy.

The child's only semblance to normal expression was a lusty wail when given a tub bath. "The child doesn't talk and seldom cries," said E. M. Smith of the Western Pennsylvania Humane society. He charged the child, suffering from undernourishment, had been found cramped in a small chair in the attic of the home of David Harris, seventeen miles from here.

Smith brought charges of negligence to a minor against Harris and his daughter Martha. Smith quoted Harris as saying the child was illegitimate and had been kept in the room as a "sort of punishment" for his daughter's "second sin."

STOKOWSKI OFF FOR ITALY UNDER NAME OF ALLEN

New York, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Leopold Stokowski, famed symphony orchestra conductor, sailed today amid attempted secrecy for Naples, Italy, on the Italian liner Conte di Savoia. The noted musician, whose passage was booked in the name of A. R. Allen, arrived at the pier shed a minute or two before the gangplank was raised. Stokowski and Greta Garbo have denied reports linking their names romantically on several occasions. Miss Garbo now is in Sweden for a vacation. Stokowski's second wife, the former Evangeline Johnson, recently obtained a divorce.

Japan Announces Mikado Has Recovered from Cold

GEORGIA RECTOR SHOT TO DEATH WHILE HE IS WRITING SERMON

Brunswick, Ga., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Dr. Charles H. Lee, 68 years old, rector of Christ church at Fort Frederica, was shot to death late tonight while he sat in the study of his home on St. Simon's Island preparing a sermon. County officers were called to the home.

Mrs. Lee said she heard a shot, went to her husband's study to investigate, and found Dr. Lee slumped in his chair. The shooting was done from outside the house. Dr. Lee was shot through the temple and died shortly after a physician arrived.

NEGRO SHOT TO DEATH.

William Smith 29 years old, colored, 3540 Prairie avenue, was shot and killed early today by Fred Williams, also 29 and also colored, in the latter's home at 4638 Prairie avenue, during a quarrel over a chair.

SPENDS THE DAY SHOWING POLICE BURGLED HOMES

Charles Kraushaar, the small town carpenter who turned burglar after he was 50 years old, spent most of yesterday with Winnetka police going to ten towns surrounding the city and pointing out homes he had robbed. They ranged from Lake Bluff on the north to Lombard on the west.

Kraushaar, who was arrested Friday and confessed thirty-five burglaries since last June on the north shore alone, said he knew just how his victims felt.

He said he took a night off last October and went to a movie with his wife. While they were gone burglars entered his home at 1505 Granville avenue and threw things around, stole clothing, and $40 Kraushaar had left in a drawer and which he had stolen himself a few nights before.

Highest Paid Extra

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Hollywood is the home of 16,000 extras, listed with Central Casting bureau for parts in movies, but only 16 of that great number earned more than $2,600 each from the industry last year. The best paid are those listed as dress extras, which means that they own extensive wardrobes. The woman who was the best paid among the extras is Betty Kimbrough, 28 years old, who values her costumes at $5,000. She was born in Milwaukee, is divorced, and has a son 5 years old, and has been here four years. She also adds to her income modeling lingerie. The best paid man extra is Herschell Graham, 34 years old.

Hammer Bandits Leave Victim with Skull Fracture

Beaten by two holdup men, one of whom hit him with a hammer, Russell Woodworth, 22 years old, 148 East Grand avenue, was found suffering from a skull fracture last night in his car in the rear of 153 East Chicago avenue. He was taken to the Henrotin hospital in a serious condition. Woodworth, a parking lot attendant, recognized one of his attackers as a neighborhood roustabout. They robbed him of his week's pay.

WOMAN, 74, DIES AFTER FALL.

Miss Agnes Ellingen, 74 years old, died in St. Bernard's hospital yesterday from injuries suffered two weeks ago in a fall in front of her home at 7641 South Union avenue.

YOUTHS BATTLE OVER DEBT; ONE KNIFED TO DEATH

Virgil Collins Bohannon, 23 years old, 3442 North Halsted street, was held by Town Hall police early today after a poolroom brawl at 3418 North Halsted street in which Steve Ligoratis, also 23, of 660 Roscoe street, was stabbed to death. The stabbing was witnessed by Ligoratis' wife, Dorothy.

Bohannon wears spectacles and without them, he told Sergt Michael Ahern of the Town Hall station, he can hardly see. Ligoratis challenged him to a fist fight over a debt, he said, and he removed his glasses. He was unable to see and was taking a beating. In self-defense he took out a knife and Ligoratis, he asserted, ran into it.

TODAY WE ANNOUNCE A NEW "LOWEST PRICED" CAR

The New HUDSON 112

COMPANION CAR TO THE NEW 1938 HUDSON Terraplane • HUDSON Six • HUDSON Eight

WE ARE naturally pleased at the tremendous amount of interest aroused by advance news of the coming of our new "lowest priced" car.

Let me tell you some of the reasons why Hudson, rather than any other company, is qualified to produce so remarkable a car at so remarkable a price.

For nearly 30 years, this company has been developing the principles of design and methods of construction which enable us to do the thing we are doing today.

Our company has always operated as a self-owned, self-managed organization. We have been able to work out certain basic engineering ideas, some of which at least have proved to be in advance of those used elsewhere.

As you probably know, Hudson engines are generally considered superior to others in smooth operation, fine performance and long life.

Hudson steel bodies are built in our own body plant, instead of being produced elsewhere. This enables us to engineer body and chassis as a single rugged unit, stronger, yet free of excess weight.

We have been able to develop an advanced type of brakes, combining finest hydraulics with a separate mechanical reserve system that takes hold automatically from the same foot pedal if ever needed. This added safety should be particularly important in a lowest priced car.

The result is the car we are announcing to you. A combination of size, room, smooth performance, sturdiness and safety on the one hand and of remarkably low cost of ownership and operation on the other, such as has never before been offered in a "lowest priced" car.

A. E. Barit
President
HUDSON MOTOR CAR COMPANY
DETROIT, MICHIGAN, U. S. A.

THE BIGGEST CAR THE LOWEST PRICE FIELD HAS EVER SEEN! THE SMOOTHEST RUNNING! THE STURDIEST! THE SAFEST! YET ONE OF THE MOST ECONOMICAL!

You have heard about it. You have known it was coming. The new "lowest priced" car that owners of the "other three," by actual test, have proved biggest and best of them all!

This new Hudson 112 has been planned for years . . . but it is timed for today.

In economy of ownership and operation, it measures up to every tradition of real lowest priced cars. But it sets new standards in roominess, in smoothness of operation, in safety, in sturdiness of construction, and in fine car features.

A Big Car . . . and a Big Saving

Here you will find the handling ease of a 112-inch wheelbase combined with an overall length of 187½ inches. And in this beautiful new interior—wider seats and more leg room and elbow room, by far, than in any other lowest priced car.

Here you will find the smoothness of performance for which cars built by Hudson are famous—83 horsepower coupled with remarkable gasoline economy.

Driving a new Hudson 112, you feel secure. It has a body all of steel, of course, with roof of solid steel. Safer stopping than any other lowest priced car. Wide vision that adds still further to safety. Strength and ruggedness in frame, axles, motor, never before offered in this price field. Longer life . . . at lower cost!

Drive . . . Before Buying Any Car

The new Hudson 112 is here today . . . ready for you. It is a worthy companion of the Hudson Terraplane, Hudson Six and Hudson Eight which are such outstanding values in other price groups.

Come and see it . . . drive it. Let it prove everything we've said about it.

112-inch Wheelbase . . . 6 Cylinders . . . 83 Horsepower for 3-passenger Coupe; $740 for 4-passenger Victoria Coupe, the only 4-passenger coupe in the lowest price field with all passengers riding inside; $755 for Sedan—fully equipped, ready to drive, Federal taxes paid—transportation costs and local taxes, if any, extra. Attractively low time payment terms, with new Hudson-C. I. T. Plan.

REGULAR SLATES FILED FOR NO. 1 BALLOT PLACES

County Petitions Few as Independents Delay.

All pretense of chance such as has been witnessed in the past was dropped yesterday in connection with the filing of primary candidates' petitions at County Clerk Flynn's office.

It was known throughout the county that there was an arrangement by which the full slate indorsed by the Republican county central committee would be assigned first places in that party column, and it has long been a practice of Democratic county clerks to take all first places for candidates on the regular county ticket. The whole business this time was much simplified by each party organization's filing its complete list on one petition.

Independents Hold Off.

The result was that the filing of petitions set an all time low record. Ambitious independents knew they had no chance to gain any advantage by filing early and if there are any substantial number of them they held off until later. They have until Feb. 21 to file.

The list of first day filings announced by County Clerk Flynn, the names of the incumbents being in black face type and the asterisks indicating the slates filed by the regular Democratic and Republican organizations, follows:

COLLEGE CHIEF'S AGITATOR PICKED FOR SCHOLARSHIP

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special]—Leon Goodelman, 20 years old, a senior who is working his way through New college, Columbia university, by running an egg business, was chosen yesterday by the student council as the foremost political agitator in the school. He will therefore become the first winner of the $200 scholarship established by the college for political activity.

An investigation of Goodelman's activities in the National Student league, the Columbia Peace council, the Teachers' Union auxiliary, and the C. I. O. resulted in the student council's decision that he is unrivalled as a radical agitator, despite his capitalistic egg business.

The council picked Zane Meckler, 17 years old, a freshman, who has been agitating assiduously since he entered college six months ago, as the most promising of the younger agitators. To inspire him to bigger and better revolts, Dr. Thomas Alexander, chairman of the college, will give him the $50 scholarship for the younger student showing most promise.

Moving Day Awaited

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Caretakers and servants at the Chateau de la Maye, Mme. Paul Dupuy's home near Versailles, are busy these days preparing the large house and its extensive grounds for the duke and duchess of Windsor. The Windsors have leased the estate and, although it is not known definitely when they will take it over, it already has attracted much attention from curious sightseers. On the grounds are tennis courts, a miniature golf course, and a swimming pool. At the duke's direction, furniture, plate, and linen which he left behind at his Fort Belvedere residence in England after his abdication as King Edward VIII., are being sent to the chateau. Mme. Dupuy, who was born in Chicago, is the widow of Senator Paul Dupuy.

EFFORTS TO PUT SNEED IN SENATE RACE DISCLOSED

Fight in G. O. P. Committee Session Predicted.

BY PERCY WOOD.

High pressure methods of promoting candidacy of William J. Sneed, United Mine Workers official, for the United States senate were described last night in reports which reached the Republican county headquarters in the Hotel La Salle.

For the time being the disclosures shoved into the background the heated struggle for the Democratic senatorial nomination and led to forecasts of a spirited session when the executive committee of the Republican County Chairmen's association meets in Urbana tomorrow. The committee has been authorized to recommend endorsements of candidates and Sneed's friends were said to be working hard to obtain official approval for him.

Backed by Federation Head.

Although the United Mine Workers is the keystone union of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, Sneed's legislative record in the state senate, where he served two terms, was praised last night by Reuben G. Soderstrom of Streator, president of the State Federation of Labor, which is a part of the American Federation of Labor.

At the end of Sneed's first term in the senate in 1924 the Legislative Voters' league reported that he was a regular follower of Gov. Len Small and gave few indications of possessing legislative ability.

In 1928 the league said that Sneed had apparently subordinated other matters to labor measures, sometimes to the detriment of his record.

Candidates Slow to File.

Yesterday, the first day for filing, found few aspirants for state office presenting their petitions to Secretary of State Hughes in Springfield.

Only one candidate for senator and one for treasurer sent petitions to Hughes. They were Congressman Scott W. Lucas of Havana for senator and Louie E. Lewis of Christopher for treasurer, the entries backed by Gov. Henry Horner.

Senator William H. Dieterich of Beardstown, against whom Lucas will be pitted, was in Springfield yesterday but did not file his petition. A third entrant in the race is expected next week. He is United States Attorney Michael L. Igoe of Chicago, whose backers look for the support of the Nash-Kelly organization.

The petition of John A. Wieland, state superintendent of public instruction, a Democrat, was also filed.

Giles Seeks Clerkship.

Adam F. Bloch, Democratic clerk of the Supreme court, has been indorsed by the Horner forces, but did not file yesterday. The only Republican to seek Bloch's post was Sanford F. Giles, 1116 Washington boulevard, Oak Park, who is a leader in young Republican activities in Cook county.

Candidates in Chicagoland Counties

Candidates for county offices in the five counties surrounding Cook were free to file their petitions yesterday, but Democrats in three of the counties held back—striving for harmony slates, according to reports. In Lake, McHenry and Kane counties only Republicans filed, but almost complete tickets were put in the race in Will and Du Page counties.

The candidates who filed yesterday, with names in blackface type designating an incumbent, are as follows:

WEST, ICKES AID, MAY BE NAMED U. S. CONTROLER

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The recent raid of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes upon the office force of his undersecretary, Charles West, may result in West being transferred to the higher salaried post of controler of the currency, according to reports today.

This possibility was discussed after officials had reported that President Roosevelt was trying to bring peace in his governmental family by transferring West.

Last week Ickes summarily dismantled West's office force in the latter's absence from Washington. Other interior department officials said Ickes disliked West's long absences from his office and transferred his civil service employés back to the general land office "so they would have something to do."

If appointed West would succeed J. F. T. O'Connor, who resigned to run for governor of California. The controler's salary is $15,000 a year.

Moving Forward

Marshall Field & Company presents here each day observations and opinions intended to be of interest and value to those it seeks to serve.

SALUTE!

By CALEB

EVERY once in a while as the Constitution Sesquicentennial celebration rolls forward, we feel inclined to salute the fifty-five early American fathers, who, in secret conclave, out of bitter debate, arduous labor, fervent prayer, an intense public spirit, and wise compromise, created what is today the oldest prevailing written constitution on earth.

Particularly interesting is that element of compromise which again and again saved the Constitutional Convention from collapse—compromise on how the president would be elected and on the nature of his office—compromise on representation on the basis of population—compromise between central and distributed authority.

Among the representatives of the thirteen colonies were radically opposed interests. But because the men present had power to reason, reason prevailed. Under conditions of public debate, national radio talks, newspaper clamor, and emotional mass appeals, our Constitution could never have been born.

The public—in small groups—has often been mulcted by slick stock salesmen, patent medicine vendors, and "Yellow Kids." Nowadays, politicians and demagogs who know the same powers and principles of persuasion may, over the air, emotionally sway vast throngs of voters.

The student of psychology can analyze a carefully formulated radio speech pleading for dimes for a cosmetic sample, side by side with a political broadcast. And in each he can underline strangely similar corkscrew thinking, promises and baits, exaggerated benefits, appeal to prejudice, and fallacious proofs.

The only difference is that the speakers have played for different stakes.

Nowadays instead of the public interest being so directly served by men amenable to reason, we are to some extent indirectly "represented" by highly audible and well financed cliques and groups, which, if they are well enough financed and vocalized, procure one-sided legislation. Frequently it is untempered by sheer and deliberate reason in the public's interest.

Our form of government has weathered civil war, a world war, and vicious depressions. Now it must weather frontal attacks engendered by emotion. It must weather group pressures. It must weather attacks of creatures of its creation who under it have obliquely acquired vast levers and fulcrums to move it from its 150-year foundation.

A SAILOR'S LIFE'S THE LIFE IN CITY RELIEF SHELTER

Chicago Not Any Old Port; It's Tops.

tigator lacked. Denied a book, and told that it would be necessary for the application to be sent to Washington, the reporter conceived another plan.

Next day he applied at the door of the Ashland avenue shelter in quest of a mythical Augie Bell of Green Bay. He hoped that by now the attendants would have forgotten THE TRIBUNE accounts of how "Omaha Eddie" Brennan, Joe Boyle of Buffalo and "Sandusky Sam" Krug had crashed the relief gates here.

In front of the shelter the reporter watched four or five policemen drag an obviously intoxicated, Negro from the building to a patrol wagon after a spirited but brief struggle. The spectacle did not attract wide attention among the reliefers. The attendant who stopped the investigator at the door had never heard of Augie Bell. He declined to let the visitor in to look.

"I gotta be careful," he grinned, winking to another linen coated employé. "You might be a TRIBUNE reporter." The investigator-reporter nodded his understanding. Soon afterward he whispered urgent words in the doorman's ear.

"Well, go ahead," the attendant said. "Third door to the left. But make it snappy."

Soon Lost in Crowd.

The visitor, inconspicuous in his tattered costume, lost himself among the shuffling figures that filled the dark, ill-smelling corridor.

He inquired about Augie Bell of a tattooed reliefer whom he correctly surmised to be a seaman. Mike didn't know Bell, but he ushered the visitor up to the seamen's quarters on the third floor.

These quarters consist of five former classrooms, each containing about twenty-five beds. The visitor was told that of the 800 men who ate and slept in the shelter 112 occupied the seamen's portion.

The reporter was led into a room where a half dozen men lounged about. Two were stretched on their beds, their shoes and outer clothing resting on newspapers spread on the floor under the steel cots. Others sat on their beds. Still others were reading magazines.

None Remember Bell.

None of the men remembered Bell. The visitor was advised, however, to watch for him in the supper line, which formed at 5 p. m. Mike, who fortunately had nothing to do, remained the visitor's informative companion.

"We got this place about the middle of December," Mike said. "We just kept on agitating for it. We told Leo Lyons [Leo M. Lyons, Chicago relief administrator] that we got laid off when shipping closed, and so it wasn't our fault that we were out of jobs. We reminded him the shipping service would expect us to be in good health when the shipping season opened again, so we shouldn't be thrown in with the rifraf."

Mike explained also that the CRA gave out two street car tokens each day—14 a week—to seamen alone.

"That's so we can get to and from work," he explained.

On WPA Projects.

The "work" to which he referred was WPA employment, in which most of the seamen are now engaged. They are given jobs in the order of their seniority as shown in their Copeland books.

"Before we got work," Mike said, "the street car tokens were given so we could get to the N. M. U. hall at 92d and Baltimore and back, to transact union business."

When a seaman's WPA pay reaches the maximum of $27.50 a pay day [every two weeks] he must leave the shelter and shift for himself, the investigator was told. If he loses his job he goes back on relief.

The seamen have numerous other privileges not accorded other reliefers in the same building. They come and go at will, whereas others must observe regular hours. They are permitted in their dormitories at all times. Regular reliefers must leave after breakfast and cannot return before supper. Seamen have the same bed night after night, an exception to the rule that beds are reassigned daily.

Don't Have to Bathe.

Because seamen are naturally clean, as Mike explained it, they are not compelled to take baths, and their quarters are not regularly fumigated.

Downstairs in the washroom, Mike introduced Willie to the investigating reporter. Over in a corner two men swigged from a bottle of "derail" and hurriedly drank chasers directly from the faucet.

"They don't mind drinking here if you don't get tough," Willie said. "Us seamen they don't bother at all. If a seaman acts up the committee takes care of him. If he don't behave we get rid of him."

The "committee" is a representative seaman's group that has performed such functions as getting mirrors for the bathrooms, getting the bed linen changed oftener, and obtaining an unlimited supply of fresh towels. The committee takes its complaints direct to Lyons, the men said.

In a discussion of unionism, Willie identified himself as an old "wobblie," the nickname for a member of the Industrial Workers of the World, early exponents of the industrial as against the crafts form of unionism.

"Wobblies Born Too Soon."

"What was the I. W. W. but the C. I. O.?" Willie asked rhetorically. "The wobblies were just born thirty years too soon."

The seeker of Augie Bell scanned the supper line in vain for his old friend. He did see, however, things that made him glad that he wasn't eating there. These included the man with cold sores serving vegetables and the potato disher who wiped his nose back-handed at intervals.

Snores echoed lustily through the old school building's corridors as Mike followed his new friend to the door.

GEN. JAY L. BENEDICT TAKES COMMAND OF MILITARY ACADEMY

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Brig. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, new superintendent of the United States Military academy, assumed command here today, succeeding Maj. Gen. William D. Connor, who is now on leave awaiting retirement for age [64 years old] on Feb. 28. The new superintendent is the thirty-seventh officer to assume direction of the military academy, and one of the youngest. Promoted to the grade of brigadier general last Jan. 1, Gen. Benedict was 55 years old last April.

Gen. J. L. Benedict.

Gen. Benedict began his military career as an enlisted man in the National Guard in 1898. He was born in Hastings, Neb., on April 14, 1882, and entered the military academy on June 19, 1900. Upon his graduation he was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry.

After service in the Philippines and on the west coast, until 1908, he was appointed an instructor at West Point, remaining here until 1912. After more service on the west coast he was again an instructor, from July, 1916, to August, 1917, when he was relieved for service with troops and promoted to a major.

the territory now covered by sound radio. The cables cost a dollar a foot and carry the 3,500,000 cycles per second for television's channel in contrast to the wires which carry the 7,500 cycles for radio sound. Experimentation is also going forward on radio relay or a system of "repeater" stations at intervals to boost the television program along.

3. The time element enters in as a hurdle for television to leap because manufacturers have not yet agreed on standards for transmitters and receiving sets. Uniformity must be reached or all will be confusion, for television, it must be remembered, sends out as many impulses per second as the stock ticker transmits in four busy working days. The standards finally agreed upon are subject to the approval of the federal communications commission, which has the authority to allocate television wave lengths for commercial broadcasting.

Rural Districts Must Wait.

4. When television does emerge some three years hence, its programs will be confined to such leading centers as Chicago, New York, and possibly Los Angeles because of its concentration of talent in the nearby movies. Rural districts may have to wait many years for television while the coaxial cable or radio relay system is being extended.

5. Hollywood is biting its nails over television, fearing that this Frankenstein may some day swallow up the movie industry. R. C. A. officials deny this, averring that television programs never can compete with the costly, well done moving pictures, and that the new art will actually stimulate interest in productions emanating from the film capital.

6. New types of programs, new techniques of staging and makeup must be developed. Some idea of the huge volume of talent which will be required may be gained in the fact that television working on the same schedule as radio could use up Hollywood's entire yearly output of pictures within two and a half weeks.

England Jumps In Too Soon.

The television experts in this country are convinced that their policy of looking before leaping is bearing fruit. England jumped in and got her feet wet. Now the British Broadcasting company is having tough sledding on programs and had to cut the television time down sharply within the last half year. In England, television's frontier, is a twenty-five mile radius about London and the programs originate from atop Alexander palace. Only 2,000 receiving sets have been purchased, an index to the public demand.

Germany is using television to further Nazi propaganda and is throwing up huge screens so that the personality of Chancellor Hitler and other leaders may be transmitted to overflow crowds. France possesses an excellent transmitter in Eifel tower, which was used during the Paris international exposition. Russia is experimenting.

On Empire State Building.

In the United States the R. C. A. has perched its television transmitter nearly 1,300 feet above the earth's surface atop the Empire State building in New York, the tallest structure in the country. The "horizon range" from this transmitter extends out about thirty miles into Long Island, into Westchester county in upstate New York or across the Hudson river into the Jersey flats.

R. C. A. has not sold any television sets, but has placed receiving apparatus in the hands of about 100 of its engineers and experts. All are television enthusiasts and contribute, according to Gen. Harbord, a great deal of valuable data on variations in reception due to topography, distance and climate.

FIGURES REFUTE CHARGE ILLINOIS IS CRIME RIDDEN

A decrease in homicides in Illinois and in Chicago during the last four years was disclosed yesterday in figures compiled by the division of vital statistics of the state department of health. The decrease is attributed to the repeal of prohibition in 1933 and the intensive anti-crime campaign by law enforcement agencies.

Homicides in the state and in the city for the last eleven years follow:

Year—	Illinois.	City of Chicago.
1927	750	436
1928	790	504
1929	674	402
1930	805	482
1931	801	494
1932	749	451
1933	836	512
1934	759	488
1935	545	353
1936	501	305
1937 [first 11 months]	431	276

These figures include murders, manslaughter, and infanticide.

U. S. MAY STATION 15 NAVAL PLANES ON ISLE OF GUAM

HONOLULU, T. H., Feb. 5.—(AP)—American naval forces in the western Pacific are to be strengthened by the transfer of fifteen naval flying boats to Guam "before June," it was reported today.

Flyers of squadron VP-18, stationed at the Pearl Harbor fleet air base, were said to be expecting orders directing them to proceed to Guam for a one year tour of duty.

This would be the first assignment of a large group of planes to a base which will be the United States' most westerly outpost after full independence is granted the Philippines.

BILL TO SET UP WAR DICTATOR ON HOUSE SLATE

Vast New Powers Lodged in President.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Drastic and far-reaching legislation creating a dictatorship in time of war under the guise of prevention of profiteering will be brought before the house next week in pursuance of recommendations by President Roosevelt in his recent national defense message.

Representative Andrew J. May [D., Ky.], chairman of the house committee on military affairs, said today he will ask the rules committee to grant a special rule for passage of the Hill bill to draft business and agriculture in time of war to empower the President to check the rise of prices and to confiscate war profits. This bill, sponsored by the American Legion and indorsed by the war department, received a unanimously favorable report from the military affairs committee.

Rate Revision Requested.

The Connally bill, an even more drastic measure, has been favorably reported to the senate by its finance committee. Because, however, of the widespread view that the proposed surtaxes on incomes, ranging from 6 per cent on the first $1,000 to 80 per cent on $50,000 or more, are too drastic Senator Tom Connally [D., Tex.], author of the measure, said he would ask the joint committee on internal revenue taxation to revise the rates downward.

The Hill bill authorizes the President upon a declaration of war to proclaim it unlawful "to buy, sell, lease, or otherwise contract for any article, service, or right or interest in property, enumerated in such proclamation or proclamations, at a higher rate, rent, price, commission, compensation or reward than was in effect at a date or dates determined and set forth in such proclamation or proclamations." Thereafter the President is empowered to adjust such maximum prices and rates.

Provides Widespread Power.

The President would become the dictator not only of prices but of the key industries and services of the country under a provision authorizing him to proclaim from time to time "the material resources, industrial organizations, public services, and security or commodity exchanges over which government control, including requisitioning materials for use or resale by the government, shall then be necessary." Thereupon the President would assume such control "to the extent determined and publicly proclaimed by him to be necessary."

Drafting of manufacturers is provided for, the President being authorized to require "the registration of any or all individuals engaged in the management or control of any industrial establishment designated by him." Individuals so registered could be required "to enter into the service of the government as civilians."

The President would be empowered to extend his dictatorship to whatever "class of public service, real and personal property or rights or interests therein" he might designate and to require the licensing of "owners, dealers, exporters, importers, manufacturers or producers of any article or commodity." Thereafter it would be unlawful for any such classes to operate without a license.

Exception Made for Press.

Under this and other provisions the President could make himself the absolute autocrat of agriculture, industry, commerce, transportation — in fact, all the gainful activities of the people. In deference to the constitutional guarantee of a free press, however, "the publication or distribution of newspapers, periodicals, or books" is exempted from the licensing provision.

The President would be authorized to establish priority of production or transportation or transmission of any commodity or service.

Power also would be conferred on the President to set up any boards, commissions, or other agencies and to redistribute temporarily the functions, funds, and personnel of existing agencies in such manner as he might deem necessary to the conduct of the war.

For violation of the act a fine not exceeding $100,000 or imprisonment not exceeding one year or both are provided.

Confiscate Excess Profits.

The Hill bill proposes to confiscate by drastic taxation all profits in time of war in excess of a normal return to capital and labor. The provisions therefor follow:

"[A]. During any war in which the United States is engaged there shall be in effect a system of taxation, which, without preventing a fair normal return to labor, management, and invested capital, such return to be fixed by congress, shall absorb all surplus profits above such return.

"[B]. Whenever congress shall declare war, the secretary of the treasury shall within thirty days thereafter recommend to the congress a plan of taxation [retroactive or otherwise] making effective the provisions of subsection [A].

"[C]. To this end the secretary of the treasury is hereby authorized and directed upon the enactment of this act to cause a continuing study to be made from year to year, with such investigations and accumulation of data as may be necessary which would be the basis in formulating a plan of taxation as outlined by subsection [A] to be transmitted to the congress upon a declaration of war."

The bill has been criticized on the ground that it clothes the President with greater power to make and break business enterprise than should be entrusted to any man, on the ground that the regulation of prices is impracticable and on the ground that the confiscation of war profits would stifle incentives essential to successful conduct of a war.

EDUCATION FOR DEPENDENCE.

There are upward of 10 million adults in this country who today are numbered among the unemployed and the partially unemployed. Some few of them never went to school. Some went to school in foreign countries. Some went to school for only a few terms. But most of them, it can safely be assumed, are products of the American educational system and had at least the minimum of schooling required under the compulsory education laws of the various states. No doubt hundreds of thousands on the relief rolls are typical products of the schools.

The existence of so large a body of adults who are out of work or on relief reflects no credit upon the quality of our schools. Something is wrong somewhere. In the first years of the republic nine-tenths of the population lived on the farm. At that time a boy who for one reason or another was not adapted to farm life no doubt had a difficult task finding a useful place for himself in society. Nowadays there are thousands of occupations calling for various kinds and degrees of skill, character, and intelligence. It ought to be correspondingly easier for the graduate of the schools to find work adapted to his peculiar talents.

Evidently it isn't. Evidently the preparation of the children in the schools is lacking in some elements of mental, moral or physical training essential to economic self-dependence.

Many educators deny they bear any of the responsibility for this state of things. While taking a share of the credit for every improvement in American life since the introduction of free, compulsory education they blame the economic system, the political organization of the country or something else for the fact that a large proportion of their students do not support themselves. Not a few teachers close their minds to the fact that many children, on leaving school, believe that economic dependence is not discreditable. They are not ashamed to live in idleness at the expense of their parents or the taxpayers.

Educators cannot escape their share of responsibility for the prevalence of this attitude. In some instances the children may actually have been taught to think of themselves and their responsibilities in this fashion. In others the teachers have not been at pains to emphasize the duty of economic independence. One influential school of educators, for example, has been insisting for the better part of a generation that one of the most important functions of public education is to train students for the enjoyment of leisure. The assumption seems to be that any one can find and hold a job without much preparation but training is required for the practice of hobbies. This is nonsense of a dangerous kind. The consequences confront us today and they are profoundly subversive of the nation's welfare.

EATING TRANQUILLY.

Dr. Cutter—mind him if you'd keep well—says tranquillity should be served with meals. Functional dyspepsia may come from any one of a number of minor emotional upsets, as of unrequited love, remorse at having pushed Cecilia, aged 12, down stairs, or recollection of an after dinner speech, your own, not the other fellow's. We're glad to have excellent medical authority for it that something happens to that other fellow after he gets home.

Anger and food cannot be swallowed together. It is still worse if the anger is coming up as the food is going down. Sometimes you would be well advised not to mix the morning paper and the breakfast egg. The egg might get the better of an important pronouncement, if it should be a tough egg, and still the field of conflict might be one to be avoided if possible.

The cow is a most tranquil feeder and it will be observed that a tranquilly feeding cow does not converse. The herd instinct may keep a number of cows together, but the fact of grazing in the same corner of the pasture does not impose any social obligations. The pig is a noisy feeder, but nothing is proved there because after all who wants to be—that is, after all a pig is what he is.

The fine art of eating is the art of eating alone. A talented chef would be justified in refusing to cook for a person who brought in as a dinner companion a too beautiful or too witty woman or for a person who had any one to whom to talk and looked as if he had a great deal to talk about. A knowledgeful but reticent waiter is the only person who should be permitted near any one undertaking a perfect dinner.

Family dinners are unavoidable in most households. Some sacrifices must be made for domesticity, which is worth many, but dining out and having guests for dinner are habits derived from days of precarious travel when there were no hotels. Isaac of York, much as he disliked it, had to ask the hospitality of Cedric the Saxon. The survival of the dinner guest represents the impoverishment of our social talent. The attempt is to make what is regarded as a gross necessity esthetic by adding a charm to it however incompatible. Neither eating nor talking is the better for the other. Man, like other carnivorous animals, ought to drag his kill into a thicket and eat alone.

THE PLANNED SOCIETY OF MUHAMMAD IBN TUGHLUK.

The business of learning from history that we learn nothing from history is really an art for its own sake. A business requires a profit, an art can be its own reward. People who prowl the past to find modern instances in ancient episodes do so for their own pleasure and not conceivably for the edification of themselves or any one else.

With these preliminary observations, a few souvenirs can be picked from the reign of Sultan Muhammad Ibn Tughluk, Moslem ruler of the empire of India whose reign began in 1325 after a carefully contrived accident in which the roof of a pavilion fell upon his father, Tughluk, on his return in triumph from an expedition to Bengal, had cleared the way for the succession.

Muhammad was a ruler whose time was divided roughly into two interlocking periods, in one of which he thought intensely about himself and in the other intensely about his people, who when he thought about himself suffered only a little less acutely than when he thought about them. Drouth, war, and taxes bore heavily on everybody, and it is related that to replenish his treasury the sultan had recourse to a currency reform. He had undoubtedly heard of the paper currency of Kublai Khan in China and of the parchment currency in Persia.

Scholars say that he did not think he could make base metals precious by edict, but that he did have an idea of managed currency. He issued brass and copper tokens to pass for silver coin of 140 grains. Unfortunately for him, as it proved, and not for his people, as you would imagine, any moderately skilled artisan could turn out a copper token passing for 140 grains of silver and it could not be told from the product of Muhammad's mints. Within three years the country was flooded with counterfeits and Muhammad, seeing that something had gone wrong, called all the tokens in for redemption.

As the historians admiringly concede, he boldly faced the situation and redeemed them all, good and bad, an odd fellow with a curious idea of his responsibility. "The loss must have been enormous and the mountains of base metal which arose at the treasuries were to be seen a century later." In older days mistakes left monuments, but to no avail.

Muhammad as an imperial adventurer in reform was a thoroughgoing resettlement man. His first important shift of the population was admittedly prompted by selfish motives. His capital at Delhi was too close to the Mongol border and the raids which he had to stop came too near his walls. He moved to the more central location of Deogir and took the populace with him, uprooting the people to their great distress and allowing Delhi to fall into a state of desolation. Eight years later he decided to move back and told the populace it could return.

Another resettlement of the Delhi people was, as he conceived, in their interest. They were starving, although in his province of Oudh there was an abundance of grain which he could not transport because of the disturbed condition of the intervening country. If he could not move the grain, he could move the people, who were again uprooted and resettled on the Ganges where grain marts could be opened and kept supplied. For a time this worked.

Then drouth, assisted by Muhammad's social planning, brought a misery which was unique even in India. "Theorist as he was," we are told, "he had for some time been pondering a code of regulations to restore prosperity to the country and these were immediately issued." In accordance with his plan, he divided the empire into areas of 8,100 square miles, with orders that every span should be cultivated. He ordained a fixed rotation of crops which displayed a complete ignorance of the principles of agriculture. Every span was to be put into crops, whether it was forest, desert, or rocks, and agents, who happened to be called undertakers, were appointed to see that the subsidies he granted transformed the land into a producing garden.

This, again, was a three year plan of which within that time about one-thousandth part was put into execution. The agents, being shrewd minor politicians, saw at the start that something was bound to be wrong and put the subsidies into their own pockets. They knew that if Muhammad caught them they would be skinned alive, not rhetorically, but if he died before he could find them out they at least would make something out of his planned society. History is forced to record that the rascals guessed right.

Muhammad was a man of wit who, we are told, when he was not raising taxes, flaying his enemies and making war to stop wars, delighted to talk with his wise men.

Editorial of the Day

REFRESHING CHANGE.

[Baltimore Sun.]

We read a great deal about successful cinema actresses, and every now and then we see one in the flesh. But at the moment Eleanor Powell is the only Hollywood celebrity we can recall who would make the remark Eleanor made when the populace was giving her a rush at the Roosevelt birthday ball. Eleanor said: "I hope this doesn't make me conceited. After all, I'm just one of the mob who got a lucky break."

As a rule queens of the movies are touted as artists with, of course, a great deal in common with their dear public: Love of children, flowers, and a good book, and a longing to get into a big checked apron and tear off a batch of cookies or a meat pie. But "one of the mob" is a phrase not ordinarily used by the stars to describe themselves. And "a lucky break" is worse. Of course, it isn't the whole story of Eleanor Powell, but we admire her modesty—and originality—in using it. Hollywood has enough self-conscious grand duchesses already.

EUROPE'S NEXT BATTLEFIELD?

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THIRD ARTICLE.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia.—Czechs have long memories, and, like most Europeans, they look back a good deal. They skip the three blank centuries of Hapsburg oppression, with its harsh beginnings in the Jesuit counter-reformation, which turned most of the Czechs into Catholics and the rest into free-thinkers, and gave Prague a baroque style like the Viennese, only better.

Prague is the seat of their historical associations. Their monuments are here. Too many to enumerate, but the stones tell the story and they give the key to some important national reflexes.

At the heart of everything is the Staromestske Namesti [Old Town square]. It commemorates a historical nightmare, among brighter memories. Here in the center of what was once a market place, flanked by two jewels of Czech Gothic architecture, the old town hall and the Tyn church, twenty-seven noblemen and burghers were beheaded after the collapse of the Czech rebellion in the battle of the White mountain in 1620.

That date was the end of Bohemia's independence and the beginning of the Babylonian captivity of the Czech people under Austria. The spot where the rebels died under the ax is marked by stones and their names are carved on the wall of the town hall tower.

In the wall of the same tower is buried a finger from the battlefields on which the Czechoslovak legions fought against Austria during the world war.

This remarkable symbolization of the human sacrifices through which the Bohemian kingdom was resurrected in the augmented form of the Czechoslovak republic is the polar opposite to the former monument. You do not need to know anything about Czechoslovakia to realize that this square is the capital of Czech national sentiment.

It is interesting, therefore, to see what other monuments the Czech people have seen fit to associate with these two. There is one other monument in the square. An impassioned and slightly incoherent but impressive monument to Jan Huss.

Associations stream out from the name Huss in two directions. A Protestant before Protestantism, an apostle of intellectual liberty who died at the stake for his convictions, one of the spiritual fathers of democracy, a precurser in the evolution of our civilization, first of a series the Czech people have produced. Others in this series were King George of Podebrady, who made a practical effort to found a league of nations in the 15th century; Comenius, a sort of Roger Bacon in pedagogics and sociology [and disciple of Huss]; finally Masaryk, one of the mountain peaks of the human race in our times, a modern Moses who lived to see his promised land.

Other associations: The Hussite revolt [another time when Czechoslovakia was an international problem], Zizka, the blind, that incredible general, a nation of peasants armed with flails defeating the flower of European chivalry, marauding to the shores of the Baltic, putting whole armies to flight merely with the din of their battle hymns.

No Czech will ever forget the Hussite epic. Even Masaryk, who deprecated Zizka's excessive readiness to swing the battle ax, couldn't resist saying to Emil Ludwig:

"I wish you could hear our Hussite Chorale sung in unison by one of our armies. Then you would understand why the leaders of the crusade organized in Germany ran away when they heard that song."

All peoples have their monuments and their national glories. What is interesting here is the intimate way that the Czechs mingle, in their minds, military glories of bygone centuries, the aureole of great leaders of thought, and the revolutionary tradition of resistance to an alien political and economic authority.

All Czechs are passionate nationalists. Their nationalism is not aggressive or domineering. It is tolerant of other national traditions. But it is fiercely, almost morbidly, jealous of its own. You could hardly expect anything else under the circumstances.

This peculiar Czech nationalism is one of the keys. The German charge of "persecution" is disingenuous, you soon discover. But Czech national feeling has a lot to do with the international problem. For centuries Czech nationalism was essentially defiance of Austria. Today Czechoslovakia is free, but something of the old feeling toward Austria still attaches, illogically but inevitably deflected toward the German citizens living in the republic and to their natural protector, the Third Reich of Adolf Hitler.

A lighter note: Dr. Faust, it seems, was one of Prague's distinguished citizens. They show you the house where he allegedly lived before he went up the flue and was confiscated by the Germans, one national tradition that is shared with Germany. Other famous names connected with Prague by residence or nationality: Mozart, The Golem, Jeritza, and Fred Astaire. This gives one some idea of the complexity of the problem.

One striking feature of the Czech landscape, at least if you ride toward the German frontier along any of the highways radiating from Prague, is a khaki clad soldier with bayoneted rifle, inexplicably but obviously on sentry duty in the middle of nowhere.

You don't see the reason and you are not supposed to. The reasons are underground. If you look closely you may occasionally detect a suspicious bump or mound on the crest of a hill overlooking the road, but that is all.

Czechoslovakia is one of the most highly fortified countries in the world. It has a Maginot defense line of its own, only better than the French one because more modern, the Czechs say. The line runs all along the mountainous frontier with Germany. The fortifications are not always along the crests of the mountains, some of which are in German hands, but they are never very far from the border.

Then well behind that is a second line of fortified or prepared positions upon which the whole army can fall back when the pressure on the border defenses becomes too great. An elaborate system of flanking defenses covers the principal strategic highways and railways as well.

The sentry you see standing there forlornly in the middle of the wintry landscape is to scare spies away from one of the links in this strategic chain. Espionitis is endemic in Czechoslovakia in a particularly virulent form—naturally spyphobia goes with the fortress mentality, also with split nationalities, and never forget that Czechoslovakia with its six races is not a melting pot but an ambiguous compromise between an empire and a federation of free peoples.

The results are what you would expect. Police and the military have extraordinary powers as in wartime in other countries, and the democratic principles upon which justice is based in the Czechoslovak state do not apply in military cases. Death sentences are sometimes given for espionage, also unusual in peacetime in a democratic country. Spy suspects may be arrested without tangible evidence and held incommunicado for months, to be released finally without explanation or reparation, or to be sentenced behind closed doors to ten or twenty years in prison.

HOW EAR TROUBLE COMES.

SOME day we will find a way to clamp the lid on nose and throat infections—colds. Then—if we are obliged to harbor them—their freedom will be definitely restricted. As it is now, we have no sure way of curbing the meanderings of bacteria. Presumably, these tiny bits of living protoplasm are not endowed with reasoning powers. Nevertheless, they appear to be inveterate travelers and are likely to find their way into locations from which it may not be easy to dislodge them.

As most of us know, a duct—called the Eustachian tube—leads from each side of the throat into the middle ear. It is so placed in order that the air pressure on the inside of the eardrum shall be equal to that on the outside. This enables us to accommodate ourselves to changing atmospheric conditions without obliging the drum to bulge inward or outward. If the pressure is the same on both sides it will remain at its correctly adjusted slant.

But because of this channel, bacteria from the throat can reach this ear space. In the presence of trouble, we notice, first of all, that the tube becomes inflamed—so much so, in fact, that it may swell shut. This interferes with hearing and is a source of much annoyance as sufferers observe a stuffy, dull sensation. "Thick of hearing" is a common saying.

But just because bacteria find lodgment in this area does not mean that pus will form in every case and break through the drum. In some instances, although there may be a slight temperature, the inflammation will subside and because the resistance is at a very high level the white cells of the blood may be able to destroy and thus absorb the microbes.

Recently a new remedy has come to the fore—sulfanilamide—which if used in proper doses and at the right time will reduce the number of ear abscesses, some of which may involve the mastoid cells with menacing possibilities. Unfortunately, this drug will attack only a limited number of organisms and unless the cause is the streptococcus or the pneumococcus, it may have but little effect. In about half the cases, however, those two bugs will be found responsible.

We should watch, therefore, not only children but adults as well—those who complain of "stuffed ears"—to make certain that bacterial inflammation within the Eustachian tubes shall not proceed to the "pus pocket" stage. Authorities recommend the application either of heat or cold to the region. In the opinion of many, however, heat is preferable. It is more soothing, there is no risk of chill, and the increased circulation which follows its use brings in millions of leucocytes to fight a dangerous foe.

In some cases it will be necessary to open the drum to permit the escape of pus. It is far safer to have this performed by a skilled physician than to allow the structure to rupture of its own accord. A drop or two of laudanum [tincture of opium] may be placed on a bit of cotton and thrust gently into the ear canal, whereupon enough absorption will occur to bring relief from local pain. Should the drum be opened, the outside passage must be cleaned frequently and thoroughly. The average mother will have little difficulty in learning how to irrigate the channel, and a solution of salt in boiled water is helpful. We depend upon free drainage to avoid extension of the infection into the mastoid region.

Why are these ear colds important? Because hearing is at stake and a long illness fraught with considerable hazard may face the patient if the mastoid bone requires opening.

Good throat hygiene is essential if we expect to avoid ear affection. This means caution in blowing the nose as pressure thus exerted may drive foul material up the Eustachian tubes.

NOSE BUMPED.

L. G. writes: A few months ago I received a blow on the nose during a game. There seems to be a slight bump there now. Is there any way besides surgery in which this can be removed?

REPLY.

The nasal bones may have been injured. Have an X-ray taken for diagnosis. Surgery may be required if a true deformity is present. There is no other method quite so effective.

ASTIGMATISM.

J. L. writes: Is astigmatism serious? Can it be overcome by the use of glasses?

REPLY.

Astigmatism is an error of refraction due to the fact that the cornea is curved unequally. The condition is remedied by means of suitable spectacles.

CHOKING WITH ANGER.

B. S. writes:

1. What causes a person to choke up and not be able to speak when quarreling or when in distress?

2. When yawning, what causes a strain in the throat that is similar to choking?

REPLY.

1. Anger has a paralyzing effect on speech, breathing is increased, the heart beats faster, and self-control may be lost. In fact, all bodily functions are impaired. You have heard the phrase, "He choked with anger."

2. The muscle stretching caused by the normal act of yawning does not produce a choking sensation in the throat unless the yawn is greatly exaggerated. You can yawn satisfactorily even with the mouth closed.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problem a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

WAGE ASSIGNMENT.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought some furniture in September, 1926, and signed a wage assignment at that time. I have signed nothing since that time. After some time I lost my job and could not make the payments, but made smaller ones. Later I discontinued payments entirely. The last one I made was some time in 1930. In September, 1930, the furniture was repossessed, at which time I got no receipt for same. I know I am liable for the deficiency, but [1] how long after repossession can they wait to force payment?

2. I have changed positions three times, but they claim wage assignment is still good. Is it?

3. What is the statute of limitations on such a deal?

4. If I signed a blank wage assignment and they later filled it out for my present job, is that legal? T. L.

1. The Illinois limitation period for suit on a written instrument is ten years from the time of the cause of action.

2. No, the wage assignment would not be enforcible against your new job, but your liability would continue, and after taking judgment against you your creditors could, by garnishment, reach your wages in excess of the legal exemption.

3. See preceding answers.

4. No, but you might have trouble proving the facts.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

AUCTIONEERS.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise if it is permissible for an individual to hold a public auction and act as the auctioneer as long as the property being auctioned is all his own. H. E. W.

Section 3201 of the City Code defines auctioneers as follows: "An auctioneer is one who sells goods at public auction for another or for himself. Any person who sells his own goods at a public auction or private auction is an auctioneer within the meaning of this chapter."

Section 3206 says: "No person other than a licensed auctioneer shall sell at public or private auction."

Section 65 [91] of the cities and village act gives power "to tax, license, and regulate auctioneers."

In our opinion the ordinance covers your case, is within the delegated powers, and is valid. See 6 C. J. 822, 824, and cases cited.

PROPERTY DIVISION.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A, B, and C are brothers. The father of A, B, and C in his last years was taken in and boarded by A. As a reward [1] A was given all the real estate owned by the father. There remained in a bank a sum of money [2] which was to be divided among A, B, and C according to a verbal statement made by the father to B.

3. A states the money belongs to him and he is entitled to it regardless of what the father said.

4. What can B and C do to have the money equally divided? W. I.

1. We assume that the proper legal steps were taken to make this gift complete.

2. Since the division would be equal in absence of any provision to the contrary, we see no importance to this verbal statement as to equal division.

3. You state no facts in support of this claim.

4. If it is necessary to enforce matters you should employ an attorney.

DEFECTIVE ROOF GUTTERS.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—[Friend of the People.]—The gutters on the building to the south of our property are in bad condition and when it rains they leak, washing away the dirt in front of our property. The building, which is a bungalow, is occupied by tenants. What can be done to have this condition remedied? H. J. K.

This complaint has been investigated by one of our sanitary inspectors. His report of conditions resulted in the following notice being served upon the agent: "Repair defective roof gutters and downspouts on building."

This order was followed up until a recent reinspection revealed that it had been complied with.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Subhas Chandra Bose, Indian Nationalist leader who is expected to be the next president of the Nationalist party, declares he and his colleagues will fight British plans for a "federation" government in India with every legal means available.

"We are going to use every peaceful and legal means open to us to oppose federation," said Bose, much imprisoned for his political work, who recently made his first visit to England after removal of a long standing ban by immigration authorities.

Bose replied with great caution to questions about the present situation.

Often called "India's De Valera," he began active work as a Nationalist seventeen years ago and since then has spent five years in prison as "a danger to the state" without further charge and without trial. He was elected mayor of Calcutta in 1930 while in jail.

Bose was returning from Cambridge, where he was educated, to take up a post in the Indian civil service, when he read an appeal by the former Mahatma Gandhi to all Indians to resign civil service posts as part of the campaign of passive resistance against the British. Bose resigned and joined the movement.

Bose is not a socialist and is much more moderate in his views than most members of the Congress, India's Nationalist party.

He denied British reports that communal strife among the strange assortment of races and religions that make up India has already begun to grow worse as the new constitution relaxes—slightly—the British grip on local government.

Native leaders, he said, realizing the responsibility placed upon them, have succeeded in preventing any such mistake. Actually, with increased responsibility and the feeling that they must pull together, communal hates have begun to die down, he said.

Among the points he feels the Indians must work for are abolition of the British army in India, which costs India huge sums every year, and substitution of a purely Indian army, at much lower cost.

He does not believe in pacifism, but says India must be made ready to defend itself against possible Japanese aggression as best it can, with assurance from the British to make up for the defenseless state to which British rule has reduced the natives.

Their chief objection to the federation plan is that it would give the native princes too much voice in the government. The Nationalists consider the princes too reactionary. One of their objections to British rule has been that it bolstered up tyrannical princes.

Another objection to federation is that it still does not provide for giving the central government into the hands of the people of India, and that is the ultimate goal of the Nationalists.

THE TRAILER DEFENDED.

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 1.—Last Sunday's TRIBUNE carries what is apparently the concluding article in the series by Mr. Hal Foust in regard to trailers.

All modes of living have some disadvantages which to the novice assume an importance all out of their proper proportion. A landlubber would have considerable difficulty if he were suddenly to find himself starting on a trip down the Mississippi in charge of a yacht; he would have problems regarding the route, the matter of docking, the question of drinking water, the work involved in making up the bunks. Does that prove that yachting—which is only vagabonding de luxe—is to be discouraged among those who can afford it?

I must take off my hat to Mr. Foust, however; after making one trip with one trailer he not only knows all about them, but knows that the one he had rides better than the average! My own experience is, therefore, strange. My trailer is a small 1936 model made by the largest manufacturer, and sold for about half the amount he mentions, and yet I have never had a cupboard door open; the only dish I ever broke was in going over a bad cross-walk in the city of Birmingham, Ala.; and my wife and I do ride it habitually, at speeds of 40 to 50 miles per hour.

To conserve space, allow me to make a series of disconnected statements refuting some of Mr. Foust's reports, based on my two years' experience.

Mr. Foust found himself unable to make time on the road; last March I drove from Lansing, Mich., to Miami in four days, making 525 miles from Savannah, Ga., to Miami in one day, which included a stop at Daytona Beach for lunch and a rest. In the course of my return trip, I left Nashville, Tenn., at 1 a. m. and arrived in Chicago at 5 p. m. the same day, which included a two hour sleep for me while parked by the road in a small town. My wife and small son stayed in bed until morning and then arose and made the beds and got breakfast, and then gave me the buzzer to "come and get it." Mr. Foust said on Jan. 17 that that is impossible.

I have had little difficulty in finding places to park. For overnight parking on a trip I have parked near country gas stations with a great deal of success, if no trailer camp or cabin camp was available. I have experienced no difficulty in finding places to eat lunch; often we buy what groceries we need either in a small town or in the outlying districts of a city, and park in the residential districts for the half hour necessary for lunch. Or perhaps I find a place on the highway where the shoulder is wide, or drive a little way up a side road. Of course, this latter requires sufficient dexterity to back the trailer back to the highway, but even 5,241 miles should teach one that.

It is true that a mushroom growth of trailer camps has sprung up, and that they do need regulation. It is also true that some of the regulations that will come will soon seem as ludicrous as the early automobile regulations now look to us. Certainly a water bucket and a kettle are advantageous, although we use a water bottle instead of a bucket. One thing Mr. Foust failed to mention: The well behaved trailerite uses a pail of some sort under his drain, which he empties from time to time, thereby avoiding a puddle under the trailer. I have used a gasoline stove for some ten years with little trouble, but if one is afraid, there is a kerosene stove available which has been used by explorers and missionaries for fifty years. It is not true that all cars need auxiliary springs for all trailers; many trailers are balanced well enough that these springs would be unnecessary and unwise.

Much more could be said, but space prevents. G. RUSSELL NOBLE.

HOUSING.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 30.—The New Dealers show confusion about a good many things, many of them fundamental.

Inability to differentiate between two such simple and usual words as standard and scale accounts for the program of the housing administration.

What they mistake for standards of living with which they quarrel so expensively is really the scale of living by which the mass of the American people govern the expenditure of the family income.

If somebody could point out to the administration of the housing plans that we may have a high standard under a relatively low scale of living and a low scale under a high standard, he would be doing a service not only to the taxpayers of the country but to those misguided individuals who think they can't have culture and high ideals without electric refrigeration.

It isn't the houses that make the slums; it is the people themselves. And the program of the housing administration is not going to help that.

E. R. B.

TRIBUTE.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Inasmuch as we have honored many of our past Presidents and lesser officials by naming various streets and places after them, don't you think it fitting that the American people should name something in honor of the New Deal President?

Now that so many of our men are taking off one or more days a week on account of the recession, wouldn't it be a good idea to name these idle days "Roosevelt New Deal Days" in honor of their founder?

I admit the idea is not original, but is copied from the Democratic party's whispering campaign against Mr. Hoover.

W. H. W.

DIAGNOSIS AND REMEDY.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—One family runs the U. S. A., not sixty. They also run all over the U. S. A. They believe that it takes a great leader to tear down and destroy. Are the people of this country going to let them ruin a nation? It is up to us. Votes are the all-important thing in Washington. Let Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Dieterich, and your congressman know that the country is not in a mood to stand any more punitive experiments. Unless you do that you have no kick coming. Telling it to your friends does no good. Santa Claus only works one day a year; why expect Christmas every day for eight years? It cannot be done. You can't stand it!

WAGES AND PRICES.

Marion, Ind., Jan. 26.—It is not surprising to read the statement of the President regarding prices and wage rates. Reduction of expenses to balance a budget is unknown to the administration. If this so-called "recession," which was brought on largely by too rapid wage increases [à la Wagner act], lasts much longer economic law will again function and we will have lower prices and lower wages. Even Franklin Roosevelt cannot make the sun stand still. One is reminded of Voliva of Zion City, who contends the earth is flat.

CITY PUSHES OWN AIRPORT PLAN; HERMAN IGNORED

Mayor to Give Details to Council Tomorrow.

Mayor Kelly will submit to the city council tomorrow the airport expansion plan that provides for the relocation of tracks of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad on board of education property, immediately south of 55th street.

Disgusted with the tactics of Raymond E. Herman, owner of property north of 55th street, who is demanding what the city terms an exorbitant price, the mayor is going ahead with an alternative plan.

He gave orders yesterday to Oscar Hewitt, commissioner of public works, to complete plans for the track removal and have them ready for the council tomorrow. Hewitt said he will work today with citw engineers and Walter Wright, head of the city recreation and aviation department, to complete details.

Agrees to Rush Action.

James B. McCahey, president of the board of education, yesterday agreed to rush steps to provide for the relocation of the tracks on school board property. Assistant Corporation Counsel Arthur G. Sullivan was told to prepare the necessary ordinance for the council for the track transfer.

The mayor said the present move is a makeshift necessitated by Herman's refusal to accept the valuation of $27,000 placed on that portion of his property needed by the city. Although he said the location through Herman's property would be the best, the new plan will save from $80,000 to $100,000 from the $800,000 originally estimated for the airport enlargement.

The relocation of the tracks is necessary because they now run along 59th street, west from Cicero to Central avenue, and must be removed if the field is to be doubled in size.

Price Asked Too High.

To run the tracks along 54th street it would be necessary to acquire a piece of property owned by Herman, a real estate broker, and to obtain reversionary rights Herman has in property now used by the Belt line railroad. Herman demanded $65,000 which the city terms too high.

Under the present proposal an area 125 feet wide, will separate the new right of way from 55th street on the north and South Central avenue on the west. The right of way will then use another 125 foot strip inside of that. Stores or similar low buildings may use the 125 foot strip along the street, Hewitt pointed out yesterday, thereby realizing a rental value to the school board.

Mayor Kelly said the new portion of the landing field will be ready in about six or seven months in time for the forty passenger planes scheduled to start operations in the fall.

WALKS INTO STREET CAR; DIES

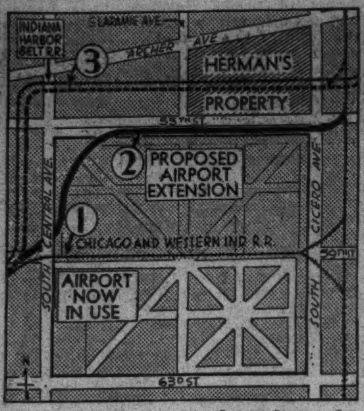
City's Airport Plan

(Story in adjoining column.)



1. Railroad tracks bounding the present airport on the north, which must be removed for its enlargement. 2. Proposed relocation of tracks as now planned by city to expand field. 3. Route originally proposed for moving tracks. This would allow more expansion, but has been balked by Raymond E. Herman's refusal to accept city's offer for his property.

AIR SHOW HAILED A SUCCESS; PLAN EVENT EACH YEAR

Attendance and Sales Top Hopes.

Plans to establish the international air show as an annual Chicago event were announced yesterday by James H. Dunbar Jr., executive vice president of the exhibition. This year's show, the first here in a decade, opened Jan. 29 in the International amphitheater, 43d and Halsted streets, and will close tonight.

Sales of aircraft and attendance at the exhibition have been beyond expectation, Dunbar said. Up to last night forty-two airplanes valued at $150,000 had been sold to private individuals and more than 175,000 persons had visited the show.

Conditions Called Ideal.

"Exhibitors are very pleased," Dunbar said, "and are eager to come back next year. We realize that Chicago is centrally located and is the aviation hub of the nation. The amphitheater has a large enough seating capacity for our purposes and planes can be landed nearby."

Of the planes sold at the show one was a $45,000 craft, but most of the others were two seater sport models selling for around $2,000. In addition plane manufacturers have received commitments on future purchases from persons who attended the exhibition. A combination automobile and airplane, with detachable wings, selling for about $3,000, was one of the most popular models and there are several orders to be filled as soon as the manufacturer begins production.

Will Increase Military Display.

The emphasis this year was on commercial aircraft, but next year military planes will occupy a more important place in the show. Dunbar said that representatives of foreign governments who visited the show appeared interested in buying American military aircraft.

Howard Wolf, 17 years old, of 6122 South Francisco avenue, yesterday was adjudged the champion model builder at the exhibition. Young Wolf won with a model of a Douglas observation plane.

TWO POLICEMEN SHOT BY BANDITS WIN HERO AWARD

Learn Later That They Killed Foe.

Heroism Rewarded

Policemen Patrick Griffin (left) and Fred Crowley, who won The Tribune's hero award for December.

Two Chicago detectives on special assignment were driving along North avenue when, near Damen avenue, an odd looking black sedan with its license plate upside down attracted their attention. The policemen, Fred Crowley and Patrick Griffin of the city detective bureau, concluded to investigate. They walked toward the old automobile, but before they were near enough to question its occupants two men leaped out, yelled "Stick 'em up, coppers," and started shooting.

A bullet in the groin left Policeman Griffin helpless on the sidewalk. A shot in the thigh spun Policeman Crowley around and knocked him to the ground just as he began firing, but he scrambled up and stumbled after the fleeing gunmen, exchanging shots with them. Finding a window guard convenient, he supported himself against it and emptied his revolver at the hoodlums. It was night, however, 8:30 p. m., and the two outlaws got away.

Woman Also Wounded.

It was soon found that the policemen were not the only bullet victims. A pedestrian, Miss Stella Cepa, 2246 North avenue, and a motorist, Sidney Chamberlain, 2650 Burling street, also were wounded.

License plates found inside the gunmen's automobile led policemen to 547 Cullerton avenue, where they had a brush with a man whom they believed to be Earl Hargrave, an ex-convict. The suspect swapped bullets and escaped.

Two days later, however, on Dec. 18, Mrs. Florence Brown of 6204 South Park avenue called police to aid a sick man at her house. When the patrol car arrived the man was dead. He was Mrs. Brown's brother, William S. Thomas, 29 years old, and his fatal illness was caused, it developed, by a bullet which he received in the running pistol fight with Policemen Griffin and Crowley on Dec. 16.

Fugitive for Two and a Half Years.

Thomas was a convict who escaped on May 13, 1935, from the honor farm of Joliet penitentiary, to which he was sentenced in 1933 for holding up a Chicago theater.

For showing exceptional bravery in the face of pistol fire from Thomas and his companion, Policemen Crowley and Griffin have been awarded $100 each as THE TRIBUNE heroes for December.

"Both of these policemen," said John L. Sullivan, chief of detectives, "displayed unusual courage. They could have passed up the suspicious car because they were on special assignment, but they chose not to do so."

SCHOOLS LAUNCH SECOND INQUIRY INTO GAMBLING

Superintendent of Schools William H. Johnson announced yesterday that principals of Chicago's 349 elementary schools will make a second inquiry into gambling by pupils in neighborhood stores. Last week investigation confirmed that stores near 126 of the schools have punchboards, vending machines that have been converted into gambling devices, and other contrivances that lure money from the children.

"We want to know if any storekeepers have stopped this evil," Dr. Johnson said. If this survey shows that the practice is being continued, Richard S. Folsom, attorney for the school board, will ask city officials to act, it was indicated.

DAD SNATCHES 4 CHILDREN FROM FLAMES IN HOME

2 More Saved; 7th Dies; Father Fights for Life.

A father, 31 years old, who was seriously burned earlier in the day in rescuing four of his seven children from their blazing home at 3702 South Western avenue, was given a good chance for recovery last night at St. Anthony hospital. Two other children were saved but the seventh child was burned to death.

The father, Harold E. Adams, passed four of his children from a second story porch across an areaway to two men on the roof of a garage, while three other men rescued twins, 4 years old, from the first floor kitchen.

Both Stairways Blocked.

The family was asleep when Adams' wife, Veronica, 28 years old, was aroused by smoke and the crackling of flames on the first floor of the two story brick building. The parents found both front and rear stairways blocked by flames.

John and Peter Kappas, proprietors of a confectionery at 3716 South Western avenue, had seen the fire and climbed to the adjacent garage roof, and it was they who took the children from Adams as he carried them from the burning flat.

The father removed Marianne, 8 years old, who was taken to St. Anthony hospital suffering from burns; Jacqueline, age 7; June Therese, 5, and Donna Jean, 3.

Youngster Dies in Hospital.

The smoke and flames prevented him from finding Patrick, 2 years old. Firemen removed the youngster soon afterward from his smoldering crib, but the boy died in the hospital.

Adams was taken to the hospital protesting that the twins, Harold Jr. and William, were still in the building. They were found unconscious under the kitchen table by Stanley Draus, 23 years old, 2635 Montgomery avenue, and two other men who entered through a window, using their coats as shields. The twins were revived by rescue squad No. 9.

Mrs. Adams, who had been ill, escaped by jumping to the garage roof. She and the children were later taken to the home of Adams' father, William J. Adams, 3734 Archer avenue, who is associated with his son in an undertaking business.

The fire, presumably starting from a defective furnace pipe, destroyed the first floor before it was controled.

ICE FLOE TAKES RED SCIENTISTS 20 MILES IN DAY

MOSCOW, Feb. 5.—(AP)—The four soviet Arctic campers riding the ice from the North Pole tonight reported their floe had drifted twenty miles farther from Greenland's east coast in twenty-four hours while the temperature continued to drop.

News of the falling temperature heartened rescuers who had feared the small floe might break up before the campers could be reached by soviet rescue ships on the way if recent warmer weather prevailed. Magnetic disturbances interfered with radio communication last night and today, but no alarm was felt for the men adrift on a 160 by 100 foot floe.

Commander Ivan Papanin, in charge of the scientific expedition, radioed their new position was 74.03 degrees north and 16.30 degrees west, about 120 miles east of Greenland and more than 1,100 miles from the North Pole. He said the temperature was 8.6 degrees above zero [Fahrenheit].

PREPARE APPEAL TO HALT BOOST IN CITY GAS RATES

Attorneys for the Illinois commerce commission yesterday prepared plans for an immediate appeal from the decree of Judge Stanley Klarkowski of the Circuit court allowing the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company to collect a higher gas rate. The new rate, which went into effect yesterday, will add approximately 30 cents a month to each of the company's 800,000 domestic users.

Attorney Harry R. Booth for the commission said he may go before the Appellate or Supreme courts during the week to ask for a writ of supersedeas to prevent the company from charging a higher rate until a decision can be obtained in the upper courts.

James A. Cunningham, secretary of Peoples Gas, following the court's decision Friday, said the additional money collected will be impounded pending a final ruling by the higher court.

Man and Wife Robbed, but Save $2,000 in Gems

Three young robbers followed Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. The robbers failed to see several diamond rings, valued at $2,000, which Mrs. Ellis wore under her gloves. The Ellises had been at a wedding party in Evanston.

FOSTER COMMON VIRTUES, LANDON ADVISES CHURCH

Tells Methodists to Fit Into Modern Times.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Alfred M. Landon yesterday told the Methodist church that the common, barnyard kind of virtues, such as honest debt paying and truth speaking are as important in these high geared days of movies, jaz bands and football games as they were when old Dobbin was hitched to the family shay. His address closed the first United Methodist council, in session since Thursday at the Stevens hotel.

Moreover, said the Republican candidate for the presidency in 1936, the church is responsible not only for virtuous character of persons and society regardless of the speed of the day, but also must keep itself under careful scrutiny that its own example be above reproach. He added that some modern substitute must be found for the pastoral visits of the minister of the good old fried chicken days.

Urges Modernized Thought.

"The church and its leaders must not think of character in solely evangelistic and abstract forms," said Mr. Landon. "The ministry must think in practical, every day terms. It is one thing to believe in fine ideals. It is another thing to live up to them. Character building must be made to fit the day of the great corporation and gigantic organization. It must be made to fit the day of the automobile and the radio. It must adapt itself to the football games, the movies, and the jaz bands.

"If the church is to perform the task of building character, it must restore something of the former close contact with the home and members of the family. As ministers, I know that all of you are familiar with the old story that associated the Methodist minister with fried chicken. It meant that the minister was a frequent caller at the home.

"Of necessity, the minister joined the family in some high toned rations. He was also enabled to get acquainted with the family. He helped to settle many family problems. If we are to build an enduring civilization, the mothers and fathers of this generation must regard it as their job to bring religion into the home, as did the parents of the days that you and I remember."

For the fried chicken dinner for the minister described as being unsuited to the modern night club era, one substitute was recommended. This is the family counseling guidance service, Mr. Landon explained, which brings the trained pastoral counselor in touch with family problems.

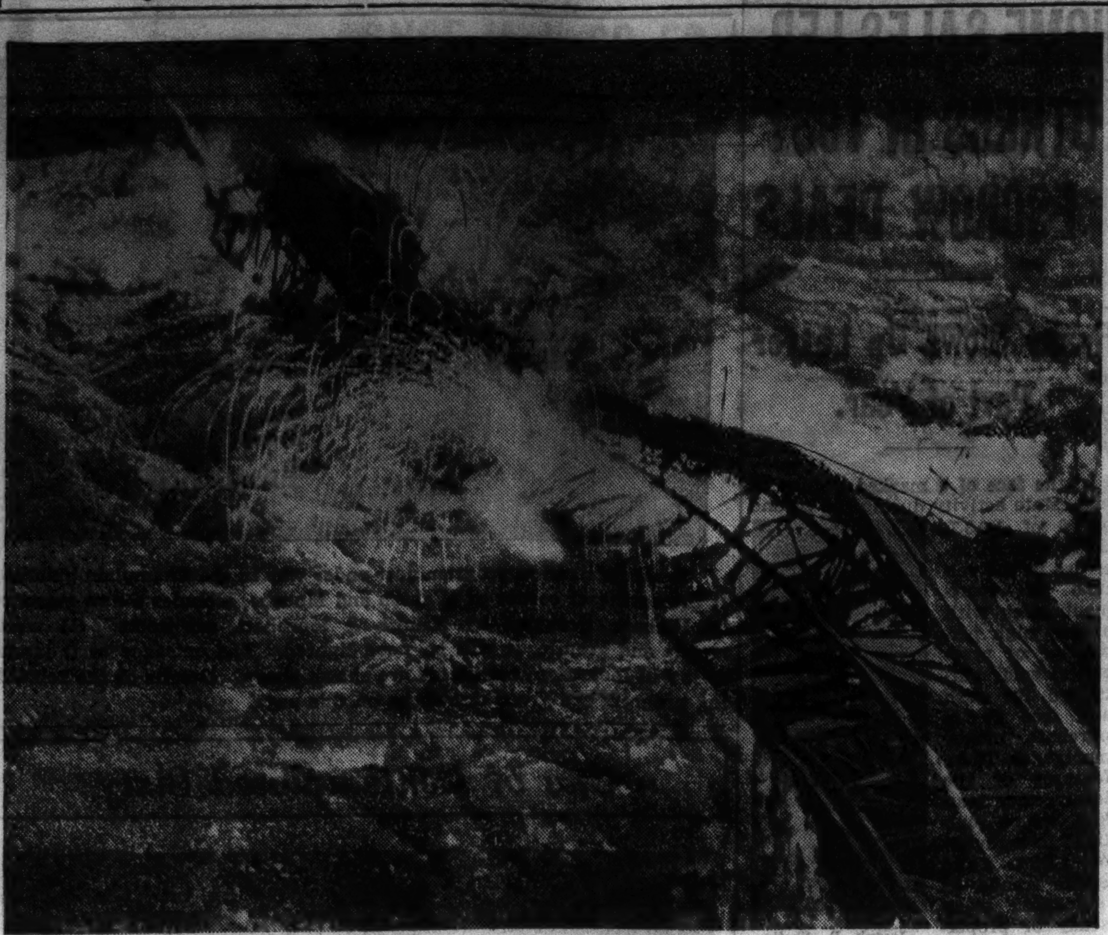
Turning to practical present day duties of the church, he cautioned churches against welshing on their corporate debts arising from depression causes, and urged that the church protect the name of Methodism against nondescript organizations of propaganda or doubtful service which might seek to use a respected name for improper purposes.

Warns Against Dictatorship.

At only one point in the speech were political implications suggested by any members of the council. Mr. Landon warned against the rise of dictatorship which he called an "ancient theory of absolute government now abroad in the world."

"The absolute government that has taken hold of a number of nations would relieve individuals of much responsibility," Mr. Landon declared. "But as it relieves of responsibility, it would take away freedom of worship, freedom of expressions and even free will. Christianity has a great stake in the preservation of democracy. Only by a vigorous and prophetic church can we retain democracy."

Dynamite Breaks Up Fallen Niagara Bridge



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Spectacular picture of exploding charge sending up shower of sparks yesterday at famed Honeymoon span, which toppled nine days ago under ice jam. It was blasted into pieces which officials expect to sink or float away with the ice and end menace to navigation caused by twisted steelwork.

Ice Jam Budges

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A half ton of dynamite, fired all at once, chopped America's fallen Honeymoon bridge into four sections today and loosened the ice jam on which the wreckage lay. Wide fissures opened in the ice and these, together with today's weather, threatened to start the ice moving soon toward Lake Ontario with its strange burden.

Although the 1,000 foot steel bridge skeleton scarcely budged when the dynamite went off, engineers said the spectacular blast had achieved the intended purpose. This was to cut the span into short segments which can be easily sunk or carried away on the floes when the record breaking ice jam begins to move. The blast shattered a few windows in Niagara Falls, Ont.

GALENA FLOODED AFTER RIVER RISES FOR SECOND TIME

Galena, Ill., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The Galena river after having subsided from a crest of 23.69 feet, six feet above flood stage, began rising again late tonight. Main street was quickly inundated.

Train service over the Illinois Central, Burlington and Northwestern railroads was cut off this morning and railroad bridges were weighted as a safety precaution against the flood.

U. S. Highway 41 Flooded.

Racine, Wis., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Flood waters of Root river tonight rose over U. S. highway 41 near the Racine-Milwaukee county line. One lane of the twin lane highway still was passable, deputies reported.

Bandit Robs Tavern; Shoots Clerk in Adjoining Store

Shooting without provocation, a bandit last night seriously wounded Daimianios Kirizidis, 38 years old, a clerk in a grocery at 503½ East 43d street. The clerk was standing in the grocery doorway when two bandits emerged from James Kalaras' tavern, next door, where they had taken $40 in a holdup. Kirizidis did not even know of the robbery, but one of the gunmen opened fire.

Realtors Assert Passage of Part of New Code Will Boost Construction

RULES PERMIT LOWER PRICED, BETTER BUILDING

Remove Many of Former Barriers to Industry.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

With nine sections of Chicago's new building code enacted into law, permitting many economies in all types of construction, another handicap to resumption of home building is removed, real estate and building firms asserted yesterday. The code sections already passed relate to foundations, masonry, wood construction, steel and metal construction, and reinforced concrete.

Removal of many of the old code's barriers to modern building should result in a vigorous revival of new building, it was said. Among the new provisions favorable to increased single family dwelling construction are the following: The walls of brick houses can be only 8 inches thick to meet minimum requirements. The old code required a minimum of 12 inches. Here is a saving of about one-third the cost of material and labor on house walls. Concrete blocks can now be used for foundations and wall construction. Structural backup tile is permitted. Fiber wall board materials are allowed. Glass bricks are within the code. All of the foregoing provisions have been enacted into law.

Expected to Be Passed.

Provisions in the new code that are drafted and are expected to be passed include:

Minimum ceiling height of 8 feet. The former requirement was 8 feet 6 inches for dwellings. Attached one and two car garages will be permitted without some of the former restrictions which kept this modern building plan from being much used in Chicago.

Basement living rooms will be permitted if not more than two feet below grade. Modern air conditioning and heating provisions will permit up to date construction.

For heavy and large building construction, important improvements have been made in requirements for weight and strength of steel and foundation details.

No Longer an Excuse.

"Builders, financing agencies, potential buyers of new homes, and the public generally long have deplored the fact that Chicago's building code was far behind the times," said John Cummings Lindop, head of a real estate firm in Oak Park. "This fact has been widely used as an excuse for postponing construction. In many instances it was a valid reason, but it no longer holds good.

"There are more than 200,000 vacant lots within the city limits, most of them ready for construction of types permitted by the zoning ordinance. Much additional room will be provided as old buildings are demolished. Within Cook county and outside of the city limits are more than 300,000 additional lots, improved and awaiting building."

Cheaper and Better.

J. Soule Warterfield, chairman of the Chicago Real Estate board's building code committee, recently said that the new code would permit Chicagoans to build cheaper and better structures; that requirements of basic materials such as brick, concrete, and steel would be reduced 10 to 30 per cent without sacrifice of quality or strength, and that architects and engineers could effect better design, a high degree of utility, and marked savings to the public.

Work has been going on intermittently for several years on Chicago's new building code. A document of some 1,500 pages finally was drafted and divided for analysis and revision among the various branches of the real estate and building field such as industrial groups, home builders, and real estate management interests.

The sections already enacted to date have had the benefit of extensive study. Additional sections will be presented to the city council soon.

PETRILLO BUYS SUMMER HOME ON LAKE GENEVA

James C. Petrillo, president of Local No. 10 of the American Federation of Musicians, bought for a reported $26,500 cash the summer residence in Fontana, Wis., on Lake Geneva, from the estate of Alfred Charles Henschel. The house, a twelve room brick structure, occupies a lot fronting 300 feet on Lake Geneva with a depth of 1,000 feet. Sidney J. and Arthur Wolf were attorneys for the seller and David Katz represented the buyer. The property, it was reported, will be extensively modernized.

Evanston Has Only 1 Pct. of Flats Vacant

Evanston's apartment building occupancy has reached the highest point in fifteen years—99 per cent—according to Nelson Snyder, chairman of the renting committee of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate board. He said yesterday that with only one per cent of the apartments vacant, there is a decided shortage in practically all types. None of the smaller units is now unoccupied, he said. Some buildings have a waiting list.

Although it was recently agreed that there would be some increase in rentals this spring, the real estate board is taking no concerted action in this matter, it was said.

"May 1 will find Evanston apartments in the soundest position from the occupancy standpoint in many years," Snyder said. "House renting also is expected to show the effects of the general shortage of desirable living accommodations in Evanston.

"While still somewhat early for predictions, the renting committee anticipates an even larger shortage of houses for rent than in several seasons."

MRS. SNYDER TO HAVE NEW STORE IN HOWARD ST.

Mrs. Ora Snyder yesterday leased the corner store in the building at the southwest corner of Howard street and Hermitage avenue for five years beginning March 1 at an undisclosed rental. A soda fountain will be a feature.

HOME SALES LED OTHERS IN 1937 ESCROW DEALS

Realty Slows Up Latter Part of Year.

In the face of a marked decline in real estate activity during the second half of 1937, there was an increase in the volume of apartment sales with a very high percentage of properties sold purchased for cash and free from purchase money mortgages. These features of the local realty market were outlined in a review of 1937 real estate trends, as evidenced by a study of properties placed in escrow, just completed by Joseph D. Shelly, chief escrow officer of the Chicago Title and Trust company.

Other features pointed out by Shelly were a slight proportionate decline in the sale of homes, a perceptible decline in the proportionate sales activity of vacant property, and a slight decline in activity of commercial property.

Operating Farmer a Factor.

"During the worst of the real estate depression a considerable number of farms changed hands through our escrow department, indicating the purchase of such property by city dwellers as an investment and possibly as a hedge against threatened inflation," Shelly said.

"During 1937 this type of property changing hands through the department has been negligible, as it was in 1936, and we are informed by interests active in the sale of farm properties that the operating farmer has replaced the city dweller as the important factor in the farm market."

The proportion of the different types of property to total sales follows: Homes, 45 per cent; apartments, 29 per cent; vacant, 13 per cent; commercial, 13 per cent.

Most Homes Sales in City.

Approximately 59 per cent of all the sales of single family homes passing through the escrow department were within the city limits and 55 per cent of all sales, both in the city and the suburban area, involved a consideration of less than $5,000. The proportion of small homes was higher in Chicago than in the suburbs.

"Activity in the sale of homes in Chicago was rather evenly distributed among the various sections of the city," Shelly said. "Activity in the sale of low priced homes in the suburban area was largest in some of the west and northwest suburbs. In the sale of more valuable home properties activity was most noticeable along the north shore. Transactions in these more expensive north shore properties, however, declined perceptibly during the last six months of 1937."

Door Company Leases Cermak Road Factory

The Pacific Mutual Door company, now at 3712 South Rockwell street, has leased the two story building on the north side of West Cermak road, extending from Throop street to Allport avenue, containing 40,000 square feet of floor space, and will move as soon as remodeling is completed. Robert White & Co. represented the lessee and J. Beidler Camp & Co. the lessor. The door company's general offices are in Tacoma, Wash., with plants in Brooklyn, St. Paul, Kansas City, and Los Angeles. The company manufactures and assembles doors, plywoods, millwork, and other building materials at its Chicago factory.

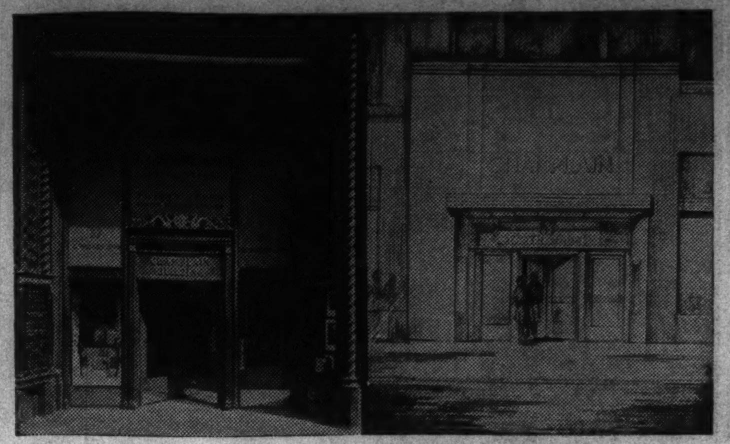
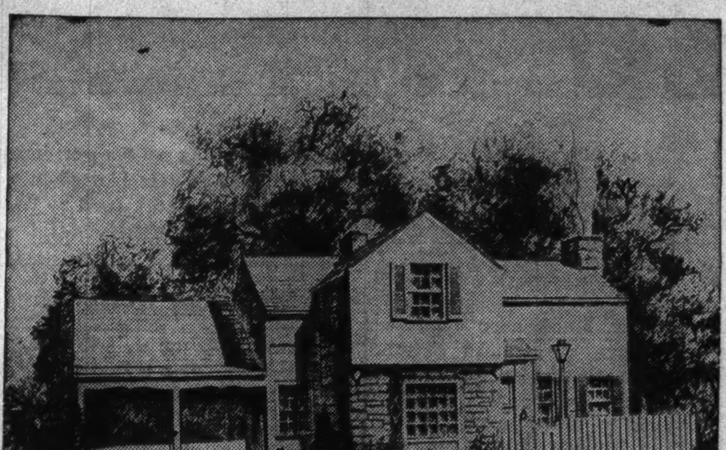
Before and After



A modernization program now under way in the Champlain building, at the northeast corner of Wabash and Monroe, includes a new entrance on Wabash, designed by Milman & Morphett, architects. Of white metals and granite, it will be flood lighted. The entrance as it is and as it will look when completed are shown above. Details of the rebuilding program are given elsewhere on this page.

One of Contemplated Sixty



The above house, designed by J. H. Marling, is one of sixty contemplated residences to be erected on the Marling development known as Glen Acres, in Northfield township, on the east side of Sunset Ridge road. Occupying a three-quarters of an acre site at the northeast corner of Maple lane and Sunset Ridge road, this home has six rooms and a two car garage. The exterior is of Wisconsin Lannon stone and clapboard. The land and building were bought for a reported $12,500 by George Hofmeister of the Continental Casualty company.

PLAN 60 HOMES IN GLEN OAK ACRES PROJECT

Work is scheduled to start shortly on two more residences in Glen Oak Acres, in Northfield township, according to J. H. Marling, of 120 South La Salle street, who yesterday outlined a building program calling for a total of sixty homes. Eight already are completed or under way. Six have been sold.

The thirty-five acres remaining in an original ninety acre tract are on the east side of Sunset Ridge road, extending from Elmwood avenue on the south to Maple lane on the north. Winding roads lead through this wooded development.

MODERNIZATION OF CHAMPLAIN BUILDING IS NOW UNDER WAY

Details of a modernization program for the 13 story Champlain building at the northeast corner of Wabash and Monroe were told yesterday by Graham Aldis of Aldis & Co., managers of the property. All shop fronts are to be redesigned on both streets under the direction of Ralph Milman of Milman & Morphett.

The first story façade will be of polished granite. The store fronts will be of polished bronze, aluminum, marble, and glass. The interiors also will be rebuilt. A new building entrance on Wabash avenue will replace the present old time design. It will be of granite and white metals, flood lighted.

Modernization of the sixth floor interior already has been completed. Other floor changes will follow. The entrance lobby was rebuilt some time ago. According to Aldis, the entire program will be completed by next fall.

The Regal Shoe company has just signed a new lease for the corner store and additional space to the north. It will be similar to the company's 5th avenue store in New York. George Wienhoeber, florist, will occupy the entire remainder of the Wabash avenue frontage, adjoining the building entrance.

News of the Architects

The architectural business of the late Frank D. Chase has been conveyed to Morton L. Pereira, who was associated with Chase for the last eighteen years, serving as vice president of Frank D. Chase, Inc., for more than ten years. He has associated with him members of the original organization and will function as Morton L. Pereira and Associates, successors to Frank D. Chase, Inc., architects and engineers, 100 West Monroe street.

The Chicago Architectural club announces that an exhibit of water colors by George Fred Keck, Chicago artist, will be shown in the club rooms, 1801 South Prairie avenue, in conjunction with the starting of a water color class tomorrow. It will be held two evenings each week for eight weeks, under the guidance of Keck.

W. H. Gibbons and H. B. Stahl of the Republic Steel corporation, will show a moving picture on the manufacture and uses of stainless steel at the next meeting of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, Feb. 8, at the Architects' club, 1801 Prairie avenue.

East Grand Avenue Land Leased for Parking Lot

William Wyers yesterday leased 300 feet of vacant frontage at 320-38 East Grand avenue, with a depth of 109 feet, from the General Foods corporation, for a term of years with an option to buy. He also leased the adjoining vacant 100 feet of frontage at 329-37 East Ohio street, 109 feet deep, from Mrs. Dorothy Santini, with option to purchase. It is understood Wyers represents a parking concern which will operate the entire 43,600 square feet. It is planned to operate a bus service to and from the loop for motorists who park there. Orville A. Dee of McMenemy, Inc., represented the lessee and Carroll H. Sudler of Sudler & Co. represented Mrs. Santini.

COMMERCE BODY OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR INDUSTRIES

Rezoning of the Blighted Areas Is Urged.

In an effort to bring new industries to Chicago the Chicago Association of Commerce this week will launch an active campaign to publicize this city's economic advantages throughout the country. As its first move the association has added to its headquarters staf as secretary of industrial development John Blair Whidden, for fourteen years active in industrial real estate.

"He will be the association's roving representative in contacting executives of companies which should be operating branch factories or outlets here," said President Oscar G. Mayer. "He will follow the same good will missionary tactics now used by Association of Commerce field agents in prevailing upon trade and fraternal groups to hold their annual conventions here."

Plan New Advertising.

To support Whidden the association will issue in the near future a new advertising series aimed directly at potential industrial newcomers to Chicago. While the work has only started, initial contacts already show an encouraging number of concerns that might consider locating here, it was said. Companies in states that have been subject recently to labor and tax difficulties are said to be particularly receptive.

The search for additional factory and branch office pay rolls for Chicago is the first plank in the Association of Commerce program for 1938. When Mayer became president last week he stated that the acquisition of new industries and company branches for Chicago is the surest guaranty of the city's development.

Seek Rezoning.

Another plank in the association's 1938 program includes completion of the new building code. Changes already made in the code now make it possible for industries to build new plants here at a cost said to be 15 per cent under what it might have been a year ago.

A land use survey and rezoning of the city also are sought by the association. A rezoning of the blighted belt encircling the loop will, it is asserted, make it available for light industries and workers' apartments. The convenience of such a business district would be particularly attractive to smaller companies now in other cities, Mayer pointed out.

REUM TO HEAD BUILDING GROUP ANOTHER TERM

Oscar A. Reum, plaster contractor and head of the Zander-Reum company, heads the only ticket in the field for reëlection as president of the Building Construction Employers' Association of Chicago, Inc.

A nominating committee named the following officers for reëlection: William McGuineas, George V. Dahl, F. C. Black, and George C. Clark, vice presidents; Henry W. Grebe, treasurer. The election will take place next Tuesday. The nominating committee was composed of A. R. Behl, Thomas P. Shean, Ben Olson, Humbert Davia, and Nils Johnson.

Close Ten New Leases in Merchandise Mart

Ten new leases, aggregating 7,569 square feet of floor space, were reported yesterday by Percy Wilson, vice president of Marshall Field & Co., in charge of real estate. They are: Bernard B. Osterow, Par-Tex Sports Wear company, Royal Sportswear, Lubin-Weeker company, T. A. Stiffel company, Fletcher Enamel company, Parker Brothers, Clarence J. Ezell, Associated Sales agency, and the Home Service Bureau, Inc.

Make $1,050,000 Loans to Two Chicago Hospitals

W. E. Gould & Co. report hospital loans aggregating $1,050,000 made in Chicago recently. A loan of $300,000 on the Swedish Covenant hospital, at Foster and California, was sold to B. C. Ziegler & Co. of West Bend, Wis. A loan of $750,000 was made on the Little Company of Mary hospital, in Evergreen Park.

COAL PRICE CODE CUTS BUSINESS IN DOWNSTATE AREA

Drop in Employment Also Adds to Relief Load.

(See today's Graphic section for description of an electric shovel six stories high that digs for coal in Illinois' newest mine.)

BY WILLIAM BROMAGE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Harrisburg, Ill., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Employment at the coal mines in and around this southern Illinois city has dropped to the point where it is having a distressing effect on business and creating a serious relief problem.

Since the fixed minimum price code was established by the national bituminous coal commission Dec. 16 operations at mines here have dropped to a half or a third of the scale maintained in the last three months of 1937.

Mild weather and the general business recession have been contributing factors in the decline, but for the most part it is attributed to price discriminations set up by the commission created under the Guffey-Vinson act and consumer resistance to arbitrarily fixed higher prices.

Demand Guffey Act Repeal.

Mine union officials in this area have tagged the Guffey act a starvation bill, their term for legislation which they regard as harmful to the miners. Local officials of the Progressive Miners of America assert the code schedules are responsible for the slack in the industry and demand a repeal of the Guffey act.

Mayor Ray Durham said the cut in mine operations is responsible for [a] big drop in business here, as coal mining is the major source of cash income of the community. He said the blow has fallen just when the city is completing its recovery from the effects of the flood which inundated more than half of Harrisburg just a year ago.

Finds Feeling of Uncertainty.

"In the last sixty days," Mayor Durham said, "general business here has fallen off a third due to the reduced operations at the mines. And this is the time of the year when production should be at a peak. There is a feeling of uncertainty and insecurity in the city which keeps people from spending."

J. Roy Steiger, Harrisburg township relief administrator, said he estimates that February relief requirements here will be 20 per cent larger than in January, which was a difficult month, due to reduced employment at the mines.

"The situation has been made worse," Steiger said, "by an increase of 60 to 80 cents a ton in the price of coal we buy for distributing to families on relief. The mine people say they would sell us coal at the old price, but they are prohibited from doing so by code regulations."

Coal on Ground Piles Up.

One coal operator here estimated there is a quarter of a million tons of mined coal on the ground in southern Illinois, much of it fine coal which cannot be sold under present price restrictions. He said there is always a certain amount of coal on the ground, but the present tonnage is greater than at any other time he could recall.

Not all mines have been hit by the curtailment as some have affiliated or other advantageous outlets for industrial coal. However, even staunch advocates of federal price fixing in the industry admit there are many inequalities and discriminations against Illinois producers in the present schedules.

COAL CONSUMER FACES NEW LEVY OF 40 MILLIONS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The coal consumer—already burdened with price increases because of rate schedules set up by the national bituminous coal commission—faces the payment of an additional ,000,000, John Carson, consumers' counsel for the commission, declared today.

Carson filed a brief with the interstate commerce commission protesting increased freight rates for coal, which he said would cost consumers ,000,000. Moreover, only $6,000,000 of this amount would go to railroads which really need the money, he asserted.

Next Tuesday the coal commission will hear a number of protests against minimum prices established for soft coal.

The city of Chicago is one of the complainants scheduled to be heard. Chicago filed a petition in the District of Columbia Federal court this week for an injunction restraining the coal commission from enforcement of established minimum prices in that city.

SENATOR DUFFY OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR RE-ELECTION

Senator F. Ryan Duffy.

The Roosevelt message was in a letter to Leo T. Crowley, Wisconsin born director of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, and was read by Mr. Crowley. The Washington contribution to the home town's testimonial to Senator Duffy was interpreted by the dinner guests as giving the senator's campaign the full endorsement of the administration.

SULTANA OF SULU, ONCE U. I. CO-ED, STALKS BANDITS

Leads Pursuit of Wild Moro Outlaws.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 5.—Island police in Sulu province, under the personal direction of Sultana Tarhata Kiram, one time co-ed at the University of Illinois, were hunting the hills cautiously today for the desperate Moro, Saribon, and his band, following a battle yesterday with Saribon's father, Imam Bato, Moro outlaw chieftain.

Bato and one of his men were killed, and two of the sultana's aids were wounded. Saribon assumed command of the outlaw band after his father's death, and vowed vengeance against the authorities. The battle with Bato came after he had refused to surrender on a murder charge. Hoping to prevent bloodshed, Sultana Kiram personally invaded his stronghold to urge him to make peace with the authorities. He refused.

She Knows About Rebellion.

Curiously the sultana is no stranger to rebellion, but in her only other rebellious experience she was on the anti-government side. That was in January, 1927. At that time she seconded, if she did not lead, her husband, the Datu Tahil, in a futile gesture against the Jolo constabulary.

Only a year before the sultana—then the Princess Kiram, favorite niece and adopted daughter of the sultan of Sulu—had surprised her American friends by marrying into Tahil's harem as his fourth wife.

She entered the University of Illinois in 1919, studied language, social economy, and woman suffrage, bobbed her hair, rolled her stockings, wore short skirts, and powdered her nose as other co-eds did.

Soon Blackens Her Teeth.

The princess soon reverted to ancestral custom, blackened her teeth with betel nut, and sided with her husband in his daring moves. When he protested against land taxes and barricaded himself and 200 followers in a Moro fort, while the Philippine constabulary surrounded it, she stayed with him; indeed she was pictured as the brains of the rebellion.

For several days Tahil's men and the constabulary faced each other without hostilities. The authorities dreaded to charge, fearing that, if the princess were slain, the island people would revolt. Princess Kiram soon removed this worry herself. On Jan. 27, 1927, she disappeared from the fort. On the next day the battle opened and thirty-five of the datu's men were killed. He escaped.

The princess was captured on Feb. 4. A few days later the Datu Tahil was arrested. Both he and his princess were charged with sedition. He was convicted in March and sentenced to 10 years in prison. She escaped punishment.

Little more was heard of the princess from then until March, 1937, when she was proclaimed sultana by Sultan Painal Abireen II. in place of his own wife, a commoner.

10 PCT. OF HEART DISEASE DEATHS FOLLOW SYPHILIS

Schmidt Shows War on One Is War on Both.

More than 300,000 Americans die each year of heart disease, and in 30,000 of them the ailment is caused by syphilis.

Dr. Louis E. Schmidt, board of health secretary and chairman of Mayor Kelly's anti-syphilis committee, cited these government figures yesterday to show that the city's campaign against syphilis, No. 1 contagious disease, is also a campaign against heart ailments, No. 1 cause of deaths.

Cardiovascular syphilis is one of the many late-stage complications of syphilis, Dr. Schmidt said, and presents a great control problem because 85 per cent of all Chicago syphilitics delay treatment until the infection has passed the early stage, when there is a 4 to 1 chance of cure.

He pointed to the recent syphilis control survey which showed that of more than 15,000 syphilis cases under treatment in Chicago 5 per cent have cardiovascular syphilis. The percentage is half the national estimate made by the United States public health service.

Of those with heart disease, 81 per cent had had no previous treatment for syphilis at the time physicians discovered their hearts were affected.

"This means," said Dr. Schmidt, "that these persons had syphilis anywhere from two to twenty years before it began to strike them down. It is typical of the entire control problem. Statistics show that of the 15 per cent who do seek treatment in the early stages [up to about two years] only half receive enough treatment to protect them from later complications. In other words, we are controling only 7½ per cent of the known syphilis.

On the basis of lapsed treatments, syphilitic deaths, and spontaneous cures among the 15,000, the survey sets Chicago's potential of syphilis cases needing treatment at more than 60,000.

Dr. Schmidt said these figures are further evidence that all Chicagoans should take syphilis tests and, if infected, remain under treatment until they are no longer in danger of complications or of infecting others.

Latent syphilis, a phase during which the disease's symptoms disappear while the spirochetes settle in the body's organs, accounts for 55 per cent of the 15,000 known cases. It is at this time the disease is most likely to attack the blood vessels or nerve cells.

Neurosyphilis comprises 15 per cent of the 15,000. As with cardiovascular patients, from 55 to 73 per cent of the neurosyphilis cases go untreated until the disease has caused general paralysis [paresis], locomotor ataxia, or ailments of the nervous system.

FOR the past twenty years the problem of the steadily increasing high cost of medical care has engaged the attention of prominent professional and lay individuals throughout the nation. Investigation showed that only the very well-to-do and the very poor were able to obtain adequate medical care without incurring heavy financial burdens. The former through ability to pay, and the latter through tax supported institutions or charity.

One of the first attempts to solve this problem was made in Chicago by Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz. With the support and co-operation of a group of prominent civic minded citizens he organized the first low cost medical effort of its kind in this country. It proved eminently successful and attracted international attention. Almost 200,000 patients were examined and treated during the twelve years it was under his direction.

This successful effort led to the organization of a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE, which he and his associates put into operation January 18th, 1933 to provide low cost medical, surgical and hospital care in all fields of medicine. This determined and courageous attack on the high cost of Medical Care was immediately accepted by the public. For here was a service which many private, charitable and philanthropic organizations, including leaders of the medical profession, had for many years considered necessary to public welfare—yet had been unable to provide.

However, despite the fact that a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE fulfilled this recognized public need it was bitterly opposed by certain members of the medical profession who were averse to this modernized form of medical practice. But, regardless of these attacks and other temporary set-backs, public confidence and support have enabled a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE to move steadily forward.

Approximately 100,000 men, women and children have been examined and treated since the services were made available. Of this number sixty to seventy per cent came through the recommendations of others who were already acquainted with the service. Over 20,000 patients were referred by approximately 4,000 physicians in private practice for X-ray examinations, medical laboratory tests and other diagnostic services—proving conclusively that all physicians in private practice were not opposed to these advanced methods. Hospitalization was provided for almost 5,000 patients, and nearly 1,500 mothers have been delivered and as many babies cared for in the obstetrical department. Major and minor surgical care was rendered to over 2,500 patients.

These figures are quoted merely to indicate the progress of Chicago's first fixed fee, low cost, responsible medical service. Impressive as they are they represent but a small percentage of the total number needing medical protection and care who could have been benefited by this service.

For a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE is a complete service and is available to all. Its facilities occupy five entire floors in the Finchley Building, one of Chicago's most modern and highly respected office buildings. Members of its present medical staff and associated physicians are graduates of prominent medical schools and hospitals, with special training and experience in all departments of medicine. To support this pool of medical knowledge one of the finest X-ray departments in the middle west and a complete and highly efficient medical laboratory and other scientific equipment have been provided. This combination of all medical services makes it possible to render complete medical protection and care not only more efficiently but at low cost.

The public is cordially invited to visit the offices of a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE and personally inspect this unusual piece of public service.

CHICAGO BOUTS OPEN ON WEST SIDE WEDNESDAY

15 Other Centers to Hold Fights.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Something had to be done.

Three ring circus arrangements no longer were adequate.

"Reduce 23,000 budding Golden Gloves champions to eight in slightly more than a month," was the problem.

Now for some of the answers.

The Flint, Mich., tournament officials solved it by having a matinée along with four nights of fighting. This matinée started at 11 o'clock in the morning and continued until 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

At the close of the sunshine fiesta there still were 60 undefeated Flint boys.

Qualify in Grand Rapids.

The boxers from Flint qualify for the Golden Gloves Tournament of Champions in the Grand Rapids Press tournament. It took 40 nights of fighting in the various Michigan sectional meets to get ready for the championship matches in Grand Rapids.

The Rockford Morning Star had not only too many boxers in its sections but too many fans—fans who demanded to see their boys in action. As a result the semi-finals in the Rockford meet will be fought in Sterling, Ill., on Feb. 17, with the finals in Rockford one week later.

The travel problem perplexed the Fort Worth Star-Telegram tournament officials. It required three and four day journeys for some of the Longhorn boxers to move three-quarters of the way across the state to the scene of the championship matches. So training camps where the boys might limber up were established along the more frequently traveled routes.

2,000 Boys Battle in Detroit.

In Detroit, where more than 2,000 amateurs are seeking places on the Free Press team, extra rings and extra sessions have been added for every preliminary round of boxing.

Similar problems are being solved everywhere from Pensacola, Fla., to Minneapolis, from Fort Worth to the southern Canadian border, and from Cleveland to Ogden, Utah. In a thousand smaller cities, towns, and hamlets which provide much of the material for the 46 sectional teams the entry lists this year have broken all records.

In short, it was complicated enough last year, when 20,000 entered the Golden Gloves competition which leads up to the Tournament of Champions in the Chicago Stadium on Feb. 28 and March 1 and 2. And now it is all the more so since 3,000 additional boys became fistic minded this year and got into the world's largest and most spectacular boxing tournament.

Chicago Battles Open Wednesday.

In Chicago the amateur boxers have been dividing their time lately between training and glancing over the results of the early sectional meets.

They will forget about the sectional tournaments entirely this week, however.

The first barrage of flying lether in Chicago's four sectional tournaments will be laid down on Wednesday night when the west section meet opens in the Madison Athletic club arena.

There will be fighting on the west side on both Wednesday and Thursday nights, with the first bouts each evening going on at 7 o'clock. These two nights of fighting will carry the west side boxers through to the semi-final round. The semi-final and final matches on the west side will be

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Gustav Kilian and Heinz Vopel, two human motors attached to bicycles, won the six day bicycle race which ended at the Coliseum last night. It was the tenth consecutive victory, a new world record, for the two young men from Dortmund, Germany, who threaten to mechanize one of the favorite sports of our grandfathers.

Last night's triumph resolved itself into an anticlimax to a week which had produced some of the best riding seen in Chicago in years. It found Kilian and Vopel content to win on sprint points after having been deadlocked in mileage with the American team of Jimmy Walthour and Al Crossley for 24 hours. So heavily did the business of point getting figure in the ultimate arithmetic that not a gesture in the direction of lap larceny was made in the final hour, when each sprint victor came away with 72 points in place of the 6 awarded for the race's routine flashes.

Germans Bear Down.

There never was any doubt about the Germans' advantage, although they had to exert themselves considerably in that final hour to win from Walthour and Crossley, who compiled 1,189 points, against 1,253 for Gustav and Heinz.

One lap back of the two mileage leaders was the Belgian-German team of Freddie Ottevaere and Gottfried Huertgen. Two laps away at the finish was a trio of teams, headed by Cecil Yates of Chicago and Piet Van Kempen of Holland, whose point total gave them an edge over the Canadian-Swiss pair of Jules Audy and Ernst Buhler and the Chicago-German team of Mickey Rodak and Willie Korsmeier. Trailing the field was the lone figure of Fernand Wambst, who did a solo for the last 25 minutes of the race following the withdrawal of his partner, Henri Le Page.

The Germans took the first sprints of the evening at 8:30 o'clock, with an attitude of boredom, but not so the Walthour-Crossley and Yates-Van Kempen combines. These teams went after their points so seriously that between them they monopolized first place in four of the sprints, Crossley taking the first, Van Kempen, the second, Yates the third, and Walthour the fourth. Kilian and Vopel were content with a second, a third, and a fourth in the series.

Attempts to Jam Fail.

Each of the leaders attempted to incite a jamming rebellion following the 8:30 sprints, but none got away. It was the team of Fielding and Zach which profited by these would be efforts. Within 25 minutes after 9 o'clock these two young men, who had formed the caboose team of the last day's riding, committed six lap thefts.

After they had won four straight, without a challenge, however, Ottevaere started the jam which increased the leaders' advantage to two laps just before the 9:30 sprints. Van Kempen and Yates set out in hot pursuit of Ottevaere and his partner, Huertgen, but neither could match the riding of the Kilian-Vopel and Walthour-Crossley combines, each of whom gained a lap, while the Ottevaere and Yates' teams found their exertion without profit.

Fielding and Zach picked up a couple of more laps after 10 o'clock, but were so exhausted by their tardy diligence that they both withdrew from the race.

Walthour Wins Pair.

The first of the rich, 72 point sprints found Walthour shifting into front position just before the bell lap and blocking Vopel out to the finish line. Jimmy then came back to take the second of the big dashes, beating out Kilian when the latter's bike wobbled just before the finish line. In the third sprint, Kilian avenged this by scampering away from Walthour with ease.

Kilian made it two in a row over Walthour, but only Gus' Grecian profile brought about the decision over the pugnosed Jimmy. This close victory gave the Germans the point edge again by a score of 807 to 733, and Kilian took the fifth sprint to make it 879 for his side. Buhler finally broke up the German-American monopoly by taking the sixth of the final dashes. Vopel grabbed the seventh, giving his team a lead of 1,017 to 744.

The results of the final hour sprints:

124TH ARTILLERY POLOISTS BEAT YALE, 16 TO 8

BY HOWARD BARRY.

The 124th Field Artillery polo team composed of Don Rice, Romeo Mura, and Russell Rasmussen defeated Yale, 16 to 8, before an overflow crowd last night in the 124th Artillery armory.

After spotting their opponents one goal by handicap, the Chicago players quickly tied the score, went to the front, and stayed there, showing superiority over their opponents in every chukker except the third.

Rice Scores Six Goals.

The Yale team, consisting of Ken Schiffer, Alan Corey Jr., and Mott Woolley, was somewhat handicapped by being mounted on borrowed ponies, but members of the Yale contingent stated that the players had no complaints about the horses.

Rice pounded in six goals while each of his teammates made four. In addition, Mura scored on a free hit and Rice's pony helped the team along by kicking one in. Corey and

New York, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham captured the classic Wanamaker mile tonight for the fifth time in six years, equaling the meet record of 4:11 as he scored decisively over four rivals in the feature event of the thirty-first Millrose A. A. games.

A capacity crowd of 16,000 spectators cheered Cunningham as he galloped home a dozen yards in front of his Kansas challenger, Archie San Romani, after it had cheered Columbia's sprinter, Ben Johnson, who twice broke the world indoor record for the 60 yard dash. A third winner who won great applause was Indiana's Don Lash, who took the two mile run in 9:06.

Wins on Last Lap.

Cunningham took complete command of the mile after San Romani and Lash shared the pacemaking for the first three laps. He successively fought off challenges by San Romani, Gene Venzke of the New York A. C., and Charles Fenske of Wisconsin. He ran the last lap in 59 seconds to win going away from San Romani. Fenske came up fast to nip Venzke for third place. Lash dropped out on the tenth lap of the 11 lap journey. Cunningham's time equaled the Wanamaker mile mark which he set in 1935 and Joe Mangan of Cornell duplicated in 1936.

After equaling the 15 year old mark of 6.2 seconds in his first test, Johnson stepped his semi-final heat in 6.1, then capped his performance by running the final in 6 seconds flat.

The colored flyer cracked the mark that first was established in 1923 by Loren Murchison and equaled subsequently by seven other sprinters. Johnson left all rivals, Herbert Thompson of the New York A. C., the runnerup, being four yards back.

Lash Overtakes McCluskey.

Lash overhauled Joe McCluskey of the New York A. C. in the stretch of the two mile run to win by two yards in 9:06, a new meet record, but eight

Boilermakers' Rally Brings Fourth Big Ten Victory

Lafayette, Ind. Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Purdue's basketball team rallied in the last ten minutes tonight to defeat Indiana, 38 to 36, before 8,500. It was the fourth victory in five Big Ten starts for the Boilermakers and their twelfth in thirteen starts for the season.

After the score was tied, 5 to 5, Indiana steadily pulled away and held the upper hand the remainder of the first half. The Hoosiers led at the rest period, 21 to 16, and increased their advantage to 32 to 24 midway of the second half.

Anderson Starts Rally.

Gene Anderson finally touched off the spark that started the Purdue machine on its way with a field goal from close in. Jewell Young and Johnny Sines followed with baskets which cut Indiana's margin to 32 to 30. Anderson then stole the ball from Ernest Andres and dribbled in to even the score.

Pat Malaska of Purdue and Marvin Huffman of Indiana traded field goals, as did Anderson and Bill Johnson of Indiana to leave the game tied at 36 to 36 with one minute to play. Malaska provided the winning points with a shot from the side and the Boilermakers protected their lead to the final gun. Lineup:

INDIANS RELEASE ALL CLAIMS ON LOU BOUDREAU

Delray Beach, Fla., Feb. 5.—(AP)—C. C. Slapnicka, vice president of the Cleveland Baseball club, said today he had authorized release of any claims by the club on the services of Louis Boudreau, University of Illinois athlete, if it will bring about Boudreau's reinstatement.

Boudreau, captain of the Illinois basketball team, was declared ineligible when it was disclosed the Cleveland club had lent his mother money on an oral promise that he would give Cleveland first call on his services at the end of his college career.

SPURLIN, BENNIS OUT.

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 5.—[U. P.]—Orval Spurlin and Bill Bennis, Illinois second string forwards, were declared ineligible today because they failed courses the first semester. Illinois now has seven players ineligible, including Capt. Lou Boudreau, Lew Dehner, Jim Cooley, Carter Cooley, and Ed Yeaton.

BRADLEY RALLY IN FINAL FIVE MINUTES FAILS

Notre Dame Whips Pitt, 51 to 17.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Bradley Tech's high hope of an undefeated basketball season grounded on the twin shoals of overeagerness and a sturdy Northwestern defense last night at Patten gymnasium. And so a throng of 6,000, one-third of it from Peoria, watched the Braves lose, 28 to 26, for their first defeat since one year ago on this same floor.

Bradley unquestionably has a splendid team, as witness the marksmanship displayed in the final five minutes, when the Peoria boys, trailing 11 points, cut the margin of their defeat to 2 points. But before that, and in particular in the opening period, during which Tech scored only 4 points, Bradley shot as wildly as a drunken rifleman. And the Wildcats passed the ball around the red shirted visitors with a dexterity infrequently displayed on their home court.

N. U. Leads at Half, 11 to 4.

It is a maxim in basketball that tenseness defeats accuracy and it never was proved more easily than last night, when Northwestern led, 11 to 4, at the intermission. Bradley couldn't find the range and Bradley seldom recovered the ball from either blackboard. In those twenty minutes, especially after a tie at 4 to 4, the Wildcats had complete control.

Bradley played with an excessive ambition that thwarted nearly every move in its eagerness to satisfy the 2,000 partisan fans who had come from Peoria to see it win over Northwestern as it had won from Indiana and Nebraska.

Bradley failed to shake its mood in the second period, and while Northwestern did not equal the earlier keen passing attack, the Wildcats moved to a 24 to 12 advantage with ten minutes left to play. Capt. Fred Trenkle and Jake Nagode, each scoring from under the backboard, established this margin.

Fouls Are Frequent.

Fouls were frequent at this stage and the score moved to 25 to 15 with all points added from the penalty line. Here Les Getz, Bradley guard, dropped a long shot from the side court, the longest Tech got of the evening, to signal an encouraging wave of enthusiasm from the west bleachers.

Jim Currie scored a point for Northwestern on a double foul as Getz missed his throw and Jean Smith's two free throws gave Northwestern the lead, 28 to 17. Northwestern now played deliberately. Carl Schunk and Ted Panish picked up three points on free throws before Bob Voigts and Panish each missed on another double foul.

Dar Hutchins, Bradley's leading scorer, hit from under for his second goal of the game, cutting Northwestern's lead to six points with a minute to play. Getz immediately scored on a quick break and then Paul Nunes, substitute guard, scored from the field. The game ended before Bradley regained possession of the ball.

NOTRE DAME WINS

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Notre Dame defeated Pittsburgh, 51 to 17, tonight before capacity crowd of 5,500, bringing to an end the Irish-Panther athletic relations.

It was by far the most decisive victory of the series, which ended with eleven Panther victories and ten for Notre Dame.

Notre Dame held Pitt to two field goals in the first half and to three in the final period. Sixteen minutes of the final period had elapsed before the Panthers made a basket.

Pitt used a shifting man to man defense the first half, but discarded it in favor of a zone defense in the second half without better results. Notre Dame reserves played the last ten minutes. The Irish led, 29 to 9, at the intermission. Lineup:

BADGERS WIN, 30-27

Madison, Wis., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Baskets by Charley [Bump] Jones and Hod Powell in the last minute gave Wisconsin's basketball team a 30 to 27 victory over Michigan State in the fieldhouse tonight.

Up to the final minutes, play was ragged and listless. To climax the proceedings the lights went out during the first half, holding up the game nearly three-quarters of an hour. With the crowd yelling for action, the band struck up a few snappy tunes and several members of the university fencing team gave a demonstration in the glare of automobile headlights.

Wisconsin was off to a 1 to 0 lead in the first minute on George Rooney's free throw, but Michigan State then took command to lead, 17 to 16, at the half.

It led most of the way during the second period before the Badgers put on their final spurt. Marty Sutt, Michigan State guard, led both teams in scoring with 12 points. Lineup:

MARQUETTE WINS

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Marquette's basketball team showed a reversal of form tonight in defeating Niagara university, 48 to 33, to give it an even break on its first eastern swing.

Marquette had shooting trouble in the first half but led at the intermission, 13 to 7. It ran the count to 30 to 11 early in the second half and then the reserves came in.

Erwin Graf, forward, was Marquette's high scorer with nine points, but Fred Liberti, Niagara guard, was tops for the night with fourteen points, most of them scored late in the second half.

DE PAUL TRIUMPHS

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 5.—(AP)—De Paul university of Chicago handed St. Louis university its eleventh straight basketball defeat tonight, 31 to 29. It was also the Billikens' fifteenth loss in nineteen games.

Smarting under their long series of reverses, the St. Louisans looked like anything but the team De Paul had beaten earlier in the season, 46 to 19. Their aggressive tactics provoked De Paul to three near fights.

With five minutes to play, the Billikens went into a 28 to 27 lead, but Norris sank a long field goal and Crowley followed with a setup to put De Paul ahead, 31 to 28. Mudd's free throw was St. Louis' last score. De Paul led at the half, 17 to 16.

PRO MAKES HOLE IN ONE.

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Art Manucy, assistant professional here, made a hole in one on the 170 yard fifth hole on the St. Augustine links today.

THEY'RE LEADING SCORERS IN BIG TEN BASKETBALL RACE

As the second half of the Big Ten basketball race opens the battle for scoring honors is close. One of the high point men is Ernest Andres of Indiana who has 66.

Pick Dehner of Illinois declared scholastically ineligible last week, faces loss of the lead as top conference scorer. Dehner, who has 97 points, will miss only two games, however, if he makes up the scholastic deficiency in an examination Feb. 17.

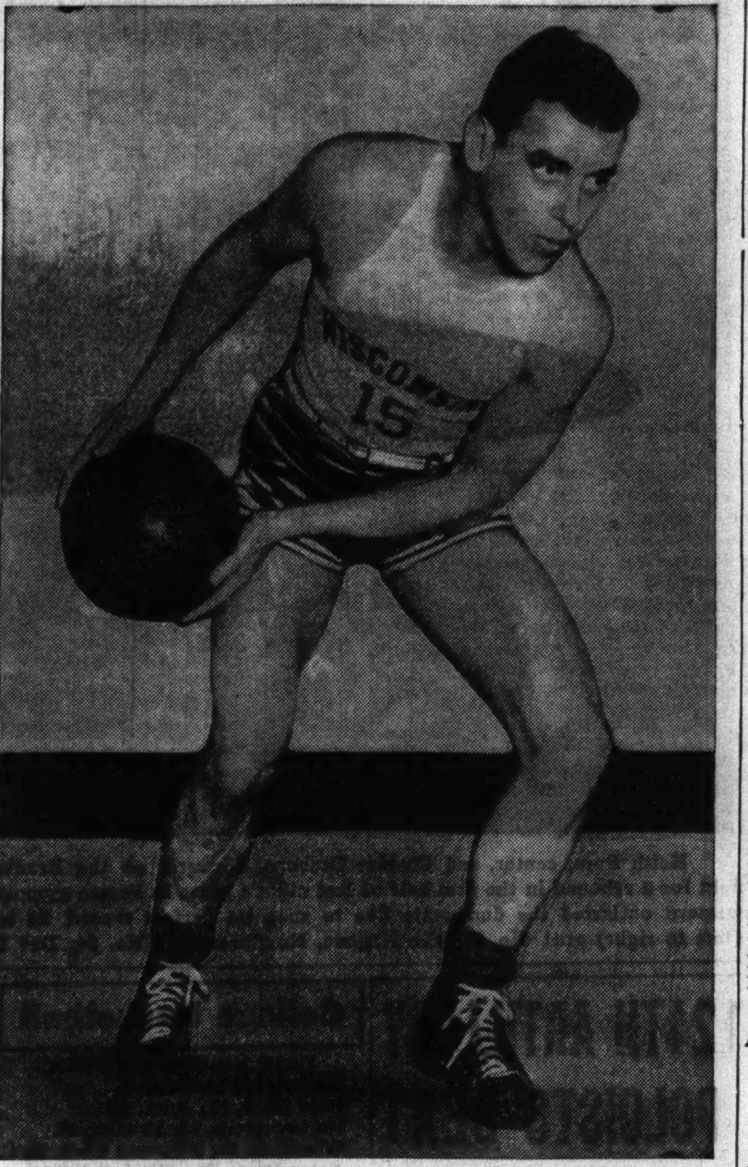
John Townsend of Michigan, star forward, has scored 61 points.

George Rooney of Wisconsin must be counted on also in the race for individual honors. He has scored 54 points.



Wisconsin's Hod Powell was tied with Indiana's Ernest Andres with 55 points before the latter passed him in the game against Purdue last night.

ALLISON WON'T QUIT; HE WANTS ANOTHER TITLE

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Wilmer Allison, the tall Texan who won the national singles title three years ago and retired from big time tennis, is coming back. One more try at the title he tossed to the youngsters in 1935 and another shot at the doubles laurels he shared for years with John Van Ryn is the plan of the former Davis cup player.

"I'll play in the national—singles and doubles—this season unless the old legs buckle up or something else goes wrong," Allison said. "My game doesn't worry me now. I haven't played since last July, but I've been practicing a bit recently and the shots are still there."

Starts in July.

Allison, in his early thirties, climaxed a grand career three summers ago in the blazing sun at Forest Hills when he defeated Fred Perry for the American title.

Apparently in fine physical condition, Allison said he planned to start his comeback campaign at the Longwood bowl tournament early in July. Last summer he brushed up his game, went east and won the Longwood title for the third time, gaining permanent possession of the trophy.

Texas Title His, Too.

The Texas state title also was his last year, but he was forced to default in the finals of both the Seabright and Illinois state tourneys because of physical difficulties.

Van Ryn, Allison's business as well as tennis partner, also got the feel of the courts again last summer with a brilliant splurge that carried him to victories over the younger players. Both are prepared to join forces in a new quest for doubles titles.

RECORDS FALL IN BRITISH EMPIRE TRACK GAMES

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Johnny Loaring of Windsor, Ont., set the pace today as the British empire games opened. Five new meet records were set in track and field.

Loaring set a mark of 52.9 seconds in the 440 yard hurdles for one of Canada's two victories. His time was three-tenths of a second slower than the world record set in 1927 by J. A. Gibson of the United States.

Jimmy Courtright of Ottawa gave Canada its other triumph by heaving the javelin 206 feet ¾ inch.

Besides Loaring the record breakers were Edwin Thacker of South Africa, 6 feet 5⅛ inches in the high jump; Decima Norman of Australia, 11.1 seconds in the women's 100 yard dash; C. H. Matthews of New Zealand, 13 minutes, 59.6 seconds in the three mile run, and V. P. Boot of New Zealand, 52.3 seconds in one of the heats of the 880.

Cyril Holmes of England won the 100 yard dash, placing first in his heat and semi-final and winning the final in 9.7 seconds. Denis Shore, South African Olympic quarter miler, was shut out in the semi-finals.

Melting Snow Defers U. S. Skating Meet

Petoskey, Mich., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Mild weather today postponed the opening events of the United States speed skating championship meet. The entire program is now scheduled for tomorrow.

When melting snow surrounding the site of the meet covered the track with several inches of water this morning, Henry Kemper of St. Louis, Mo., referee of the meet, decided to put off the races until tonight, but when conditions did not improve he decided on a one day delay.

Six senior men skaters here are entered in the Silver Skates Derby in Madison Square Garden, New York, Monday night, so further postponement will not be possible. Those entered in the New York meet are Vic Ronchetti and Bob Heckenbach, 1937 and 1938 Chicago Silver Skates winners, respectively; Don Johnson of Minneapolis, Minn.; Allan Potts and Joe Bree of New York, and Dick Werner of Haledon, N. J. They must leave here by train tomorrow night to catch a plane from Detroit.

Revolta Cards 73 in Storm at Sacramento

Sacramento, Cal. Feb. 5.—(AP)—Not one of the 90 contestants was able to equal par today in the second round of the $3,000 Sacramento open golf tournament. Rain drenched the course and the players most of the day. Fairways were flooded, greens were spotted with puddles and a chill, brisk wind added to the players' woes.

Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill., led at the end of the round, his 37—36—73 giving him a 36 hole score of 145. It put him in the lead by one shot, just ahead of Horton Smith of Chicago, who coupled a 75 with his first round 71.

Revolta, winner of the $10,000 Miami-Biltmore open last December and at present leading money winner for the winter tournament season, said he never had played a round under more difficult conditions.

Bulla in Third.

John Bulla of Chicago was in third place with a 147. He duplicated Revolta's 73, one over par, as did Tex Mann of Fort Worth, Tex., and John Dawson, Chicago amateur.

Mann tied at 148 with Tony Penna, Dayton, O., and Ben Hogan, Fort Worth. Dawson was at 149 tied with Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee on the Delaware, Pa.; Vic Ghezzi of Deal, N. J.; Frank Toronto, Sacramento amateur, and the Fry brothers, Earl of Alameda and Mark of Oakland. Earl Fry had been the first round leader with a 70.

Cooper Has Trouble.

Pre-tournament favorites who encountered trouble included Harry Cooper of Chicago, whose 77 put him in a tie with Jimmy Hines of Garden City, N. Y. Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., took 77 today and had 150. Sam Snead of West Virginia finished with 81 and a total 155.

Harold McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., and Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., were far back with 156's, McSpaden taking a 79 and Runyan a 77. Craig Wood of Rumson, N. J., withdrew after a miserable start.

Cardinals Add Bush, Benge to Pitching Staf

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Two veteran right handers, Guy Bush and Ray Benge, were added to the pitching staf of the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Vice President Branch Rickey announced the purchase of Bush from the Boston Bees and the signing of Benge, a free agent, "to take care of our reserve pitching until we see how things shape up."

Bush Record: W—176; L—135.

Bush, 34 years old, won 176 games and lost 135 in fifteen seasons in the National league. Benge, a year older, won 100 and lost 129 games in eleven major league seasons, including parts of two years in the American league.

Tall and thin, Bush joined the Chicago Cubs in 1923, became a regular in 1925 and from 1928 through 1934 rolled up fifteen or more victories each year. He was traded to Pittsburgh in November, 1934, and the Pirates sent him to the Bees during the 1936 season.

Declared Free Agent.

After two brief appearances with Cleveland, Benge went to the Philadelphia Nationals in 1928. He was traded to Brooklyn in December, 1932, and then to the Bees in December, 1935. He went back to the Phils in the midsummer of 1936.

He was declared a free agent after he had been suspended for refusing to report from Philadelphia to St. Paul of the American association last season.

BEARS FINALLY END FOOTBALL SEASON TODAY

Get Last Chance Against Redskins at Miami.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Chicago's Bears ready but "sorry that Bronko Nagurski and Bernie Masterson aren't with us," wound up preparations today for the final game of their long season tomorrow on Burdine Memorial field against the world champion Washington Redskins.

The Bears, here since Tuesday, have dispelled all feeling that they are here merely to go through the motions. Coach George Halas has put them through long workouts every morning and several blackboard drills.

Bears Are Mad.

The Chicago players are none too happy about their two defeats at the hands of the Redskins.

"We blew both games," Halas said today. "In Chicago we should have scored when we didn't, and we let them score when we could have stopped them. In the Texas game Pug Rentner knocked down that pass, intended for Wayne Millner, and the ball bounded into Millner's arms for a touchdown. It's time we stopped such foolishness."

Ronzani May Start.

Kieth Molesworth is listed as starting quarter back, but Halas said he may switch to Gene Ronzani. Carl Brumbaugh, veteran quarter back of the team, will get into the lineup and announced that this will be his last game. Next fall he will coach the backs, Halas said.

The Redskins have been drilling at Miami Beach. Sammy Baugh did not accompany the team, but arrived by plane Thursday. Riley Smith, former Alabama quarter back and a favorite here, will start with Baugh and Ernie Pinckert at the halves and Cliff Battles at full back. Coach Ray Flaherty has listed Millner and Charles Malone at the ends, Turk Edwards and Jim Barber at tackles, George Olsson and Chuck Young at guards, and Ed Kawal, a former Bear, at center.

A dry field and clear weather are predicted. The new stadium, seating 23,000, will be comfortably filled, advance sales indicate.

LEO FREISINGER BREAKS RECORD, BUT LOSES RACE

DAVOS, Switzerland, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Leo Freisinger of Chicago broke the world record for 500 meters as the world ice skating meet opened today, but was beaten out of first place by the Norwegian title holder, Hans Engnestangen, whose winning time was 41.8 seconds.

Freisinger crossed the finish line in 41.9, the best time ever made in the event by an American. Engnestangen's former world record was 42.3.

Freisinger took third place in the standings at the end of the first day with 940.40 points. He fell behind Ivar Ballangrud, Norway's triple Olympic champion, and Karl Wazulek of Austria by taking tenth place in the 5,000 meter race. Ballangrud held first place with 938.20 points and Wazulek second with 938.90.

Ballangrud won the 5,000 meter event in 8:22.2, with Charles Mathisen, his countryman, second in 8:25.5. Freisinger's time was 8:41.4.

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS.

New York Americans, 3; Montreal Canadiens, 3.

Tonight in the Stadium the Blackhawks, with a game and one-half advantage over the last place Detroit Red Wings, will battle the leading Boston Bruins, a club which they defeated, 3 to 2, when they met the last time in the Stadium Jan. 23. At the same time the Wings will meet the Montreal Canadiens, who are pressing the Toronto Maple Leafs for the lead in the International section.

Many replacements will be necessary in the Hawks' lineup for tonight's game since the team's hospital list now numbers March, Shill, Trudell, and Jackson. Tonight's Blackhawks will resemble a crazy quilt. Three former defense men. Seibert, MacKenzie, and Jenkins will be playing right wing. Only three defense men, Levinsky, Wiebe, and Johnson are left for rear guardsman duty. Two new forwards, Bert Connolly, obtained from the Springfield Indians of the International league, and Ivan Nicholson, a left winger obtained from the Kansas City Greyhounds, also will see action as Hawks for the first time tonight. Of the seventeen Hawks who started the 1937-'38 season only eight are left to play in the Boston game.

Unusual Combinations Likely.

The Bruins are the team to beat for the Stanley cup and the Hawks must beat them to keep alive their chances of getting in the elimination series. Tonight's lineup:

Artillery Turns on Power.

Twenty seconds after the start of the game the 124th Artillery overcame the one goal handicap under which it had started the game, Rice pitching a short shot to make it 1 to 1. Fifty seconds later Mura followed the rapidly rolling ball to within ten feet of the goal and slugged in another. Then Schiffer of Yale tied the score by poking one in from ten yards out. At this point the 124th Artillery turned on more power, Mura, Rasmussen, Rice, and then Rasmussen scoring in succession to make it 6 to 2 for the Chicago team at the end of the first chukker.

The Artillery continued its attack as the second period began, Rice knocking in a short one twenty seconds after the start of the chukker. Then Schiffer scored one for Yale on a skilfully executed nearside backhand shot from the boards. Again the Artillery came through with four points in succession, Rasmussen, Mura, Rice, and again Rasmussen scoring. Mura's was a free hit following Woolley's foul. Then Corey counted, making the score 11 to 4 in favor of the Artillery as the half ended.

Corey Scores Twice.

Corey scored from nearly half the length of the field as the third chukker began, and just before the finish of the period he poked in another after some frenzied action in front of the goal. No other points were scored during this period and the teams went into the final chukker with the Artillery leading, 11 to 6.

Mura got a clear shot at the goal fifteen seconds after the start of the fourth chukker and made it good. Mura repeated the shot a minute or two later. Rice's pony kicked in another for the Artillery, and soon after this Rice followed his horse's example. Then Schiffer made a spectacular goal for Yale by dribbling more than half the length of the field at high speed. Again Rice came through with a clever back hand shot that carried to the goal. After a jam directly in front of the goal, Woolley slammed in the point that ended the scoring, leaving it Artillery 16; Yale, 8.

The lineups:

Shamrocks Win, 12 to 5.

The Chicago Shamrocks kept their Metropolitan league record clear by beating Fort Sheridan, 12 to 5, in the Senior division game that opened the program. The Shamrocks now are tied with the Ramblers at two victories and no defeats, while the 124th Artillery heads the standing with three straight league victories.

Maj. Les Ireland led the Shamrock scoring with four goals, his team mate, Lieut. Chris Schuh making three. At no time after the first period was Fort Sheridan able to threaten. Lineups: seconds short of Lash's own indoor standard.

McCluskey opened up a twenty yard lead, with two laps to go, but Lash's closing spurt was too much for the veteran ex-Fordham runner. Don overtook and passed Joe in the last dozen strides.

Georgia's Forrest [Spec] Towns took the measure of A'lan Tolmich, Wayne university, in the final of the 60 yard high hurdles by a yard, but they shared a new world record of 7.4 seconds for the event. Tolmich erased the old mark of 7.5 seconds in his first trial, then Towns came back to equal the new record time in the semi-final and final tests.

The North Texas State Teachers quartet, comprising two pairs of twin brothers, came from behind to beat Indiana and smash the world indoor record for the medley relay of one and seven-eighth miles. Elmer and Delmer Brown, Wayne and Blaine Rideout ran the event in 7 minutes 27.5 seconds. This erased the former mark of 7:29.6, set by New York university in 1932.

Relay Mark Falls Twice.

Manhattan college's one mile relay team set a new Garden track record of 3:20.4 in beating the University of Pittsburgh quartet, anchored by John Woodruff, by twenty yards.

Manhattan's performance stood only long enough for the New York university quartet, featuring Jimmy Herbert, to reel off the mile relay in 3:20.2, clinching the Anderson Memorial trophy for the fastest mile relay of the meet. Ohio State finished second to New York university Summaries:

Cochran, already the three cushion billiard champion of the world, held the 18.2 title from 1932 until early last month when he lost it to the Chicago cue star in New York. Joca, a high school graduate, has ambitions to become a chemist.

Daniel Merritt, a marksman in the Ohio National Guard, became the heavyweight champion when he knocked out Lou Marn in the third round.

Billy Koerlin of Mantua, O., scored one of the biggest upsets of the tournament when he whipped Willie Muldune, city light heavyweight champion, in a slugging brawl.

Horace Gresham, gasoline station operator, carried off the middleweight title by beating Steve Malinky, a former novice champion and brother of Joe Malinky, who has appeared in Chicago on Plain Dealer teams.

John Giachette, former Pennsylvania state champion in 1935 and 1936, a motor expert, whaled away for three rounds to take a unanimous decision over Babe Marino.

MUNDEE WEDS IN LOG CHAPEL AT NOTRE DAME

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Fred Mundee, varsity football center for Notre Dame in 1936 and now assistant football coach at Mount Carmel High school of Chicago, was married here today to Miss Mary Katherine Vesy of Youngstown, O., Mundee's home town. The Rev. Thomas Brennan, C. S. C., performed the ceremony in the log chapel on the campus.

Mrs. John Jordan, wife of Mount Carmel's athletic director and former Notre Dame basketball captain, and Jack Mundee, Fred's brother, were witnesses.

Von Schacht, Nagurski Will Meet on Mat

Wrestling will share headline honors with boxing on this week's calendar. Bronko Nagurski, Chicago Bears full back, who claims the heavyweight wrestling championship, meets Fritz von Schacht of Germany in a one hour bout in the Coliseum Tuesday. An eight round meeting between Harvey Woods, St. Paul junior lightweight, and Sammy Angott of Louisville tops the fight card in Marigold Gardens tomorrow.

Nagurski won his claim to the title by defeating Dean Detton in 53 minutes in Minneapolis last June 29. In a return bout the 235 pound Nagurski threw Detton in 40:00 in Los Angeles Olympic arena Sept. 29 before an overflow crowd of 10,500. He won all his matches since then with the exception of a one hour draw he wrestled with Ray Steele in Minneapolis Jan. 4.

Nagurski resumed his victory march in his next appearance, however, by conquering Gus Sonnenberg in Milwaukee Jan. 7. Victories followed over Abe Kashey in Camden, N. J., Jan. 10; Sammy Cohen, Reading, Pa., Jan. 11, and John Sullivan, Washington, D. C., Jan. 13. He then became ill and entered Ravenswood hospital for treatment of a leg infection. He left the hospital Jan. 20.

Angott, former student at Trinity High school in Washington, Pa., and Woods, once a protege of Mike Gibbons, are evenly matched. Sammy has the better record, but Woods' accomplishments in recent weeks place him on a par with his opponent. Harvey is undefeated in his last seven starts. After whipping Henry Huerta, Kid Sila, and Paul Lee, he held Kid Irish to a draw in Marigold Gardens Nov. 15. Subsequently he scored a technical knockout over Mike Battalino, stopping Sila in a rematch, and beat Jimmy Legrone.

Boxing and wrestling matches on this week's schedule include:

Tomorrow.

At Marigold Gardens—Sammy Angott vs. Harvey Woods, junior lightweights, and Henry Schaft vs. Bob Monte, welterweights, each eight rounds; George White vs. Harry Fredrickson [4], welterweights.

Tuesday.

Wednesday.

Friday.

U. S. SWEEPS STAR BOAT RACES WITH A TEAM VICTORY

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 5.—(AP)—The United States completed its sweep of the International Star Class Yacht regatta today by defeating Cuba in a team race. Previously, Harry G. Nye Jr. had won the Bacardi cup with the southern Lake Michigan fleet entry, Gale, and Harold Halstead had accounted for the Cuba trophy with Chuckle from the Moriches bay fleet.

The invading yachtsmen outscored the Cubans, 25 to 12, with Adrian Iselin II. sailing Ace of the western Long Island sound fleet into first place.

Nye finished second with Gale and Paul H. Smart, from the central Long Island sound fleet, took third with Melody. The Cuba yacht, Santoy, skippered by Eddy Smith, prevented the United States from making a clean sweep by finishing fourth in front of Halstead's Chuckle.

RUUDS HEAD SKI FIELD IN CENTRAL STATES MEET

Big time ski jumping returns to the heart of Chicago today with a field of 125 competing in the third annual Soldiers' field tournament for the central states championship.

Despite the mild weather of last week the ski meet will go on as scheduled at 1:30 p. m. Snow was imported from Escanaba, Mich., and a crew worked last night preparing the slide for the jumpers.

A strong field will leap for titles in the four standard classes—A, B, C, and senior. Heading the skiers are Norway's famous Ruuds—Birger, the world and Olympic champion, and Sigmund, present holder of the United States championship.

Ruuds Hold 300 Foot Marks.

The Ruuds finished one, two in the recent Norge Ski club meet. Each has made 300 foot jumps in competition. Sigmund, the elder of the brothers, has the better mark—311 feet. Birger's best was 10 feet less.

Another threat for the central title, which formerly was a closed fixture, is Alf Engen, champion long distance jumper of America. Engen, now a member of the Sun Valley, Idaho, club, did 296 feet in 1932.

The central division will be represented by its strongest contingent. Leading the home defense are the Bietilas of Ishpeming, Mich.—Paul, Walter, and Leonard. The two younger Bietilas, Roy and Ralph, will jump in the boys' class, composed of youngsters under 18 years old.

Winter sports carnival events will be added features of the program. Norval Baptie and Gladys Lamb, Dorothy Lewis, Duke and Noble and the Chicago figure skating group are scheduled for performances on the Soldiers' field skating rinks, while Earl Hammond, Alaskan musher, is on the program for an exhibition of husky sled dog racing and handling. Butler Bowlers Hit 3,201; Randolph League's 2d High

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

A team that bowls 3,201 on the Randolph alleys is entitled to a few bouquets and, of course, a few games tacked on to the won side of the ledger.

In the last session of the Randolph league the Joseph J. Butlers put together games of 1,066, 1,078, and 1,057 while compiling 3,201, the second highest total of the season in the Randolph league. Against that kind of bowling the Sunkist Pies, led by Al Lea, president of the Chicago American Bowling congress tournament committee, were helpless in the three games rolled.

Main contributors to the success of the Butlers, who climbed into a third place tie with the Budweisers as a result of their victories, were Pete Petersen, 713; Joe Heinreich, 687, and Si Lock, 635. The Butlers and the Budweisers now have 33 victories and 21 defeats apiece.

By winning three games from Boyar-Schultz the Birk Brothers took undisputed possession of first place. The Mineralites had shared the top rung, but they lost one of three games to the Beich Candies. The Birks have 39 victories and 15 defeats, and the Mineralites' record shows 38 and 16.

In the individual race there also is a Birk-Mineralite duel, for Jules Lellinger of the Birks has a 210 average and Bud Wright of the Mineralites has 208. It was only recently that Wright relinquished the individual leadership.

On South Side Alleys.

The Bruck-Wiesner quintet piled up a 3,131 series that topped the Bruck Major league. Best individual shooters were Bob Hayes, 695; Bill Buckley, 694; Leo Rollick, 667; Tom Crowe, 667; Ed Anderson, 662, and Eddie Boyle, 652. . . . The leading Haggard & Marcusson team is beginning to weaken in the Southwest Industrial league, and now tops the Marquette Park Motors by only one game. The pace setters have lost their last two series. . . . The Dudeck Coals are keeping up their fast pace with 35 won and 16 lost in the South End Traveling league.

Windy City League.

The Budweisers drew away to a two game lead in the Windy City Major league by sweeping their series with the Whitecaps while the second place Serrano Cigarros and the third place O'Keefe Coals were winning two out of three. The climb of the champion Mineralites was halted by Boyar-Schultz, which took two out of three close games. Leading individuals were Drs of Town Club of Cicero, 669; Lenzen of O'Keefe Coals, 668; Broderdorf of De Young Fuel, 667; Theel of Budweisers, 659; Gordon of Boyar-Schultz, 656; Wilman of Budweisers, 652, and Slanina of Serrano Cigarros, 650.

North End Traveling League.

Although they totaled 3,161, the Schamberger Schlitz five lost two games to the leading Birk Brothers, who piled up 3,149. The Kruse Stations vaulted into second place by handing the Michelobs a three game setback. The Richter Sausages won three from the Pepsi-Colas, the Budweisers took three from Keeley, and Fox De Luxe grabbed the odd game from the Samuelsons. Leading individual scorers were Leo Krisch, 689; Harry Kaad, 678; Joe Heinreich, 670, and Dick Johnson, 660.

On North Side Alleys.

Bob Hoisington's 684 led the Triangle Shirts to three victories over Gold Coast in the Gold Coast Major league. Stan Dombrowski and Bill Vanek helped with 643 and 637, respectively, and as a result the Triangles topped the league with 3,003. The Budweisers, led by George Miller with 670, swept over the Gold Crown Beers, and the Joseph Gills, paced by Joe Sinke's 653, blanked the Virginia club. In other matches Fritzi Scheff Cigars won three from the Williams Jewelers, the Jolly Jacks took the odd game from the Keeley Beers, and the leading Fuller Press five won a pair from the Marx Restaurant. Fourteen members of the league are over 200, the leaders being Sinke with 218 and Bill Hardagon with 210. . . . George Bland of the North Cicero Recreation shot games of 235, 268, and 237 for a record 740, but since the series was rolled on his home alleys it will not bring him a prize when the Chicago North Side Traveling league cuts up its cash melon at the end of the season. Other high series: Joe Aubert, 653; Pat Panzek, 648, and Ed Early, 621.

The Mee & Ramme Undertakers, who have been burning up the Samuelson Arcade league for three weeks, walloped the Fritzi Scheffs three times and knocked that team from first to fourth place. There now is a three way tie for the lead involving Mee & Ramme, Budweisers, and Fries-Malwitz. Clarence Steinke, Mee & Ramme anchor man, boosted his average to 208 with a 680 series.

Here and There.

A team of 20 men from Olympia Fields totaled 11,766 to beat a group of men from the Lake Shore Athletic club by 10 pins on the Stevenson Recreation alleys. Fred Aylesworth of Olympia rolled high game of 236. In a match between women of the same clubs Lake Shore totaled 11,798 and defeated Olympia by 63 pins. Mrs. Alice Weber of Lake Shore shot high game of 225. . . . The 14th annual Husband and Wife tournament, opening next Saturday at the Samuelson Arcade, has drawn a record entry, according to Jack Samuelson, who yesterday said a third Saturday [Feb. 26] will be necessary to accommodate the squads. . . . The Disbursing team, with 41 victories and 22 defeats, is setting the pace in the Harvester Club league. Golchert is high individual with a 189 average. . . . Pete Howley lined up 40 booster teams on the Bensinger squad which will shoot in the American Bowling congress tournament in the Coliseum on March 14. One of the teams is composed of Chicago judges who are members of the Chicago Bar Association league. . . . Milwaukee Pabsts, with 4,148 for four games, won the Gold Coast challenge championship event, and another Milwaukee outfit, the Heil Products, was second with 4,105.

Barney Hochstadter announces the Cook County American Legion Bowling association's tournament will be held Feb. 26 and 27 and March 5 and 6 in his Archer-35th Street Recreation. It is open to all Legionnaires in the county, with competition on both a scratch and a handicap basis. . . . Joe Signorello was the hottest of the Peoples Gas Club league bowlers with 656. Next were Leo Rollick, 631; Ed Frick, 621; Angelo La Rocco, 618; Ed Kopp, 614; Frank Barth, 610; Maurice Edgeworth, 605, and John Niesen, 602. . . . In the Borden-Wieland league Walter Hedin had games of 203, 199, and 254 for 656. Thor Jacobson shot a 250 game, Ollie Jensen a 234, and Hank Jensen a 227.

Estimates Record 4,700 Teams Will Compete in A. B. C.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Elmer H. Baumgarten, secretary of the American Bowling congress, estimated tonight the entry in the A. B. C. meet opening March 3 at the Chicago Coliseum probably would reach an all-time high of 4,700 teams.

He said the entries of 3,700 teams had already been received, and that the registrations of about 1,000 Chicago pin clubs would be filed Monday.

A high of 4,017 teams was established in 1937 at New York, Baumgarten said, with receipts totaling $218,000. Returns this year are expected to surpass $275,000, about $215,000 of which has already been banked.

Baumgarten reported the return of a New Jersey team lineup listing only four men with the request Chicago's Mayor E. J. Kelly function as the fifth.

Wins $6,120 Handicap at Hialeah.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Lavengro led from start to finish of today's $6,120 Bahamas handicap, a prep for the $20,000 Flamingo, and established himself as a much more formidable candidate than the highly touted Lawrin. The latter, made favorite in a field of nine, finished up the stretch as Norman W. Church's California color bearer led home the field at the end of seven furlongs timed in 1:24 2-5.

Co-Sport was second to the wire, a half length in front of the lightly weighted Sketch Book. After that the order of finish was Roar, Galapas, Evening Shadow, Bourbon King, Lawrin, and Knee Deep.

Lawrin a Puzzle.

There was no explanation of Lawrin's indifferent effort, unless the top weight of 126 pounds was too much. Yct Lavengro carried 124 and made so light of it that he was able to show the way from the beginning, and then stave off the late bids of Co-Sport and Sketch Book. The others were never in the contest.

Lavengro's share of the purse was $4,370. The winner returned $14.40, $6.10, and $5.20. He is a black gelding by Diavolo out of Inquisition. While Lavengro never has looked especially like a stayer in his races, he has staying blood behind him, Diavolo being very tenacious over a distance. Lavengro finished out handsomely this afternoon, but to some observers he has yet to prove that he likes a route better than a sprint.

Rain Fails to Slow Track.

Hireling, purchased yesterday by the Maemere farm from the Woolford farm, won at the first asking in the opening race under the handling of Porter Roberts. Despite a heavy shower just before race time, the track remained fast and the winning son of Higher and Kirk Lady was timed in :33 4-5. This is a pretty fast performance out of the nursery chute and it enabled Hireling to score by two lengths.

The price was $12.80, with Sweet Patrice and Selmalad driving their best to get the lesser places. The daily double reached $55.70 when Greentree stable's Gangplank was a decisive winner of the second, returning $12.40. This victory added one more to Jocky Eddie Arcaro's string of victories. He is the leading rider of the meeting and the victory with Gangplank brought his total to twenty.

IT'S SUN EGRET AGAIN

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Sun Egret won his third straight major engagement at Santa Anita today and placed himself as the candidate to beat in the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby Feb. 22.

The son of Sun Briar, piloted by Jocky Alfred Schelhammer and carrying the silks of A. C. Compton, won the $5,000 San Vincente handicap over a field of thirteen 3 year olds, virtually all of which are nominees for the coming Derby.

Ral Parr's Legal Light, coupled with Sun Egret as an entry, finished second in the seven furlong feature event of the day, a neck behind, and Tony Pelletri's Sir Raleigh third.

Sun Egret won the $5,000 San Pasqual at seven furlongs last Saturday, the $5,000 Santa Maria early in January, and packed top weight of 125 pounds today. His time was 1:25.2 over a slow track. Sun Egret paid $6.80, $6.80 and $4.20. Thirty-five thousand turned out for the program, and wagered $155,618 on the San Vincente.

CHICAGO DOG FANCIERS SHIP TO WESTMINSTER

New York Show Will Open Thursday.

BY BOB BECKER.

Dog fanciers in the central states have been grooming their best dogs for the Westminster show which will be held in New York Thursday, Friday and Saturday. When this important show opens the management expects about 3,000 dogs on the benches.

Before the Westminster show starts the Associated Terrier Clubs will hold their specialty shows in Commerce hall, New York. Ten clubs are in this group including the Airedale Terrier Club of America, Bedlington Terrier Club of America, Bull Terrier Club of America, Cairn Terrier Club of America, American Fox Terrier club, Scottish Terrier club, American Sealyham Terrier club, Welsh Terrier Club of America, and the West Highland White Terrier Club of America.

Compete in Own Shows.

On Wednesday, the day preceding the opening of the Westminster show, members of these clubs will be competing within their respective club circles in specialty shows. Many Chicagoland breeders plan on attending both the specialty and the Westminster shows, some of them showing dogs in each event.

Among the Chicagoland breeders and dog fanciers who have entered dogs in the Westminster show may be mentioned Chris Casselman and Tom Halpin, who have devoted many years to the breeding of collies. They will show Hertzville Headstone [specials only], Hertzville Historian [was best of breed in the recent Chicago show], Hertzville Hottentot, and Hertzville Head Study.

Dr. Searle Enters Setters.

Dr. C. H. Searle, a prominent Gordon setter breeder, is sending several of his Gordons to compete for honors in the Westminster show. Among them will be Ch. Valiant Nutmeg o' Serlway, Valiant of Serlway, Janet of Serlway, Bobbie Burns of Serlway, Roderick of Serlway, and the imported Downside Bonnie of Serlway. The Shannon View Irish Terrier kennel is showing its new imported champion Irish terrier, both in the specialty show and in the Westminster event.

Paul W. Moser, cocker fancier of Chicago, announces that he has entered three dogs for the Westminster show. Two of them are American bred English cockers. Dr. Noel S. Young of Lake Forest, Sealyham terrier breeder, leaves for New York tomorrow with several puppies and his new American and English champion Sealyham, Hillsome Speedwings. Janet H. Henneberry, Chicago springer spaniel fancier, is giving her champion springer spaniel, Dunoon Donald Dhu a chance to meet the best springers in the country as she has entered this dog, which has made a number of sporting group victories in recent months. These and many other central states dogs of various breeds will be ready for the Westminster show judges next Thursday.

50 Pilots Race in 10 Midget Auto Events

Wally Zale.

Fifty automobile race drivers from all parts of the country, including feature winners of the last month, will face the starter tonight in a 10 event program in the 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue. The races will start at 8:30 o'clock.

The fastest racing of the year is expected with the return to competition of Shorty Sorenson of Evanston, Harry MacQuinn of Indianapolis, and Cowboy O'Rourke, a Chicago favorite. Art Hartsfeld of Toledo and Johnny Ritter of Detroit also are entered.

During the absence of these drivers last week feature honors went to Harry Lewis and Duke Nalon of Chicago, Marshall Lewis of Los Angeles, and Karl Hattel, another west coast driver.

The main event tonight will be a 25 lap race for which the drivers will qualify in four elimination races. The nonqualifiers will contest a consolation race. Throughout the races tonight the drivers will qualify also for the Valentine handicap, a 100 lap race, to be held on Sunday evening, Feb. 13.

SECURITY SHORT SELLING RULES ARE CLARIFIED

Exchange Discloses Changes by SEC.

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Interpretations of the new short selling rules of the Securities and Exchange commission were sent today by the New York Stock exchange to its members, accompanied by a letter which revealed that they had been amended and improved by experts of the commission. The exchange also issued instructions for specialists, floor brokers, bond brokers, floor traders, and brokers in inactive stocks.

Except in the case of "when-issued" trading [trading in securities not yet actually issued], the interpretation as a whole clarifies without altering the general understanding of the SEC rules which become effective Feb. 8. By expanding considerably the definition of "ownership of securities" to include contracts to buy them or possesion of convertible securities, rights, or warants, the circular makes sales of when-issued stock on national exchanges possible.

Violations Are Criminal.

It also emphasizes, in its restatement of the general rule, the thesis that "any persons who effects . . . any short sale in violation of the rule may be guilty of a criminal offense."

Part one of the circular defines a short sale as the sale of any security which the seller does not own, or which is consummated by the delivery of a borrowed security because the original security is not at once available. The rule thus includes "many sales which would ordinarily be regarded as long sales," the circular states.

The general prohibition against short sales at or below the last regular sale price does not apply, the circular declares, to [1] any person selling a security which he owns and intends to deliver as soon as possible without undue inconvenience or expense, or [2] any member of the exchange executing a sell order marked "long" for an account in which he has no interest, or [3] any sale of an odd lot.

Includes Most Securities.

Part two says the rule applies in general to all securities dealt in on any national securities exchange, other than government or municipal securities.

Part three states that the rule does not apply to sales not made on a national securities exchange.

Part four includes instructions for the marking of orders as to whether they are long or short.

The fifth part says: "A person is deemed to own a security if [1] he or his agent has title to it or [2] he has purchased or has entered into an unconditional contract, binding on both parties, to purchase it, but has not yet received it, or [3] he owns a security convertible into or exchangeable for it and has tendered such security for conversion or exchange, or [4] he has an option to purchase or acquire it and has exercised such option, or [5] he has rights or warants to subscribe to it and has exercised such rights or warants."

When He Doesn't Own It.

He is not deemed to own a security if he owns securities convertible into or exchangeable for it, but has not tendered such for conversion or exchange, or if he has an option or own rights or warants entitling him to such security, but has not exercised them.

Part 6 asserts no short sale may be made at or below the last "regular way sale." This applies to short sales made for delayed delivery, seller's option, as well as those made the regular way. A short sale at the opening must be above the last regular way sale price, regardless of when the last sale occurred and irrespective of whether the security has meantime been quoted ex-dividend or ex-rights. If a security is dealt in on two or more exchanges the last regular way sale on the particular exchange involved is controling. The rule applies even though the last regular way salew as itself a short sale. Thus, the circular points out, if a short seller offers 500 shares and sells only 100 shares he must offer the rest ⅛ of a point higher.

Rule on "When Issued" Trade.

Part 7 states that the rule applies to "when issued" securities in the same manner as issued securities, and a person is deemed to be the owner of a "when issued" security if he has entered into a binding contract to buy it, or will be entitled to receive it without payment of consideration.

Part 8 deals with covering transactions with particular reference to "buy in" transactions which relate to failure to deliver a security sold under an order marked "long." [This refers to transactions between members of the exchange.]

Section 9 covers loans of securities between members, and states that a member may lend securities to another member without regard to the rule and without inquiry as to the purpose of the loan. The circular states, however, that "the lending member may none the less be criminally liable for a violation of the short selling rules if he knows that the borrower intends to violate such rules."

Court Approves $145,000 Bid for Prima Company

If He Sells and It Isn't His'n, Let 'm Beware

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

He who sells what isn't his'n
Must buy it back or go to pris'n.

Bernard M. Baruch. Defends short selling.

Not far from a century ago this couplet first made the rounds in Wall street. These words, legend says, were those of Daniel Drew. Whether he was the author makes no difference. They still define the underlying principle of selling securities short—if you sell stocks you don't own, you've got to buy them back some day.

Nothing in the history of stock exchanges has engendered such a continuing controversy as "short selling." For three centuries or so there has been agitation, laws, repeal of these laws, more agitation, more laws.

In all this, one thing generally has stood out: The agitation and laws have followed the bursting of a "boom" bubble.

Controversy in 1610.

In 1610, in one of the earliest instances on record, the Netherlands government enacted a law prohibiting short sales. It was adopted at the instigation of the all powerful Dutch East India company after its shares had fallen sharply on the Amsterdam stock exchange, with an ensuing panic.

The Dutch East India officials blamed it all on short sales by speculators. The stock exchange, in reply, said the shares were sold short because they were much too high on the basis of the company's earnings. Furthermore, exchange officials charged the company with pushing up the stock to unjustifiable heights.

Happens in England.

The same thing happened all over again in 1733 in England. Investors were scrambling for shares in the South Sea company. Stock exchange crowds were hysterical over the heights one day. And the next day the bubble burst and the crowds were hysterical in the depths. The shorts were blamed; a law was passed.

Both the Dutch and English laws, however, were subsequently repealed. Repeal, too, was the lot of the first law passed in this country.

In the critical times of 1812, when the young republic was at war with the "mother country," the New York state legislature prohibited the sales of securities short. At that time, the law meant little to Wall street. Only about a dozen issues of banks and insurance companies were traded on the exchange. Between 1830 and the middle of the century, however, dozens of canal and railroad stocks were admitted to trading. Opposition to the law was rampant. It was repealed in 1858.

Raiding Arouses Public.

The controversy, however, continued. The poreations of Drew, Jay Gould, and others kept the agitation astir. The "bear raiding" of these operators—who would keep hammer-away at the market, unloading the stock they owned, selling millions of more shares short—aroused public opposition. In later years, the controversy reached its heights in the panic years following 1907 and 1929—that is, after the public was caught in the collapse of the booms.

In part, also, the controversy has raged between the "bulls" and "bears" among the speculators. The "bears," selling short, hoped to wreck the booms of the "bulls." That is, they would sell a stock short at, say, 100, hoping by their operations to drive it down to 80, or 60, or 40, buy it at that price, make delivery, and reap a fortune. The "bulls" often have protested as loudly and vigorously as the general public. W. C. Durant, for example, always fought the "bears." He was always riding the boom.

Risk in Short Selling.

Short selling is not without its risks. Shorts have been wiped out time and again when they misjudged the trends. Too, they must borrow stock with which to make delivery on the shares they have sold, sometimes having to pay premiums on it. They remain borrowers of stock until they actually buy stock for delivery to the lender and if dividends are declared in the meantime, the shorts have to pay the lender the dividend on the stock they have borrowed.

Bernard M. Baruch, who frankly characterized himself as a "speculator" before the congressional committee some years ago, is one of the financiers who have defended the short sale.

MILWAUKEE RAILROAD MAY SPEND 3 MILLION FOR NEW EQUIPMENT

The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad may soon spend $3,000,000 for new equipment, officials of the road indicated yesterday. Application of the company, which is in receivership, to the federal court for authority to make the purchases will probably be made this week.

It is expected that the road will seek permission to buy 55 passenger cars, 464 flat cars and four passenger locomotives. The cars would be built in the road's Milwaukee shops, and the locomotives would be purchased.

Trustees of the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad asked the interstate commerce commission for authority to issue $2,000,000 of trustee certificates to finance improvements and equipment.

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—For the first time in history, seats on the Toronto Stock exchange, with 506 listed stock issues and 92 members holding its 113 memberships, are quoted above those on the New York Stock exchange, a survey revealed today. Only a small amount of bonds is listed on the Canadian exchange.

Toronto memberships are quoted at $60,000 bid, $85,000 offered, with the last sale five months ago at $85,000. The 1937 range was from $60,000 to $85,000. Seats on the New York Stock exchange, with 1,259 listed stocks and 1,376 listed bonds, and a membership of 1,375, are quoted at $57,000 bid, $69,000 offered.

Canadian Outlook Improves.

The improved business outlook in Canada, where mining prospects are regarded by well informed persons as exceedingly good, is a factor in the rise in the price of seats on the Toronto exchange, as is the limited number of memberships.

Greater freedom from regulation in Canada as compared with the United States, where brokers and security dealers are compelled to operate under restrictions of various types, encouraged the demand for seats in the leading Canadian market.

Trading in Toronto in 1937 totaled 276,519,107 shares, while in the same period trading on the New York Stock exchange totaled 409,464,570 shares and $2,792,531,000 face value of bonds.

Montreal Exchange Figures.

The Montreal Stock exchange is much smaller than the Toronto market, there being eighty members, who also hold seats on the Curb market in that city. As a consequence, the figures in trading volume and the number of issues, as well as value, are combined. Trading on the Montreal Stock exchange and Curb in 1937 totaled 2,861,425 shares, valued at $583,571,446.

Seats on the Montreal Stock exchange sold last year at $46,000, while the most recent transaction of a seat on the Curb there was in January, at $17,500. Thus the combined membership is $63,500, which also is above that of the New York Stock exchange. Those two markets, like Toronto and other Canadian centers, suffer less from governmental restrictions than exchanges in the United States.

NATIONAL BANKS PROFIT IN YEAR BEST SINCE 1920

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The fiscal year 1937 was the most profitable for national banks since 1920, the federal reserve board reported today.

The board's monthly bulletin said in the year ended June 30, 1937, the national banks earned net profits, available for dividends, of $8.93 for every $100 of invested capital. This compared with $7.64 in the previous year, the low point of a $10.11 deficit in 1934 and the record profit of $10.76 in 1920. Per $100 of loans and investments the profit ratio was $1.37, compared with $1.20 the previous year.

The board pointed out that interest on loans and investments declined in recent years, but banks offset this with lower interest payments on time deposits. Profits also were bolstered slightly by imposition of service charges and introduction of new types of loans, such as instalment and personal loans, which pay higher interest rates than normal commercial loans.

CUBAN CONGRESS DECIDES TO PAY EXTERNAL DEBT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Feb. 5.—Both chambers of congress, by overwhelming majorities, tonight approved a bill "for the fulfilling of Cuba's international obligations and recuperation of credit." The main features of the new measure follow:

Cuba will pay $40,000,000 on outstanding bonds through a new issue, with interest at 4½ per cent, and 25 per cent of interest in arrears since June 30, 1933.

The Purdy & Henderson Construction company, an American firm, will be paid part of an obligation of $2,069,859 with bonds of new issue. The money is owed the company for the construction of the $18,000,000 capitol building.

STEEL MAKERS, UNION TO BEGIN WAGE, HOUR PARLEYS TOMORROW

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Negotiations between the John L. Lewis steel workers organizing committee and the United States Steel corporation will start Monday, probably in New York City. Renewal of contracts between the union and 463 steel manufacturers and fabricators is involved.

First on the list for the negotiations is Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, biggest subsidiary of United States Steel. Last year, Carnegie-Illinois, pace maker for the industry, agreed to a contract which established the $5 day and five day 40 hour week for the men of the mills. This year the workers may ask a $6 day wage and a five day 30 hour week, it is reported.

Only a week ago, however United States Steel announced a reduction in salaries for white collar workers approximating 9 per cent, by cutting the work week from 5½ days to 5 days. However, many interests believe the union contracts will be renewed.

COURT RETURNS AUTO DATA TAKEN IN FEDERAL QUIZ

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Federal Judge F. A. Geiger today ordered returned to the Chrysler corporation and the Commercial Credit company records which the government obtained during a grand jury investigation into automobile financing practices. The court, in directing immediate return of the documents, rejected the government's plea that they be impounded for 90 days pending the start of a new investigation.

The grand jury which made the investigation was dismissed by Judge Geiger in December. He ruled the attorney general's department went beyond the bounds of propriety in discussing a consent decree with representatives of Chrysler, Ford Motor company, and General Motors corporation while the grand jury was considering the question of indictments.

Attorneys for Chrysler told Judge Geiger he no longer had jurisdiction over the records. E. J. Koelzer, assistant district attorney, argued the court could impound them through use of its equity powers. The Ford and General Motors records still are in Washington.

INDUSTRY INDEX FALLS TO 70.2%; 98.9% A YEAR AGO

New York, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Industrial activity dropped sharply this week, with many important industries slumping to new lows for the current recession. The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index broke to 70.2 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 72.2 last week and compared with 98.9 a year ago.

Every component except cotton manufacturing declined. Automobile output, electric power production, residential building, and freight carloadings sank to new low ground for the last two years or more.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on the latest available statistics, compared as follows:

	Latest Week.	Previous Week.	Year Ago.

STEEL OUTPUT GAIN IN CHICAGO AREA EXPECTED

Steel ingot production in the Chicago area this week is expected to rise 2½ points to 23.6 per cent of plant capacity, Dow, Jones & Co. estimated yesterday. This would still be 0.8 point below the rate of a month ago.

Pittsburgh steel operations are expected to continue unchanged at approximately 28 per cent of capacity. Increased production by independents will offset a reduction by the leading interest, the report said.

British Loan Plan Believed Safety Move

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Sir John Simon.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Relaxation of government control of foreign lending, announced this week by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, is regarded in market circles as a new move for development of this country's export trade to guard against the danger of a slump.

The easing of restrictions, the chancellor said, will apply to two classes of loans: First, borrowing by British empire companies or governments wishing to spend money in foreign countries, and second, purchases of large blocks of foreign owned stocks.

"Indiscriminate" sanction for foreign investments are not contemplated by the British government, the chancellor warned, and loans "in behalf of foreign governments, foreign local public authorities, or state controled organizations" are still ruled out.

Principles Are Obscure.

Although the change in policy is welcomed in banking and foreign exchange circles as tending to increase freedom in the London market, the principles on which the restrictions will be relaxed remain obscure.

Treasury control of foreign lending is still a fundamental part of London's financial machinery, and all transactions, it seems, will continue to be subjected to the advisory committee's supervision.

The chancellor's statement indicates, however, that in future British companies will be permitted to obtain money in London for the development of mining and similar projects in foreign countries, whereas previously the money had to be spent in the empire exclusively. In addition, British investment trusts and insurance companies will be permitted to buy American securities more freely.

Urged by Van Zeeland.

The government's decision is interpreted as a belated gesture toward the resumption of international lending which Paul van Zeeland, former Belgian prime minister, who recently completed a survey of world economic affairs, and the chairmen of British banks have been urging to stimulate trade.

The British government's ban on foreign lending has been operating so long that it has tended to divert the channels of finance for enterprises domiciled abroad from the public issue market to private financing. The scope for investment in foreign enterprises has narrowed and there is no evidence, financial sources say, of the existence of any queues of would-be borrowers.

TESTIFIES WORK POORER AFTER C.I.O. UNIT FORMED

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Testimony that standards of workmanship at the St. Louis assembly plant of the Ford Motor company declined sharply after organization of a local of the United Automobile Workers of America [affiliate of the C. I. O.] was given today at a National Labor Relations board hearing.

The witness further said many of the twenty-two inspectors working under him were "continually harassed" by union leaders in attempts to enroll them in the union. Several were threatened with bodily harm, Parrott said.

FEDERAL POLICY BARS UTILITIES' PLAN TO EXPAND

Investors Are Afraid to Buy Securities.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

With the nation looking to the capital goods industries—the makers of such things as building materials, steel and machinery—to lead it out of the so-called business recession, much attention has been focused on the public utilities. The release of delayed spending for expansion and modernization by the utility companies, it is generally agreed, would be the greatest single stimulant to general business activity at this time.

Officials of leading utility companies admit privately the truth of statements by administration leaders that there exists several billion dollars of potential spending by utility companies that might be spread over the next few years. Increases in consumer demand for electric energy, new inventions, obsolescence and depreciation have been operating during the last few years to create a need for spending by the utility companies.

Capital Market Needed.

It is estimated, for example, that the Commonwealth Edison company alone could profitably spend around one hundred million dollars during the next few years.

In order to raise the money with which to carry on this big program, however, the utility companies would have to raise new capital through the sale of stocks and bonds to investors. Much of the new financing would have to consist of offerings of common stock.

Utility managements point out that it is unsound practice to create a lopsided capital setup consisting largely of bonds and other fixed income bearing securities. A capitalization consisting of 50 per cent stock and fifty per cent bonds is regarded as ideal for an operating company, but even 60 per cent bonds and 40 per cent stock is considered conservative.

Must Depend On Investors.

It is accepted as axiomatic that investment bankers would be happy to underwrite such security offerings if they were sure that the investors—individual and institutional—would buy them. Underwriters cannot make money unless they have something to underwrite and they have been doing an alarmingly small amount of business during the last few months.

According to an analysis published by the Securities and Exchange commission, the total amount of financing by electric and gas utility companies last year was only 664 million dollars, compared with one billion, 463 million dollars' worth of such financing in 1936. And the trend of such financing was sharply downward during the latter part of the year.

Lack of assurance by the administration that it would not extend its subsidized competition with private utility operating companies outside the Tennessee Valley Authority district has been one of the chief factors discouraging investment in utility securities. During the last few years only the highest grade utility bonds have found a ready market.

Investors Fear New Policy.

Recently, however, a new uncertainty has been injected into utility financing. Administration leaders have been urging adoption of a so-called "prudent investment basis for valuing the assets of utility companies for rate making purposes.

The meaning of this slogan has not been fully explained, but it is generally interpreted as meaning that stockholders of public utility companies should not be permitted to realize profits through appreciation in value of their original investment. The investor figures that it means if the property becomes less valuable he takes the loss, but that if it becomes more valuable he should not be allowed to realize the profit.

Investors in bonds are willing to forego the right to participate in profit through appreciation because of the comparative certainty of fixed income on their investments, but prospective stockholders are not attracted by a "tails you lose, heads you do not profit" arrangement.

Dollar Devaluation Feared.

There is also the possibility of loss through further devaluation of the dollar during the lifetime of the investment. If the American dollar should be debased further the investor would have to realize a corresponding appreciation in the price of his stock in terms of dollars even to retain the purchasing power of his original investment.

"Investors in utility securities must now, more than ever, look to congress for just consideration of the problems confronting the industry," says the current issue of Investor America, the publication of the Federation of American Investors. "With an executive department committed to the principle of government competition with private enterprise, and with the prospects of a Unitd States Supreme court that may be expected to interpret favorably New Deal ideas incorporated in federal laws, a greater responsibility rests upon congress to give careful consideration to proposed legislation affecting millions of thrifty, self-supporting citizens whose investments are the backbone of American industry."

Business Men Charge Views Were Muzzled

Max McGraw—"Business needs a better deal."

The recovery recommendations of 1,000 little business men adopted Friday at the Washington, D. C., conference, were drastically changed by the committee of twelve which shaped the final resolution, it was disclosed yesterday. Donald P. Blake, a Chicago representative at the conference, said on his return yesterday that a "terrific amount of doctoring" had been done to eliminate criticism of the Roosevelt administration.

As vice chairman of the unemployment group of the conference, Blake sponsored a resolution which declared that "unwaranted and malicious attacks on business by administration officials must be stopped." This was unanimously adopted by the entire conference and widely cheered, he said, but nevertheless was stricken out by the committee of twelve and the following substituted: "We urge that the government continue to coöperate with business."

Not Among Resolutions.

This, Blake said, was not among any of the resolutions actually offered by the conference members.

Blake and other Chicagoans who returned from Washington, including Robert P. Hastey, president of Sternberg Sales and Service, Inc., said every business man attending made an earnest attempt to help in drafting a suitable program. They attributed the boisterousness of the opening session to "a couple of crack pots."

The opinion that the Roosevelt administration has found it necessary to reverse itself and veer toward policies long advocated by business men was expressed by Blake, who is general manager of the Charles G. Blake Monument company. He declared the administration plans to use the little business conference as a face saving device by which to change policy without appearing to yield to big business.

Business Interests Alike.

"The government," said Blake, "has come to realize that the interests of big and little business are much the same. But having committed itself in the past to a war on 'economic royalists,' the administration found it inconvenient to veer to sound policy without some excuse. The purpose of the conference was to get the little fellows to take the initiative and save face for the administration."

Blake expressed hope that good will come from the meeting in so far as it may help "swing the administration around to the right track."

Hastey said he was optimistic as to the effects of the conference. He asserted it was conducted with the utmost earnestness and produced a great mass of business data and recommendations which will be studied.

He asserted the changes made in the recommendations by the committee of twelve, of which he was a mamber, were only those required for purposes of condensation. He disagreed with charges that the committee was hand picked by the administration.

Hopes President is Changed.

Joseph B. Kleckner, president of Motiograph, Inc., and a member of the committee of twelve, had not returned yesterday from Washington. Some of the delegates returned Friday. These included Max McGraw, president of the McGraw Electric company.

"We don't know whether we changed the President's ideas, but we hope so," said McGraw. "I don't think the delegates were hand picked. I know that I wasn't, and if the administration expected a white-wash they were disappointed."

McGraw said he was impressed by the unanimity among the delegates that it was up to the government to give business a better deal.

"They all seemed to be of one accord," he said.

A. G. Bryant, president of the Bryant Machinery and Engineering company, gave a similar report.

International Shoe Gets Million Dollar CCC Order

SLUMP IN TRADE PILES NEW WOE ON ROOSEVELT

Commerce Bureau's Survey Gloomy.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—As President Roosevelt today studied the twenty-three point economic program handed him by representatives of "little business," the department of commerce added to his woes by painting a depressing picture of conditions in wholesale and retail centers throughout the nation.

Reports from thirty-five key cities showed that trade fell below the volume for the same period last year, the department announced. From almost every city came stories of increased unemployment and additions to relief rolls. There were a few bright spots where there were hopes of an early resumption of building activities, but in general the nation's business was shown to be in a sorry plight.

Retail Sales Below Year Ago.

New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Philadelphia and a score of other large cities reported retail sales running about 8 per cent under the same period last year.

The department's latest report was consistent in tone with its pessimistic predecessors. The President's advisers have been telling him, it is said, that the current depression is only temporary and that business will pick up suddenly at an early date. The department of commerce statement, therefore, was almost apologetic in its opening sentence.

"The arrival of February brought no new note of optimism from the nation's wholesale and retail centers," it read.

There was also a note of reproach for business in the report. Business men were too cautious, it was indicated. The report commented on the situation in New York, the nation's largest retail and wholesale center.

Finds Caution Prevalent.

"Business closed out January and started February with trade measure in dollar turnover quite a bit under the same period of 1937," the report said. "Although there were sporadic evidences of turning away from policies of extreme conservatism, on the whole caution continued to be the by-word of business.

"The general consumer trade showed more reluctance to part with funds save where tempted by bargain offers. Business generally was slow, and in those spots where results were fairly good there was little inclination toward a general following movement."

In regard to Chicago specifically, the report declared:

"The trend in retail business during the last week was believed to be generally better than heretofore this year. Total turnover was reported to be under last year's figures, but the cold weather and the consequent slight pick-up in sales brightened the retail picture.

Wholesale Buying Quiet.

"Although no large buying was apparent in the wholesale field during the last week, it was generally reported that accumulated inventories had been reasonably well reduced."

Factory pay rolls in Chicago, according to the report, have "ceased their downward movement but no immediate upswing is expected."

A contrasting picture was revealed in the nation's capital, where most of the citizens are on the government pay roll and do not feel depressions. Although most retail stores throughout the country recorded average losses of about 8 per cent, stores here registered gains over the comparative period in 1937.

Dollar Rallies Slightly, but Is Lower for Week

The dollar rallied yesterday in terms of principal foreign currencies, but showed a net decline for the week. The British pound sterling yesterday fell ¼ cent to $5.01 1-16, but was 5-16 cent higher than a week before. The French franc yesterday declined to 3.28¼ cents, off ⅝ point from Friday, and up ¾ point for the week. The Dutch guilder closed at 55.88 cents, down 0.02 cent for the day, and the Swiss franc fell to 23.21 cents, off 0.01¼.

STOCKS EXTEND RALLY; MANY RISE $1 TO $3

'War Shares' Prominent; Shorts Cover.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 5.—Extending yesterday's rally in rather impressive fashion, stock prices pushed ahead today to register gains ranging from fractions to 3 points. Steels, coppers, and chemicals were prominent in the advance.

Of the 597 issues traded, 425 registered gains, 65 declined, and 107 were unchanged. Turnover was 445,690 shares.

The upswing was attributed to technical conditions, short covering, and news developments. Some interests traced the improvement to announcement that the United States, Great Britain, and France had called on Japan to reveal her naval plans and warned her of a naval race if she builds 43,000 ton superbattleships.

War Shares Prominent.

Some support for this theory was found in the fact that stocks usually associated with war talk were most prominent in the rise, although all sections of the market took part in the advance.

Steels and metals reflected good demand at the beginning of trading and extended their gains as the session progressed. United States Steel was up a fraction at 51, worked forward to 53 and closed at 52¾ for a net gain of 2⅛ points. Other steel stocks followed the same course.

Copper shares were strong. Anaconda and Kennecott each registered gains of more than a point and Chile rose 2¼. American Smelters was another strong spot.

American Telephone Rallies.

American Telephone and Telegraph slumped more than a point at the start, but made a strong recovery. It closed at a gain of 1⅝ points at 133½, or 6½ points above its recent low.

Rail shares participated in the advance, but observers said they were being carried along by the improvement in other sections. Utility stocks hung up fractional gains.

Building shares rose late in the session as the industrial favorites lost part of their gains. Johns Manville had a gain of 3⅜.

A spurt of 4 points in Case marked dealings in the farm implements. Gains of more than a point each were registered by Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward. Aviation issues found buyers at better prices. Douglas rose more than a point.

Canadian Economic Index Recedes as January Ends

The Canadian economic index of the dominion bureau of statistics for the week ended Jan. 29 stood at 109.1 against 109.8 the preceding week and 118.4 a year ago, the bureau announced yesterday.

EUROPEAN WAR CLOUDS HAMPER TRADE IN GRAIN

Wheat and Corn Prices Move Narrowly.

CHICAGO GRAIN FUTURES

Closing prices on the May delivery of principal grains on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Yr. ago.
Wheat	$ .94¾	$ .95¼	$1.34½
Corn	.59¼	.59⅝	1.07¼
Oats	.31⅛	.31¼	.50⅞
Rye	.75½	.75⅝	1.12
Soy beans	1.06	1.05⅝	1.57⅜

Speculative interest in the grain markets yesterday was at a minimum, with traders regarding the political outlook in Europe as too uncertain to justify taking a decided stand on either side of the market over the week-end. Wheat futures held within a range of about 1 cent and corn within a range of ¾ cent a bushel. Net price changes for the day were confined to small fractions of a cent a bushel, final trades being at the bottom.

Strength in the Liverpool market led to scattered buying of wheat futures early, but the upturn was short lived as there was no improvement in the European demand for North American cash wheat.

Wheat Export Sales Small.

Export sales were said to have been confined to a few small lots of hard winter wheat and a little Canadian grain. Liverpool futures closed ⅝ to 1 cent a bushel higher.

No rain was reported in the dry sections of the winter wheat belt, and the weather bureau weekly forecast said conditions appeared unfavorable for moisture during the current week.

There was a notable lack of leadership in the wheat market yesterday. Although considerable comment was heard among brokers regarding the European political situation, there were comparatively few operators who were willing to back their opinions by the purchase or sale of futures.

Survey World Situation.

War fears in the last few days have resulted in a reëxamination of the world statistical position, and the belief prevails that with the exception of the United States there is no country in a position to take advantage of any sudden increase in the demand for wheat from importers. Under existing conditions, it is said, Europe would find it almost impossible to accumulate an emergency reserve of wheat.

A fair European demand was in evidence yesterday for American corn with sales of about 300,000 bushels in all positions.

CASH GRAIN

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 15 cars; corn, 129 cars; oats, 21 cars; barley, 21 cars; soy beans, 15 cars. Range of cash grain prices per bushel in leading markets:

FINANCE FIRM'S EARNINGS RISE ABOUT 20 PCT.

Household Nets $7.65 Per Share on Common.

The Household Finance corporation and its subsidiaries yesterday reported net income of $6,382,155 for the year ended Dec. 31, an increase of approximately 20 per cent over the total of $5,268,285 in 1936. The earnings were equal, after payment of dividends on the 5 per cent preferred stock, to $7.65 a share on 717,025 common shares, compared with $7.04 a share on 601,574 common shares in 1936 after deduction of $1,031,600 for dividends on the $3 participating preference stock then outstanding.

B. E. Henderson.
Finds loans shrinking.

The 1937 net income set a new all time high mark for the third successive year, Byrd E. Henderson, president, told stockholders in the annual report. He said the company's loan account is tending downward at present, reflecting the business recession, and bad debt losses are increasing.

Loan Account Is Higher.

The loan account at the beginning of this year was about 17 per cent larger than a year earlier, the report added, predicting net income will continue to run ahead of 1937 figures for some time.

Current assets of Household Finance as of Dec. 31 were reported at $65,875,433, compared with $56,493,750 a year earlier. The company made 715,002 loans during the period totaling $120,973,721 and averaging $169. In the preceding year loans numbered 614,737, totaled $100,855,787, and averaged $164.

The Alton Railroad company reported for the year ended Dec. 31 an estimated net loss of $1,010,514 after charges and taxes, compared with net loss of $944,792 in 1936.

Alaska Juneau Income Dips.

ATTORNEY TELLS WAYS TO REDUCE ESTATE TAXES

Methods of avoiding or minimizing the estate tax are discussed by John E. Hughes, Chicago attorney, in a recently published book entitled "The Federal Death Tax."

Much more of an estate can be transferred to a beneficiary while the person making the transfer is living than at his death, Hughes indicated for the benefit of holders of large estates. Although in the case of large estates the gift tax is fixed at 75 per cent of the death tax, he shows how in practice it works out much less.

If an American citizen invested his money in real estate in a country having no death tax, his estate would not have to pay any tax thereon, according to Hughes. This is because real estate situated outside the United States is expressly exempt from tax by statute.

Hughes also asserts that by proper use of gift tax exemptions, estate tax exemptions, and the insurance exemptions, a donor may transfer an estate of $120,000 free of tax and in addition may give as much as $5,000 each to any number of persons free of tax every year.

The first holding companies in the United States, as mentioned in the preceding article, were in the railroad field. They obtained their authority to acquire shares of other companies by special grants from state legislatures.

The holding company did not reach full development until the 1890s. Prior to that time many states expressly forbid corporations to own stocks in other companies. The laws in other states were vague on the question. In 1888 the state of New Jersey amended its laws to permit corporations to include the specific power to hold stocks in their charters. Other states soon did likewise. Many states, including Illinois, withstood the demands for many years but by 1929 thirty-nine states expressly authorized intercompany stockholdings and most other states permitted such holdings under judicial rulings.

Even after New Jersey's enabling legislation the development of the holding company was not rapid. It was some years before lawyers generally recommended the use of this corporate form to their clients. Outright merger was the accepted method of consolidation prior to 1900, although the holding company gradually came into greater use. Its greatest development has taken place since the beginning of the present century.

'He Must Buy It Back or Go to Pris'n.'

soaring, Baruch believes the short sale is a necessary balance and protects the investing public from even larger losses when the bubble bursts, because then the short seller becomes a buyer in order to make delivery.

Decries "Raiding" Market.

However, the financier has vigorously declared against the use of the short sale to raid the market when it is declining—that is, short selling after a panic has occurred, to force the market down even further.

After the 1907 panic, Charles Evans Hughes, then governor of New York, appointed a commission to investigate the exchange and short selling. This commission not only defended the principle, but said short selling tends to produce steadiness in prices which is an advantage to the community."

The Pujo congressional inquiry in 1913, certainly not "friendly" to Wall street, didn't condemn the short sale, saying on this subject:

"There seems no greater reason for prohibiting speculation by way of selling securities in the expectation of buying them back at lower prices, than by way of purchasing them in the expectation of reselling them at higher prices."

Short Sales Barred in 1929.

The New York Stock exchange, after the 1929 collapse laid down a ruling prohibiting a short sale at a price below the previous quotation. This, however, wasn't satisfactory to the Securities and Exchange commission. Its new ruling is designed to eliminate bear raids as far as possible, without doing away with the short sale.

Starting next Tuesday, a short sale must be made at a price above the previous quotation. To sell short, the sale must be made at least at ⅛ of a point above the last previous price.

The short sale, as a balancing effect, remains, it is explained, but it has lost its effect as the weapon of the "bears," since it will be difficult to sell stock short in any volume in a declining or shaky market.

CHICAGO STOCKS ARE FIRMER IN QUIET TRADING

More advances than declines were registered by Chicago stocks yesterday in a dull trading session of only 11,000 shares, compared with 15,000 shares on the preceding Saturday. Of the 53 issues traded 18 advanced, 10 declined and 25 were unchanged.

The Tribune average of 20 representative stocks closed yesterday at 9.43, up 0.14 from the preceding close and 0.17 higher than the week before.

Most volume leaders yesterday were unchanged or fractionally higher. Midland United preferred, Marshall Field, and Berghoff Brewery were unchanged. Chicago corporation and Commonwealth Edison gained fractions.

Last week 164 issues were traded, of which 35 advanced, 90 declined, and 39 were unchanged. The week's volume was 116,000 shares, compared with 150,000 shares in the preceding week and 538,000 shares in the corresponding 1937 week.

DIVIDENDS CUT BY CONGOLEUM, REYNOLDS METAL

Other Companies Declare Regular Payments.

Two reductions in prevailing dividend rates were announced yesterday, together with the declaration of regular dividends by several other companies.

Directors of Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., manufacturer of floor coverings, voted a dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, which previously had been on a $2 annual dividend basis. The Reynolds Metal company declared a dividend of 15 cents instead of the usual quarterly 25 cent dividend.

A statement by Congoleum-Nairn said: "In view of general business conditions throughout the country at this time and in line with the management's conservative policy, it is deemed wise to change the company's dividend policy.

Cites Change in Policy.

"This change follows the principle adopted during the last two years by many leading industrial corporations of reducing quarterly dividend payments and making further disbursements during the year as made possible by income and prevailing conditions."

Bunte Brothers, candy makers, declared a dividend of $1 on the common shares, payable Feb. 21. A dividend of 50 cents was paid in February, last year, and $1 was paid in December, 1936.

Distillers Corp.-Seagrams, Ltd., declared a dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable in Canadian funds on March 15. A similar payment was made last Dec. 21, marking resumption of common dividends.

Concise Statistics.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—As a result of recent investigations I wish to commend particularly the very concise and pertinent statistical information given each day toward the foot of the first or left hand column under the heading "What Stocks Did" on the page showing stock transactions.

By giving The Tribune, Associated Press and Dow-Jones averages, the issues traded, with advances, declines, total issues, and new highs and lows, you are supplying information which I am unable to find in such compact and convenient form elsewhere. However, may I suggest that you also include in this compilation, under the heading of "Volume," one extra line as follows: Shares sold today, 1,088,350. This information, in my opinion, should be included in any proper study of market trends or statistics.

While you show this information at the top of the page, its inclusion with the other statistical information will, I am sure, be appreciated by many readers. May I suggest also that each Monday you also show under the same heading, "What Stocks Did," the same information for the preceding week.

Then, by referring only to this short, statistical compilation, any reader or market student can have for each day and each week market statistics and information not furnished in such convenient and compact form by any other newspaper anywhere. CLYDE O. HORNBAKER.

BUSINESS BITS

George F. Emery.

After nearly fifty years of service with the Live Stock National bank of Chicago, George F. Emery, vice president and director, will retire on March 1, it was announced yesterday by David H. Reimers, president of the bank. Emery began with the bank in 1889 as a junior clerk, when the stock yards were in the town of Lake and the sidewalks were raised on stilts above the muddy roads. He has been vice president of the bank for nineteen years and a director for twenty-one years.

J. R. Fraine has been named assistant manager of sales of the Republic Steel corporation wire division for the northern territory, with headquarters in Chicago, the company announced yesterday.

A discussion of the part the farmer may play in promoting increased meat consumption will be held at a conference of meat producers called for Feb. 28, by the Agricultural club. The meeting will be in the La Salle hotel. E. A. Beamer, Blissfield, Mich., president of the National Live Stock Marketing association, will speak on "The Producer's Part in Increasing Meat Consumption."

CHICAGO SPRING MARKETS DRAW MANY BUYERS

Contrary to expectations and the experience of other cities, Chicago's Spring Market week, which closed yesterday, attracted about 5 per cent more buyers than a similar market week last year, the Chicago Association of Commerce announced yesterday.

Approximately 12,000 visiting buyers and merchants placed an estimated 8 to 10 million dollars' worth of orders with Chicago wholesale and manufacturing concerns. The dollar volume this year was slightly below that of last year, but wholesalers were encouraged by the wide interest shown in the trade event.

Eleven trade shows and the semiannual convention of the Interstate Merchants' council, retail affiliate of the Chicago Association of Commerce, participated in the market week.

NUMBER OF BANK HOLDING FIRMS SHOWS DECREASE

Reserve Board Report Reveals Decline.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The federal reserve board published today, in the midst of an administration drive to abolish bank holding companies, figures showing these companies had shrunk of their own accord in the last five years.

From the beginning of 1932 to the beginning of 1937, the board said the number of bank holding companies declined from 97 to 52 and the number of banks they controled fell from 978 to 611. Only companies controling three or more banks were classified as holding companies.

No statement of policy on the issue accompanied the figures.

Ignores Individual Owners.

The board's figures, which a spokesman said were included in its monthly bulletin because of "current interest in the problem" do not include holding systems headed by individuals instead of corporations. This explains the difference between the board figures and recent statistics of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation showing sixty-three bank holding systems controling 560 banks, he said.

Conversion of separate banks in a holding company system into branches of a single bank was said by the board to have caused 45 per cent of the decrease in the number of holding system banks. Mergers and dissolutions of holding companies were the next largest factor.

Major Points of Analysis.

Among points of the analysis were: Minnesota has the most holding company banks—eighty-six.

Holding company banks are most influential in Nevada, where they have 41.5 per cent of the state's bank loans and investments and 40.4 per cent of the deposits.

For the nation, they have 14 per cent of loans and investments and 13.7 per cent of the deposits.

Of the holding company banks 66.8 per cent were in cities of less than 25,000 population; only 5 per cent in cities of more than 500,000 population.

Most of the holding companies originated between 1927 and 1930.

COST OF SUNDAY DINNER LOWERED BY CHEAP MEATS

Declines in Live Stock Reduce Food Bill.

The thrifty housewife who bought a generous portion of meat in her week-end shopping tour will serve the most food value per dollar in her Sunday dinner today than has been possible for several years, live stock men at the Chicago stock yards said yesterday.

The additional sharp declines in most live stock and wholesale meats last week have reached the butcher shops, making practically any of the better grades of beef, pork and lamb the best of the meat bargains. Packers late last week sold the various cuts of beef to butcher shops anywhere from $1.00 to $11.00 per hundred pounds cheaper than a year ago. They took $2.00 to $5.00 less for pork cuts, except hams, which were steady to $2.00 lower. Lamb meat was $1.00 to $3.00 lower.

Poultry Relatively Higher.

Poultry furnished less competition than for some time because of the relatively higher prices. All poultry sold higher at wholesale last week than during the same week in 1937. Prices of meats have not only declined, but the quality now is far better than it has been in many months, due to the abundance of feeds on farms.

Animals are coming to market much fatter and heavier. Because of the increased weights, the tonnage of meats available to the trade, particularly pork, has increased far more than receipts figures indicate. Hogs now are averaging close to the heaviest weights on record for this season of the year, and about 10 pounds per head heavier than in 1937.

Better Grades of Meat Wanted.

Packers report that the better grades of meats, which were far out of reach of the average consumer last summer, now furnish most of the trade in butcher shops and restaurants, because the top grades can be purchased at relatively lower prices than the "cheap" cuts. Packers last week sold top cuts of beef loins at $33.00 per hundred pounds, off 39 per cent from the summer peak in wholesale channels, whereas the lower priced loins were only 7 per cent under the summer high at $12.50.

Top beef ribs at $24.00 were 42 per cent under the high point while the lower priced ribs at $11.00 were off only 8 per cent. Best rounds sold at $15.00, down 44 per cent, and cheaper rounds showed a drop of 18 per cent, to $11.00.

Average Costs Decline.

The average dressed cost of the three principal classes of live stock, steers, hogs, and lambs, last week declined to $13.09, the lowest since December, 1934, and 38 per cent under the 1937 high week. Steers were lowest of the three classes, averaging farther below hogs than at any time since September, 1936. Packers' costs of lambs were farther under hogs than they have been since last October.

The live hog average at $8.20 was 5 cents above the preceding week. The lamb average slumped 45 cents, to $7.85. Packers paid an average live price of $7.50 for steers, which was 60 cents under the preceding week and $1.80 lower than five weeks ago.

The scant supply of live stock offered in the week-end session brought slightly stronger prices.

COTTON

Persistent buying of cotton futures yesterday was credited to foreign accounts. Houses with southern connections were sellers. Closing trades on the Chicago Board of Trade were at net gains of .01 to .06 cent. Other American markets were .02 to .05 cent a pound higher.

Spot cotton closed unchanged to .05 cent higher with New Orleans 8.75 cents, New York, 8.65 cents, and Galveston and Houston at 8.55 cents a pound. Futures prices follow, in cents per pound:

Investors' Guide

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

Bonds—2.

Last Sunday Investors' Guide explained the most desirable qualifications of a high grade corporation bond. It was said that the safest bond usually is one that is secured by a restricted first mortgage on property with demonstrated earning power. There are, however, other types of obligations to be considered by investors.

It was mentioned that debentures are obligations not secured by specific pledge of property. Obviously, only strong companies can sell debentures, or debenture bonds, as they are often called. Before buying a debenture the investor should feel sure that the issuing company's business is sufficiently stable to earn interest charges even in depression periods.

Convertible bonds or debentures can be exchanged for common stock of the issuing company on a specified basis. The obligation states exactly how many shares of stock will be given in exchange. Of course the exchange privilege is of value only when the market price of the company's stock gets high enough to make the exchange profitable.

Income or adjustment bonds usually are secured by a second, third, or other junior mortgage, if they are secured at all. Interest usually is paid only when earned.

Prior lien bonds, if really that, are prior to all other obligations of the issuing company. Sometimes the name prior lien is given to obligations that are prior to many issues, but inferior to others.

There are a number of other names that are given to bonds and debentures. Some of the names are descriptive of the obligations and others are not. In selecting any corporation bond or debenture, the investor should pay little attention to the title in judging its worth. He should carefully investigate the security behind the issue and the earnings of the company.

Problems are somewhat different in selecting government or municipal securities. Usually no specific property is pledged when local, state, or national governments issue securities. Accordingly, safety of principal and interest depends almost entirely on the willingness and ability of the borrower to pay.

Ability to pay can be determined in part by study of the borrower's finances. Factors to be considered are tax rates, amount of other obligations, tax collections, limitations on taxing power, and the industrial, agricultural, or commercial situation in the debtor community, state, or nation. An idea as to willingness to pay can be gained from a study of the borrower's record for meeting obligations.

TRADE, INDUSTRY MOVE AT SLOWER PACE LAST WEEK

Paced by steel activity, which dipped last week for the first time this year, business indices and business sentiment were less favorable last week. Most business barometers, including electric power production, car loadings, and automobile production, showed declines from the preceding week.

Encouragement was found, however, in increased building activity, sustained consumer demand reported by retailers, and in the advance of the stock market from its midweek decline to levels slightly above the close a week ago.

Another hopeful note emerged from the conference of small business leaders in Washington. The President's word to the delegates that many of their suggestions were constructive and possible was received favorably.

Rail Troubles Depressing.

The plight of the railroads continued to add a depressing note to the general business picture. It was reported by the Association of American Railroads that net operating income of the nation's carriers in December, 1937, was 63 per cent below December, 1936, and that for 1937 it showed a 12 per cent drop. Many railroads continued their general plea that they will go bankrupt unless a freight rate increase is granted.

Steel activity was scheduled for the week at 30.5 per cent of capacity, compared with 32.7 per cent the preceding week. Automobile assemblies were about 15 per cent lower than the week before. The Packard Motor Car company announced that prices were being reduced $100 on its six cylinder cars. Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman of the General Motors corporation, said he regarded the Packard reduction as a readjustment of prices in one line rather than as a move to a lower general level.

Inventories Being Reduced.

Estimates based on sales reports for January indicated that inventories at the end of the month were about 5 per cent lower than at the end of December and were running close to the level of two years ago.

A recession in buying in winter furniture wholesale markets was reported. It was estimated that a drop of nearly 51 per cent in dollar volume occurred in January, compared with January, 1937.

Downward wage adjustments were made quietly in some industrial lines, with some companies returning to a piecework basis, and others adopting "share the work" programs. Several more large firms announced dividend cuts or omissions.

New Financing Expands.

New financing took a sharp jump upward last week. United States Steel corporation announced that it was borrowing $50,000,000 on short term from banks in Chicago, New York and Pittsburgh to help finance a construction program which will involve expenditure of about $80,000,000 in 1938. It was the company's first financing since 1929, and was said to have been made through banks in view of the present unfavorable market for new security issues. An issue of $67,000,000, however, in bonds and debentures of the Appalachian Electric Power company was promptly distributed in the largest single offering since last March.

RAILROAD BONDS LEAD ADVANCE IN DULL TRADING

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—A better demand developed in the bond market today for railroad and other corporate issues. Transactions totaled $2,647,000, face value, the smallest for a Saturday trading session since Sept. 4. The turnover last Saturday was $3,562,000.

Government bonds showed a mixed price trend, closing 6-32ds higher to 4-32ds lower. Trading was light except in one or two treasury issues.

Southern Pacific 4s, which rose 2¼ to 82, and Southern Railway 4s which advanced 1 point to 40, were among the outstanding gainers in the railroad group. Nickel Plate 4½s gained 1 to 47. New York Central 5s closed ¾ point higher at 62½.

Moderate gains were scored by McKesson & Robbins 5½s and International Hydro-Electric 6s. Postal Telegraph 5s closed slightly higher.

The Associated Press average of 20 railroad issues rose .5 of a point to 62.8. The composite prices for the industrial and utility issues were unchanged from the preceding day.

Japanese and Cuban bonds developed more steadiness than they had shown on the preceding day. Japanese 6½s closed 1¼ points higher at 75½. Other foreign bonds showed virtually no change.

INVESTING FIRM COMPUTES DROP IN ITS ASSETS

Harrison Fuller, vice president of the Broad Street Investing company, said yesterday that the net shrinkage in the company's assets in 1937, on a per share basis, was 35.40 per cent.

A recent compilation of 1937 results of investing companies published in THE TRIBUNE showed a decline of 57.49 per cent for the company. The figure was arrived at by calculating the total shrinkage in the company's assets and making allowance for the increase in capital during the year.

This method of computation, Fuller said, is misleading in the case of a mutual investment company. The substantial change in capital in relation to total assets distorts the percentage change arrived at by this method, he asserted.

TIN SUPPLY DECREASES.

The world's visible supply of tin at the end of January totaled 16,381 tons, against 19,614 at the end of December, according to W. H. Garsten's estimates. Straits and Arnheim smelter carryover as of Jan. 31 totaled 8,136 tons, against 6,097 at the end of December.

RUBBER, HIDES LEAD UPTURN IN COMMODITIES

Rubber and hides futures, recovering from Friday's declines, yesterday led an upward movement of commodity futures prices. Hides closed 0.11 to 0.15 cent higher on sales of 45 lots, with the March contract at 8.60 cents a pound. Rubber advanced 0.16 to 0.18 cent higher, with 106 lots sold.

The Dow-Jones index of commodity futures closed at 53.27, up 0.10 from the preceding close and 0.74 higher than a week ago. Cocoa futures were 0.06 to 0.11 cent higher, with March quoted at 5.60 cents a pound.

Gold Coast farmers were reported to have arranged to burn cocoa regularly from Feb. 15 to the end of March in order to cut the supply and keep prices up.

Metal markets were quiet yesterday, ending the week with little change in prices.

Sugar contracts were lower, and coffee futures were higher yesterday. Influenced by a disappointing spot demand, domestic sugar was 0.01 cent lower and world contracts were down 0.02 cent.

Rio coffee contracts were up 0.05 cent, with the March price at 4.45 cents a pound. Santos was 0.01 to 0.02 cent higher, and March contracts sold at 5.96 at the finish.

Cash prices were steady yesterday in most commodities. The Associated Press index of 35 weighted wholesale staple prices stood unchanged from the previous close at 71.73 [1926 equals 100].

MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

Protecting Desert Travelers

A member of the Sudanese police is registering a tourist's automobile before it enters the new 135 mile highway between Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt.

CAIRO HIGHWAY TO ALEXANDRIA IS COMPLETED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 5.—A modern highway recently was finished, running in almost a straight line for the 135 miles from here to Alexandria. This connection between Egypt's two most important cities is the first project to be completed in a 2,500 mile road building program here.

The capitulations treaty signed by Egypt and Great Britain called for construction in eight years of an 1,800 mile road system for its military value. The local government has supplemented this program, appreciating the value of pavements in attracting tourists. A gasoline tax is contemplated by the government, with all of the revenue to be spent on roads.

Patroled by Police.

The Cairo-Alexandria route is patroled by Sudanese police. On entering the road a motorist registers his license number. The number is checked as it passes police stations with telephones every twelve miles. This eliminates any danger of being stalled on the desert without help.

This modern highway was completed and opened to the public about three months ago and is already in constant use between the two cities. The motor highway between Cairo and Fayoum, another well traveled artery of motor trafic, already is paved with asphalt for half the distance and the completion will be soon.

Then there is the route between Cairo and Assuan, site of Egypt's great irrigation project, which is now traversible by automobiles although it has not been completed as yet. A distance of 550 miles, there are frequent service stations and rest houses all along the 550 miles of the route. It is the government's plan to have this highway completely paved within the next five years.

5,400 Miles of Highways.

Egypt today has a total of 5,400 miles of motor highways, approximately 500 miles of which are paved and other stretches under reconstruction. Nearly 1,800 miles of these highways follow the canal banks, and while traversible are not considered first class roads.

Of utmost importance is the paved road planned from Alexandria and running along the Egyptian coast to the Italian Libyan border. This would be a stretch of approximately 500 miles, of which 350 miles already have been completed and paved. The remaining distance will be completed during the summer and the finished highway eventually will connect with the Italian-built coastal highway which is some 1,800 miles in length.

Other Projects Planned.

Also included in the Egyptian government's highway construction program is the desert road from Kena eastward to Koesseir on the Red sea, and the road, now being improved, that will connect Alexandria with Tanta, Zagazig, and Ismailia. The first stretch of this important highway, between Alexandria and Tanta, also is to be completed and paved during the summer of 1938.

Another important project in this program is the highway between Port Said and Ismailia, which will parallel the Suez canal. This road has been paved partially, but there are sections which need considerable improvement before the highway can be considered complete.

NEWS AND VIEWS

A newly designed winterfront, which is located out of sight behind the radiator grille, is one of the special parts being offered in connection with the 1938 models by Studebaker, E. C. Mendler, manager of the parts and accessories, South Bend, Ind., said yesterday. The device is operated by a control on the dash. Eight selective positions enable the driver to get the required amount of temperature protection. An insect guard fits over the winterfront to protect the radiator core.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

PRATT BOULEVARD.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Will you assist us in bringing about an improvement much needed by the north side? The improvement is to cut down the wide parkway on each side of Pratt boulevard from Western avenue to Kedzie avenue, and thus make this street a wide thoroughfare for automobiles. This would take a lot of trafic off Devon avenue, which is a narrow street and is jammed with cars in the afternoon and evening.

Money for a bridge over the north branch of the Chicago river at Pratt boulevard was appropriated by the drainage board, and with this improvement automobilists will have a fine driveway from the north to the northwest side, connecting with McCormick boulevard. The PWA could be put to work widening the street and building the bridge.

READER.

IN SOUTHERN ALABAMA.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Realizing the value of your department in supplying the motoring public with interesting travel data, I feel sure that many of your readers would appreciate the publication of the following:

At the suggestion of a friend, I recently made a motor trip into the deep south, to southern Alabama, for two weeks of the most successful fishing, hunting, and general outdoors sports I've ever enjoyed. The entire trip from Chicago [less than 1,000 miles] was made on paved highways leading to this paradise where one finds lazy deep rivers, lovely lakes and bays, whose shores are studded with stately pines, magnolia, live oaks, juniper, bay, and cypress woodland. The Gulf of Mexico is but a few miles distant.

Abounding in the waters are numerous varieties of fish, oysters, crab, and shrimp. Here one also finds thousands of acres of natural sanctuary with wild life, including deer, bear, fox, bobcat, opossum, raccoon, squirrel, wild turkey, ducks, geese, quail, and doves. In the midst of this paradise living accommodations are available in tourist cabins and in the many resorts offering completely modern cottages. Rates in hotels are very reasonable.

EARL F. BARKER.

DEFENDS TRAILER TRAVEL.

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 31.—I am writing this as a defender of trailer travel. Hal Foust seems to have made a mess of his trip south.

Mother, dad, and I made a trip to Miami this winter. We left Kenosha on Christmas day and arrived in Orlando on Dec. 28 for a stay of three days. We had four days of sightseeing and warm sun in Miami and started for home on Jan. 5 and arrived in Kenosha on Jan. 8.

We had no trouble and no inconvenience in finding places to park the trailer overnight. In our two weeks we traveled 3,500 miles. We maintained an open road pace of 45 miles an hour. The trailer did not skid or sway, although the seesaw motion on wavy roads is apt to make one seasick, as Mr. Foust commented. We didn't break any dishes or get dirt on the bedding.

I have used trailers since 1929. The house trailer is a boon to those who like to go places on week-ends. During the summer, every Friday night, we leave home for a week-end of fishing and loafing at the lakes in our vicinity. There is no better way to enjoy nature for those who love it.

CHARLES W. GILE.

WINDSHIELD STICKERS FOR FARMERS.

La Grange, Ill., Jan. 26.—I do not mean to find fault with Chicago's enforcement of its automobile tax collections, but I do wish to call attention to the fact that there are many like myself who reside outside corporate limits and need no tag. It is a nuisance and a waste of time having to offer explanations to various squad and patrol men both in Chicago and in surrounding suburban villages.

I suggest a simple, white windshield sticker for those who are not required by law to pay a city vehicle tax. Why couldn't they be obtained at the nearest state police station at a cost that would cover the printing and handling? Those who did not want to pay 25 or 50 cents could continue to carry their identification papers to show policemen.

FIND TRUCKING METHODS UNSAFE AND UNECONOMIC

Enforcement of Present Laws Inadvisable.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 5.—A legislative commission drafting new Illinois truck laws, in public hearings throughout the state during the last four months, has found that common highway hauling practices are dangerous and uneconomic and that enforcement of existing statutes would make conditons worse.

Freight is being shipped over the roads in unsafe vehicles at rates that do not pay the cost of the transportation. Operators of single trucks and of fleets are in a precarious financial condition. Most witnesses have testified that the risk to shippers and to the public is not worth the saving in charges.

Would Hurt Small Truckers.

Enforcement of the somewhat dormant public utilities act of 1921, placing intrastate for hire trucking under Illinois commerce commission, might be a blessing for a few large truck lines, which perform services on regular routes like those services offered by the railroads. These benefits, according to a majority of the witnesses, would be at the expense of banning from the highways the owners of one or two for hire trucks.

The present law empowers the commerce commission to give to truck lines a virtual monopoly on common carrier business over a prescribed route. A common carrier is one offering its services to the general public. The other classification of for hire vehicles are the contract carriers, the trucks that work for certain employers rather than for any one who wants to engage them. They, too, require a commerce commission permit under present statutory regulations about as rigid as those governing raliroads.

The legislative inquiry has disclosed truck operations as practiced do not follow definite results any more than they follow fixed routes. The cattle truck taking a load to the stock market occasionally will return from the city with fertilizer. The piano distributer wants to send his truckers wherever there is a sale. It is this flexibility that gives highway trucks a natural advantage over railroads and it is this natural advantage that would be destroyed by rigid regulations.

Attributed to Price Cutting.

The ills of this transportation, afflicting the shippers as well as the truck operators, are popularly attributed to the price cutting of irresponsible truckers. There are two divergent theories for correcting this evil.

A majority of the witnesses, representing all concerned with highway freighting, have testified that the public utility act of 1921 should be repealed and that perhaps it will be better to remove trucks from the jurisdiction of the I. C. C.

For a substitute law, the conspicuous question before the legislators is whether rates and tariffs should be regulated. Such regulation, of course, would be to raise the average truckers' revenue, at the same time increasing shipping costs, an increase that would be passed on to the consumers.

Contend Rate Fixing Necessary.

The large fleet operators have contended that such rate fixing is necessary so that the responsible companies will not continue to lose business to truckers who can cut prices by failing to maintain their vehicles in a safe condition, by failing to carry insurance, and by working their drivers dangerously long hours.

An alternative policy for the new legislation is designed to eliminate price cutting by strict enforcement of safety regulations rather than by rate fixing. There would be periodical state inspections of the vehicles. Carriers would be required to carry public liability and cargo insurance. The drivers' hours would be limited by law. And with these regulations in force, advocates contend that the rates would adjust themselves better than they can be adjusted by a political bureau.

The commission, headed by Senator Louis J. Menges [D., East St. Louis], having worked four months without special compensation, plans to adjourn further meetings until after the spring primary elections.

WATCHES LIFE PARADE AS SHE NEARS CENTURY

Mrs. Mary Tyrrell a Gracious Host.

BY JUANITA DALY.

Mrs. Mary Tyrrell.

As she sits in her little sunroom at 5419 North Spaulding avenue, Mrs. Tyrrell can see the neighborhood life on parade. She watches the men leave for work, tucking the morning paper in their pockets, and return more slowly in the evening, tired but eager for a warm home and tasty food.

She sees the children chattering and racing back and forth to school and she waves to the neighbor women when they step out to the store or for a trip downtown. But Mrs. Tyrrell is not envious, for she has led an active life and is happy in just looking on for awhile.

Lives with Daughter.

Mrs. Tyrrell lives with her daughter, Mrs. Lewis A. Danner. Together they take care of the bungalow, water the flowers and plants, and are hostesses to friends almost every day in the week. Typical of their open house at all times policy were the two day festivities recently when Mrs. Tyrrell celebrated her birthday.

They gave a party for more than fifty relatives and friends on "Granny's" birthday. The following afternoon the mother was hostess at a tea for the members of the women's relief corps of Benjamin Butler post G. A. R. The corps is Mrs. Tyrrell's favorite club and she attends the meetings regularly. That evening the neighbors stopped in to wish her "many more happy birthdays."

"But we didn't have any work this year," she explained, "because every one brought a cake or cookies. Some friends put one box of cookies on the table for the party, and then hid another box for me to have later. I surely love to have company."

Fond of Flowers.

Next to people, flowers are Mrs. Tyrrell's favorite companions. Particularly on her birthday and on holidays, the sunroom is transformed into a hothouse. She sits by the hour gazing at the pink cyclamons, the gaudy anemones, the tiny primroses, and the deep greens of a foliage plant which are resting on the window seat, on tables, and even at her feet.

Red is her color, she insists, but she likes others, too. In the summer she has her own plot in the back yard which she tends every day.

Although Mrs. Tyrrell is a Chicagoan of 74 years standing, she was born and reared on a farm near Ogdensburg, N. Y. When she was 23 years old Chicago was "the west" and that meant travel, adventure, new places to see, and new people to meet.

She then was Mary Massey. Eagerly she boarded the sailing vessel which took her up the St. Lawrence river to the great lakes and eventually to Chicago. Here she resided with her sister, Mrs. Catherine Cobb, for two years, until she met George B. Tyrrell at a church social.

Bible Is Cherished.

Among her keepsakes, this one pressed tightly in an old Bible, is the marriage license which gave her so many years of happiness. The Bible itself is a cherished possession. For the first two years of her married life Mrs. Tyrrell subscribed to the monthly editions of the Devotional Family Bible, by the Rev. Alexander Fletcher. The issues were illustrated with steel engravings. Mrs. Tyrrell kept the issues and sent them to New York to be bound in lether.

"My children used the bound edition as a picture book, a textbook, and a prayer book," Granny said. "My nine great-grandchildren like to look through it now."

Mr. and Mrs. Tyrrell had seven children, but only two are living, Mrs. Danner and Fred Tyrrell of San Francisco. There are ten grandchildren and the nine great-grandchildren who take every opportunity to visit her.

Recently Mrs. Tyrrell was made an honorary member of the relief corps and she tells proudly about the ceremony which added more dignity to her quiet life. Corps officers in charge, and her close friends, were Mrs. Louise Meyers, Mrs. Mary Leonard, Mrs. Norma Ogan, and Mrs. Anna Mountain.

STATE AUDITOR REPORTS AS TO THIS QUARTER

Figures for North, Northwest Sides.

Depositors of eight more of the closed state banks on the north and northwest sides and in adjacent suburbs may receive new refunds totaling $323,600 during the present quarter, according to State Auditor Edward J. Barrett.

This estimate accompanied Mr. Barrett's reports on the state of more closed state banks in addition to those covered in these columns last Sunday. Information on the remaining banks will be given here next week.

Mr. Barrett's additional reports, based on those of C. H. Albers, general receiver for 137 of the 139 closed state banks in Cook county, show also that during the final quarter last year six of the north and northwest banks returned a total of $261,500 to depositors.

Has Largest Payment.

Largest of the predicted new liquidating payments will be that of the Lincoln Trust and Savings bank, which will total about $140,000. This 5 per cent disbursement originally was forecast for the December quarter, but it was delayed by the business slump and other factors.

Another disbursement vainly predicted for the last quarter and now foreseen for this one is that of the First State Bank of Barrington. This bank is expected to make a new 5 per cent disbursement, bringing the total since its suspension to 60 per cent.

Five per cent distributions also are seen for the Park Ridge State bank, the Fullerton State bank, the Elmwood Park State bank, the Kaufman State bank, the Morton Grove Trust and Savings bank, and the Peoples State Bank of Arlington Heights.

Three of the north and northwest bank repayments made last quarter were surprises in the sense that they were not predicted by the state auditor in his reports accompanying last September's statements.

Other Repayments.

These are the 15 per cent dividend of the Norwood Park Trust and Savings bank, amounting to about $10,100; the 5 per cent return of the Kimbell Trust and Savings bank, totaling about $61,100, and the 5 per cent refund of the Immel State bank, approximately $30,600.

Other north and northwest banks

LAST OF CHURCH FOUNDERS AIDS GOLDEN JUBILEE

Mrs. Brown Recalls First Meeting.

BY EDMUND M'KINSTRY.

The founding and growth of the Irving Park Methodist church, Grace and Keeler avenues, as it was witnessed by Mrs. Lester Brown, the last original member of the congregation, will be depicted in a pageant Tuesday evening, Feb. 15, in the church auditorium. Members of the church's clubs will make up the cast in portrayal which will be held as part of the fiftieth anniversary celebration.

Mrs. Lester Brown.

Mrs. Brown, 1904 Berteau avenue, has been a communicant of the church for the last fifty years. When the curtain rises on the play she is seated in an arm chair. She dozes and her dream is a series of scenes in the history of the half century old church. These scenes are reënacted in the pageant.

Recalls First Meeting.

In 1888 Mrs. Brown attended with her husband, who had been on the committee that raised funds to build the church, the first service, a prayer meeting in the new frame building that was the first Irving Park Methodist church. It was located where the Sunday school building now stands. Her son, Harry Brown, and daughter, Mrs. Roy Battis, as well as her grandchildren, were baptized in the church.

Those taking part in the play are Mrs. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Arndt Mortrud, Miss Grace Caldwell, Frank Monohan, Miss Meta Otjen, Miss Mildred Miller, Mrs. Elmer Zimmerman, W. E. Wakefield, Wallace Buffmier, Walter S. Lennerdson, Miss Marion Farnsworth, Miss Doris Plapp, and Miss Lillian Jensen.

Bishop to Speak.

Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf and Dr. Fred Stone, the only living former pastor of the church, will open the celebration with sermons at the morning service on Sunday, Feb. 13.

"Seth Parker" night will be sponsored by the young married people's club on Monday, Feb. 14, as the first social event in the anniversary week. Old time songs, both religious and popular, and home spun philosophy will be featured on the program. Dr. Theodore Bacmeister, president of the board of the church, is the sponsor and founder of the club.

In charge of the night are the officers: Harold Froberg, president; Mrs. Vera Spinner, vice president; Mrs. Pearl Eichstaedt, secretary; Walker S. Linnertson, corresponding secretary, and George Burbach, treasurer.

Homecoming Feb. 18.

Music night, Feb. 16, will bring back to the church former choir singers, directors, and organists. The music will be under the direction of Charles O. Loucks and Harry S. Walsch. Women's day will be held at the church Feb. 17. It will be sponsored jointly by the Ladies' Aid society, of which Mrs. M. D. Strong is president, and the Missionary society, whose president is Mrs. Waldemar Petersen.

Homecoming night will be Friday, Feb. 18. A dinner, at which Dr. Bacmeister will display his collections of pictures of the church and church groups, will be the highlight of the day. The week of celebration will close with communion service on Sunday morning, Feb. 19, at which the pastor, the Rev. Ralph Wakefield, will be assisted by the Rev. A. Turley Stephen, district superintendent of the Methodist church.

CANDLE LIGHT SERVICE TO BE HELD TONIGHT

"The Feast of Lights," a candle light service, will be given by the vested choirs of St. John's Episcopal church at 8 o'clock this evening in the church, Byron street and Kostner avenue. Miss Ruth Sherrill Wreden, choir director, will be assisted by Harry H. Flinn, organist, and Richard Thrumston.

The choir will sing "Arise, Shine, for the Light Is Come," by Elvey, and "Send Out Thy Light," by Gounod. Soloists will be Lillian E. Jamieson, soprano, and Richard J. Evans, tenor.

The Men's club of the church will sponsor a "Nite in Monte Carlo" on Wednesday evening, Feb. 16. Planning the carnival are Richard C. DeZur, Joe C. Adams, Burton Holmes Dunn, and Howell L. Evans. The church recreation room will be decorated to resemble "an ol' music hall"

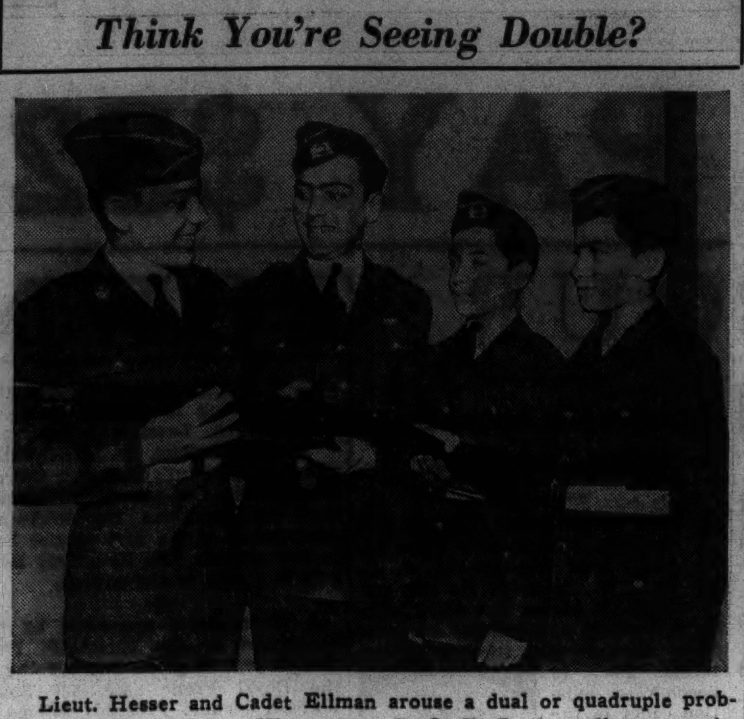
Think You're Seeing Double?



Lieut. Hesser and Cadet Ellman arouse a dual or quadruple problem in the Von Steuben High school R. O. T. C., depending upon the way one regards it. For when the commanding officers call Lieut. Hesser two persons, almost identical in appearance, respond. And, likewise, for Cadet Ellman. Yes, there are two sets of twins in the unit. Left to right, Cadet Second Lieutenants Frank and Charles Hesser and Cadets Leonard and Carvyn Ellman. And with this enrollment Von Steuben claims some sort of record. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

YOUNG RIFLEMEN TO COMPETE ON ACADEMY RANGE

Interschool Meet Is Set for April 8-9.

The third annual Midwest Interscholastic Rifle matches will take place April 8 and 9 at the Morgan Park Military academy under the auspices of the National Rifle association and the Illinois State Rifle association, it was announced last week by Maj. Paul O. Franson, executive officer for the contest. About 250 are expected to compete in the seven matches.

A portable range with 25 firing points will be constructed in the school gymnasium. Contestants, except for the fathers in Match 7, must be under 19 years of age and junior members or affiliated with a junior club of the National Rifle association or undergraduate students attending school.

Will Fire 10 Rounds.

Individuals and teams composed of from five to eight members will fire ten rounds in each of the four positions in two stages of prone and kneeling and sitting and standing.

The high five scores of team members in each stage will count for the team total in Match 1. Five silver medals will be awarded to the winning team, five bronze to the second and five bronze to the third.

Fathers and sons or daughters will fire 10 rounds in the prone position for Match 7, and the winners will receive silver medals.

Other officials for the matches will be Maj. Lester F. Stuart, president of the Illinois State Rifle association, range officer; Maj. Thomas H. Comprere, infantry reserve, assistant range officer; H. H. Goebel, director of the junior division of the National Rifle association, statistical officer; Sergt. George H. Freer, assistant statistical officer, and Michael Gawron, secretary of the Illinois State Rifle association, chief scorer.

Those on Committee.

Last year 186 competitors took part, and a team from the Culver Military academy captured Match 1 with another Culver squad finishing in second place. L. R. Kellam of Culver won Matches 2 and 3 and second in Match 4. Another Culver cadet, J. M. Coffield, was the high man in Match 4.

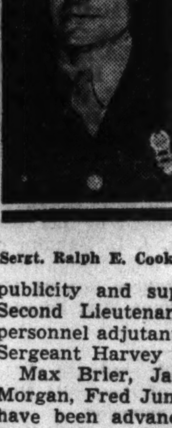
Cadet Captain Harvey Badesch has been named battalion commander of the Von Steuben High school R. O. T. C. for the new semester, it was announced last week by Sergt. Ralph E. Cook, military instructor.



Sergt. Ralph E. Cook.

The newly appointed battalion staf is composed of Cadet Captain John Haunschild, adjutant; Cadet Captain Fred Genthner, plans and training officer; Cadet Second Lieutenant Robert Frank, publicity and supply officer; Cadet Second Lieutenant Gerald Shapiro, personnel adjutant, and Cadet Master Sergeant Harvey Eager.

Max Brier, Jack Lubor, Warren Morgan, Fred Junek, and Joe Settler have been advanced from the rank of lieutenants to cadet captains and company commanders. They will head companies A, B, C, and D and the band, respectively.

On the basis of a test on military organization, discipline, and courtesy, sanitation and first aid, drill and command, musketry, marksmanship, and combat principles, nine noncommissioned officers have been promoted to cadet second lieutenants. They are George Busch, Bruce Durling, Jerome Forkosh, Charles Hesser, Frank Hesser, Edward Klemptner, Harvey Mittenthal, Phillip O'Brien, and William Veeck.

Possible marks are 2,000 and 4,000.

TRAILER CATHEDRAL BISHOP TO ADDRESS SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

The Rt. Rev. Henry Wise Hobson, Episcopal bishop of Southern Ohio, will make his first appearance before the Sunday Evening club tonight in Orchestra hall. His topic will be "The Power of Understanding. Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, will introduce the speaker, and Col. Robert G. Peck of St. James' church, Huron and North Wabash, will take part in the program.

Bishop Hobson.

Bishop Hobson has come to be known as "Trailer Cathedral Bishop," because he covers his extensive diocese with an automobile trailer completely fitted out with altar, organ and vestments. Thus this inexpensive portable church takes the place of the million dollar cathedral which had been projected for Cincinnati, the episcopal seat.

At the 7 o'clock service a motion picture will be shown covering incidents in the life of Abraham Lincoln. The choir, at the main service, will give a "popular request" program which will include "Soft Floating on the Evening Air," by George Root, formerly a resident of Chicago.

Eight Closed State Banks Expected to Pay $323,600

and the amount and percentage of their returns to general creditors last quarter are: Des Plaines State bank, $48,800, or 7½ per cent; Northbrook State bank, $15,700, or 12 per cent, and Humboldt State bank, $95,000, or 5 per cent. Only 5 per rent was predicted three months ago for the Des Plaines bank, and 10 per cent for the Northbrook institution.

Below are listed the analyses for 20 of the 37 closed Cook county state banks of the northwest side and suburbs, with estimates of the future dividend outlook:

DES PLAINES STATE BANK—Total receipts, $973,889. Paid on prior claims, $146,843. Paid depositors, $499,394, or 50 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $8,345; legal, $41,266; clerical, $48,702; interest, $765; advanced to protect assets, $192,747, with $171,318 refunded. Cash, $35,822. Last quarter's distribution was the seventh. Future ones may total 10 to 15 per cent more.

ELMWOOD PARK STATE BANK—Total receipts, $535,539. Paid on prior claims, $221,947. Paid depositors, $107,146, or 19½ per cent. Costs: Receivers, $7,595; legal, $33,430; clerical, $40,479; interest, $33; advanced to protect assets, $95,649, with $88,075 refunded. Cash, $29,256. Indications are that the present payout may be nearly doubled.

ELSTON STATE BANK—Total receipts, $279,193. Paid on prior claims, $57,024. Paid depositors, $22,593, or 5 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $4,310; legal, $21,746; clerical, $31,188; interest, $209; advanced to protect assets, $74,285, with $60,650 refunded. Cash, $67,834. The ultimate total return here will be small, most of the cash on hand being reserved for prior claim by the county collector.

EMPIRE TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $153,840. Paid on prior claims, $78,228. Paid depositors, $20,292, or 100 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $1,737; legal, $28,614; clerical, $24,648; interest, $1,250; advanced to protect assets, $8,989, with $9,957 refunded. Cash $76. Plans for lifting the receivership are nearly complete.

FIRST STATE BANK OF BARRINGTON—Total receipts, $456,978. Paid on prior claims, $130,654. Paid depositors, $154,336, or 55 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $3,290; legal, $12,647; clerical, $28,275; interest, $3,804; advanced to protect assets, $69,728, with $64,991 refunded. Cash, $15,704. The new repayment expected will be the ninth. Others may boost the total to 75 or 80 per cent.

FULLERTON STATE BANK—Total receipts, $1,009,838. Paid on prior claims, $220,569. Paid depositors, $415,700, or 30 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $9,648; legal, $82,665; clerical, $56,600; interest, $81; advanced to protect assets, $190,801, with $148,945 refunded. Cash, $33,770. There is some prospect of a new 5 per cent distribution before next July 1. The total is now estimated at 40 to 45 per cent.

HUMBOLDT STATE BANK—Total receipts, $1,777,524. Paid on prior claims, $386,886. Paid depositors, $658,985, or 35 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $9,831; legal, $82,295; clerical, $110,055; interest, $275; advanced to protect assets, $495,908, with $457,203 refunded. Cash, $33,286. Realty holdings may bring another 5 or 10 per cent for depositors.

IMMEL STATE BANK—Total receipts, $291,135. Paid on prior claims, $16,001. Paid depositors, $153,146, or 25 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $10,575; legal, $17,627; clerical, $36,173; interest, $42; advanced to protect assets, $54,614, with $38,265 refunded. Cash, $2,953. The latest distribution was the fourth. The final payout may reach 35 or 40 per cent.

IMMIGRANT STATE BANK—Total receipts, $157,186. Paid on prior claims, $34,303. Paid depositors, $13,892, or 8 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $5,554; legal, $10,576; clerical, $15,128; interest, $919; advanced to protect assets, $72,193, with $76,386 refunded. Cash, $4,617. Nearly all the assets are pledged for an RFC loan and the outlook is not bright.

ITALIAN TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $830,851. Paid on prior claims, $334,710. Paid depositors, $226,208, or 35 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $8,462; legal, $27,501; clerical, $44,911; interest, $17,647; advanced to protect assets, $39,390, with $37,467 refunded. Cash, $16,419. Depositors may get another 15 per cent.

KIMBELL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $1,345,399. Paid on prior claims, $535,820. Paid depositors, $122,248, or 10 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $8,415; legal, $28,417; clerical, $104,704; interest, $40,948; advanced to protect assets, $403,471, with $429,868 refunded. Cash, $27,742. There is some likelihood that depositors may ultimately receive 30 per cent.

LINCOLN TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $2,263,117. Paid on prior claims, $288,315. Paid depositors, $986,196, or 35 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $17,810; legal, $100,183; clerical, $146,693; interest, $7,128; advanced to protect assets, $465,658, with $413,267 refunded. Cash, $72,049. The expected repayment will be the fourth. Future ones may bring the total to 45 or 50 per cent.

LOGAN SQUARE STATE SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $737,553. Paid on prior claims, $322,727. Paid nothing to depositors. Costs: Receivers, $6,566; legal, $24,492; clerical, $61,344; interest, $49,826; advanced to protect assets, $230,733, with $185,923 refunded. Cash, $41,862. The first 5 per cent division may be made this year and there will be little left thereafter.

MONTROSE TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $244,015. Paid on prior claims, $86,758. Paid depositors, $14,067, or 5 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $6,539; legal, $36,906; clerical, $33,471; interest, $4,003; advanced to protect assets, $20,342, with $21,196 refunded. Cash, $11,303. Some $5,000 more must be realized before there can be another distribution. An ultimate 15 per cent total return is estimated.

NOEL STATE BANK—Total receipts, $3,486,567. Paid on prior claims, $1,086,749. Paid depositors, $797,997, or 23 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $15,647; legal, $226,890; clerical, $196,336; interest, $1,981; advanced to protect assets, $1,056,715, with $850,679 refunded. Cash, $104,249. Cash is about $75,000 shy of the total necessary for the next 5 per cent return. The total is estimated at 40 to 45 per cent.

NORTHWESTERN TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $11,641,533. Paid on prior claims, $1,873,960. Paid depositors, $4,755,897, or 50 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $35,454; legal, $231,541; clerical, $342,602; interest, $216,504; advanced to protect assets, $2,492,785, with $2,053,291 refunded. Cash, $138,991. The time of the next refund is not determinable because of pending litigation and the pledging of most of the assets to the RFC for a $1,400,000 loan.

NORWOOD PARK TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $122,084. Paid on prior claims, $9,694. Paid depositors, $27,980, or 40 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $1,433; legal, $6,992; clerical, $11,231; interest, $2,286; advanced to protect assets, $34,437, with $34,768 refunded. Cash, $2,820. The latest distribution was the second. Others may increase the total to 55 per cent.

Both Mr. Albers and Mr. Barrett emphasized that their estimates concerning future recoveries by depositors are purely tentative and may be influenced widely by market and other conditions.

'I MET LINCOLN,' RECALLS ACTIVE F. M. SMITH, 85

Medill and Douglas Also Among Memories.

His business card reads: "F. Marion Smith, canners' and food brokers' representative. Home address, 5858 Nina avenue, Norwood Park." But this does not begin to describe the Mr. Smith who recently celebrated his 85th birthday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Lee Bisdorf, with whom he now resides.

F. Marion Smith.

Mr. Smith still uses that business card every weekday morning when he calls on wholesale grocery houses, but during the afternoons and evenings he sits at home reading his newspaper, playing with his hunting dog, and chatting about politics and the experiences of a long life. He also listens to baseball broadcasts, for that is his hobby.

Although born in Indiana, Mr. Smith spent his childhood on a farm in Dewitt county, eight miles west of Clinton, Ill. It was on this farm, as a child, that he met several young men of the day who later helped make United States history.

Lincoln Among Visitors.

Among the visitors was tall, lanky Abe Lincoln, who stopped for dinner at the farm on his way to a debate in Rockford, Ill. But in those days Mr. Lincoln was just a struggling young lawyer and the really exciting part of the visit to a farm child was the opportunity of seeing and riding in a new canopy topped surrey in which Lincoln was traveling.

Also early in life Mr. Smith met Stephen A. Douglas, Joseph Medill, publisher of THE TRIBUNE; Judge David Davis, and Adlai E. Stevenson, who became vice president under Grover Cleveland.

Moved to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith and their family, which totaled seven, moved from the farm to Clarion, Ia., and then to Chicago. Mrs. Smith died a few years ago.

RIIS PARK FINDS ENOUGH UKELELE FANS FOR CLUB

Nearly twenty "uke strummers" signed up for membership in the newly organized Ukulele club of Riis park, Wrightwood and Meade avenues, according to Sam D. Pecoraro, director of the park.

Practice seasons are held each Friday evening in the fieldhouse under the direction of Lawrence Bol, instructor. Membership in the club is still open. After several months of practice the club contemplates presenting concerts at the park.

Recall Schoolday Romance

MR. AND MRS. JOHN M. SIPE.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Sipe, 4229 North Kedvale avenue, added further proof of the lasting quality of school day romances when they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Tuesday evening at a family dinner in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Friends and relatives attended an open house celebration in their home on the eve of their anniversary.

Mr. Sipe, who is 73 years old, was born in Lexington, O. Later he moved with his parents to Muncie, Ind., and earned a teacher's certificate. With the certificate as security against the world, he followed Horace Greeley's advice and traveled west to Muscatine, Ia., where he became an instructor and principal of a country school.

The star pupil of the country school was Miss Isia Weaver who in 1888 became the bride of Mr. Sipe. After their marriage, the couple moved to Chicago and Mr. Sipe entered the government railway mail service. Now retired, Mr. Sipe was for thirty years railway clerk on the Santa Fe run between Chicago and Kansas City, Mo.

Organizing for action, the mothers of handicapped children who attend the Jahn school, 3149 North Wolcott avenue, will concentrate on obtaining the new school which they have been requesting since 1921. The school board has included a $700,000 grant in the 1938 budget for the school, but if the appropriation is not used this year it reverts to the general fund.

Since 1921 when the crippled children were given temporary rooms on the first floor and in the basement of Jahn school, and in an adjoining portable, the parents have been working for a separate building centrally located between the north and northwest districts. NO. 1 HEADACHE JOB OF NATION? THIS MAY BE IT

Network's Feminine Censor Tells Her Troubles.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Who has the No. 1 headache job of the nation? If you think you have, listen to the sad story of Janet Macrorie, head of NBC's continuity acceptance department—in other words, the censorship department. The comedians whose scripts she slashes from Adolph to Zukor call her "the old maid on the second floor." What the advertising agencies experts and many others call her she doesn't even like to think about—and she knows it could never be broadcast.

All script material on the network goes over her desk for approval.

She is usually "in the middle" of most rows over what is suitable for the air and what is not. She missed the Hugh Johnson fracas over his proposed venereal disease talk because she was in Washington at the time. But she thinks medical matters should not be discussed on sponsored programs. The Mae West thing was handled on the west coast and she doesn't care to discuss the merits of that case.

She has plenty of worries just getting through each day. If you think what you hear on the air is bad, you should see some of the stuff she catches. Plenty of it is unprintable. Sexy allusions and vulgarities are usually easy enough to detect.

She's Heard Most of Them.

It's the double entendres and risque allusions that plague her most. Many of the modern dirty stories, Miss Macrorie admits, she has heard. But when she runs across a story which has a doubtful passage in it she sends it to the page boys' locker room for scrutiny. If it passes muster there it's fit for the youth of America.

Few innuendoes fool her but once in a while one slips by because she reads the script silently. An innocent bit passed through her hands not so long ago. It read all right to Miss M., but when Bea Little gave it that certain inflection, Whe-e-e!

The network has a few absolute don'ts. You may not speak disparagingly of the deity; sex allusions are out; so is talk about perversions; also material that reflects upon any group, race, or creed. Thus "wop," "dago," "polack," "greaser," and such are out.

Nor may you characterize a drunken woman on the air whatever the moral payoff.

Sectional reactions are hard to anticipate, she reports. Sometime ago Rudy Vallee broadcast a scene from "Having Wonderful Time" in which an extra marital relation between boy and girl was suggested. There were lots of complaints and Kansas in particular objected violently.

The Attitude of the South.

The south thinks of a lady as living in a house of orchids, says Miss Macrorie. They squawk from Baltimore to Amarillo if a script indicates that a woman is not a hot house flower. The southern folks also are very touchy about hillbilly stuff.

In NBC's detective story stuff the chain works with the department of justice to ban descriptions of cracking safes, dynamiting bridges, burglar technique and such. [We recall, however, that on Gang Busters on an opposition network that a description was once given for breaking a plate glass window noiselessly. Sometime later a survey was made by an independent agency showing that on the week following the curve for broken school, shop and home windows went up terrifically across the nation. Lots of boys tried the stunt.]

Miss Macrorie revealed that the network has somewhat modified its stand to keep controversial subjects off sponsored programs. However, if the sponsor puts on such a program he must agree to a reply from the group criticized. The author of "America's Sixty Families" was recently given a chance to reply to an attack by Hugh Johnson. This modification may be the result of criticism heaped on the network when it declined to let the Chinese ambassador reply to Ambassador Saito of Japan.

Rules on Advertising Copy.

Miss Macrorie also rules on advertising blurbs.

"Often, this is a matter of timing," she explained. "What may sound all right at 10 a. m. wouldn't do for the dinner hour. We do not permit objectionable reference to adolescent pimples and how to get rid of them through certain applications—things like that."

Other items on the Macrorie black list are fortune telling programs; unethical doctors' broadcasts, and patent medicines that have not passed certain checks by the authorities.

Miss Macrorie says that her guiding rule is that radio should inform and amuse without offending the best possible taste.

That's why she scrapped a script a comic tried to get an o. k. on recently portraying Paul Revere, riding to rouse the colonials against the British, and stopping for a drink at each door. He got cockeyed!

Deems Taylor will comment during the intermission of the program, which also lists Weber's "Der Freischultz" Overture and the Fourth Symphony of Brahms.

Ria Ginster, distinguished European soprano, making her American radio debut with the Philadelphia orchestra, will be heard during the Magic Key of RCA program at 1 p. m. today over WENR.

VARIETY MARKS W-G-N AUDIENCE PRESENTATIONS

7 Shows Weekly Aired Before Guests.

A wide variety of entertainment will be offered listeners over W-G-N and the Mutual network from the main studio this week. Leading off with the "On a Sunday Afternoon" performance at 2 p. m. there'll be comedy, popular music, concert music, and drama.

Ella Logan, petite Scotch comedienne and songstress who is starred at the Chez Paree, will be the guest star on today's show. She will be heard singing "O, Dear, What Can the Matter Be!" and a comedy song, "Who Stole the Jam?"

The show, directed by Harold Stokes, will feature the W-G-N dance orchestra and chorus with Edna O'Dell and Bob Hannon as vocalists. The two young singers who won the Stokes' audition on the "Opportunity Knocks" portion of the show are Dorothy Russell, a charming ballad singer, and Don Carini, who's specialty is rhumbas and tangos.

Ruth Bailey and Olan Soule will play the leading rôles in "Curtain Time," the W-G-N and Mutual drama, at 9 p. m. Friday. The show will be selected by the radio audience from the three offered on audition last Friday, "Black Moonlight," "Doubled in Hearts," and "Castle on the Bayou."

W-G-N is now presenting seven visible shows each week. On Tuesday nights two commercial programs are heard, Kay Kiser's Musical Klass at 7 p. m. and the Northerners at 9:30 o'clock.

The schedule of the shows:

9:30 p. m. Monday—The Pageant of Melody, with Attilio Baggiore, tenor; Louise Hoe, soprano; the W-G-N Concert orchestra and chorus, under the direction of Joe Johnson.

7 p. m. Tuesday—Kay Kyser's Musical Klass, featuring the orchestra, Virginia Sims, Harry Babbitt, Sully Mason, and the contestants for the "Musical quiz" with Kay Kyser as master of ceremonies.

9:30 p. m. Tuesday—The Northerners octet and string orchestra, with George Grammer Smith as soloist, and Harry S. Walsh.

9:30 p. m. Wednesday—Melodies from the Sky, with Harold Stokes, the W-G-N Dance orchestra and glee club, Edna O'Dell, Arthur Wright, and Three Men and a Maid.

9:30 p. m. Thursday—The Concert Revue, directed by Joe Johnson and featuring the W-G-N Concert orchestra and chorus with Kathryn Witwer and William Miller as soloists.

MOON MULLINS
by Frank Willard
SAY, MAMIE- HOW ABOUT LETTIN' ME TAKE A DIME? I WANNA GET A ICE-CREAM SODY.
WHY A DIME? A ICE-CREAM SODY IS ONLY A NICKEL DOWN AT TH' CORNER.
I KNOW- BUT I GOT A DATE.
I THINK I REALLY HAD OUGHT TO HAVE A LITTLE POCKET MONEY, JEST IN CASE---
I SAID "NO!" NOT A NICKEL.
ALL RIGHT, OH, ALL RIGHT- YOU'LL BE SORRY SOME DAY. YOU'LL PROBABLY SPEND TH' REST OF YER LIFE BOWED DOWN WITH SHAME AND YOU'LL HAVE NOBODY TO BLAME BUT YERSELF.
HUH? WHAT'S THAT? WOTT'RE YOU GONNA DO?
I'M GOIN' OUT! AND WHAT IF A HOLDUP MAN STICKS A GUN UNDER MY NOSE AND SAYS "MONEY OR YER LIFE!" AND THEN WHERE'LL I BE NOT HAVIN' ANY MONEY?
I KNOW YOU AIN'T GOT A DIME SO THEY'S NO USE ASKIN' YOU, UNCLE WILLIE. HECK! WHY DIDN'T YOU NEVER MAKE A LOTTA DOUGH SO YOU COULD DIE AND LEAVE ME SOME?

SPEED DEMON!

—he burns up terrific bodily energy every day!

Spends more than his father! Yes, each day a little chap spends more bodily energy in proportion to his weight than an adult. So every meal is vital—breakfast particularly. It must stoke him up well to see him through the action-crammed morning hours. That's one reason hot Cream of Wheat is so popular. It's fairly brimming with the food energy that play and growth require.

Less than ½¢ a serving! Over 50 generous helpings are in each large package. Enjoy it plain, or with dates, raisins, or brown sugar added. Any way you serve it, it's delicious. For Cream of Wheat is a blend from the best hard wheats sun-ripened in favored growing areas. Heat-treated and purified. 3½ million bowls are eaten daily!

For 43 years this tempting hot cereal has been a recognized factor in speeding natural weight gains. Your doctor will undoubtedly tell you of its muscle-building protein and its carbohydrate charged with food energy. Cream of Wheat is simplicity itself for young systems to handle. Digestion begins right in the mouth.

YOU CAN'T BE ARRESTED FOR IT!

BUT BETTY FOUND BAD BREATH CAN PLAY HOB WITH ROMANCE!

THE SKI SLIDE IS PERFECT TODAY, BETTY! SURE YOU WON'T CHANGE YOUR MIND AND COME ALONG?

AND WATCH BILL MAKE A FOOL OF HIMSELF OVER THAT COLLINS GIRL? NO THANKS!

LISTEN, BETTY! WHY BLAME BILL? HAVE YOU EVER THOUGHT THAT IT MIGHT BE YOUR FAULT? MAYBE IF YOU'D TALK TO YOUR DENTIST ABOUT YOUR BREATH --

MY BREATH!

BETTY, TESTS INDICATE THAT 76% OF ALL PEOPLE OVER THE AGE OF 17 HAVE BAD BREATH. AND TESTS ALSO SHOW THAT MOST BAD BREATH COMES FROM IMPROPERLY CLEANED TEETH. I ADVISE COLGATE DENTAL CREAM BECAUSE...

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM COMBATS BAD BREATH

"Ordinary cleansing methods, which merely polish the exposed surfaces of your teeth, fail to remove the decaying food deposits in hidden crevices between your teeth. And these deposits, tests indicate, are the source of most bad breath . . . of dull, dingy teeth . . . and of much tooth decay.

"But Colgate Dental Cream has a special penetrating foam which gets into these tiny hidden crevices—emulsifies and washes away the decaying food deposits that cause bad breath. And at the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent thoroughly cleans the enamel—makes your teeth sparkle—gives new brilliance to your smile.

"So brush your teeth, gums, tongue with Colgate's at least twice daily and have cleaner, brighter teeth—sweeter, purer breath."

THREE WEEKS LATER -- THANKS TO COLGATE'S

...AND NO TOOTHPASTE EVER MADE MY TEETH AS BRIGHT AND CLEAN AS COLGATE'S!

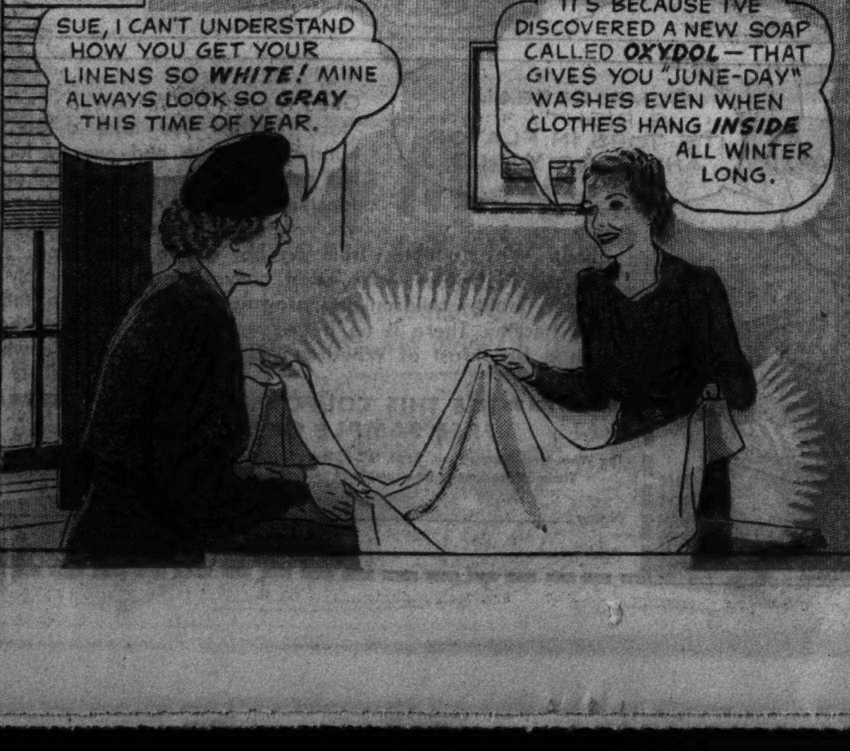
— THEN SUE DISCOVERED A WAY TO GET "JUNE-DAY" WASHES, EVEN WHEN CLOTHES ARE BASEMENT-DRIED
IF I COULD ONLY HANG THESE CLOTHES OUT IN THE SUN JUST ONCE! UGH! THEY ACTUALLY SMELL MUSTY!
BUT, SUE, WHY DON'T YOU TRY THAT WHITER-WASHING, GRANULATED SOAP EVERYONE'S RAVING ABOUT THESE DAYS?
THAT'S JUST THE POINT, MARY! I'M USING A GRANULATED SOAP ALREADY — AND EVERYTHING IS STILL FULL OF THAT AWFUL "WINTER GRAY!"
BUT THAT'S ONE OF THOSE "HALF-WAY" GRANULATED SOAPS! WHAT YOU NEED IS THE NEW, "NO-SCRUB" OXYDOL — THAT SOAKS CLOTHES 4 TO 5 SHADES WHITER... WAIT, I'LL GET MY PACKAGE...
Mary is right. Recent tests showed that Oxydol got white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter than other granulated soaps tested.
A FEW MINUTES AFTER MARY'S RETURN
BUT, IF OXYDOL SOAKS WHITE CLOTHES SO MUCH WHITER, ARE YOU SURE IT'S SAFE FOR COLORED THINGS?
ABSOLUTELY! I'VE WASHED THIS PRINT DRESS IN OXYDOL SCORES OF TIMES — AND IT'S STILL BRIGHT AS A NEW DOLLAR!
HONESTLY, IT'S A MIRACLE! ONLY 15 MINUTES' SOAKING — AND THEY SPARKLE AS IF THEY'D HUNG IN THE SUMMER SUN FOR HOURS!
AND JUST SEE HOW FRESH AND SWEET THEY SMELL!



LATER
SUE, I CAN'T UNDERSTAND HOW YOU GET YOUR LINENS SO WHITE! MINE ALWAYS LOOK SO GRAY THIS TIME OF YEAR.
IT'S BECAUSE I'VE DISCOVERED A NEW SOAP CALLED OXYDOL — THAT GIVES YOU "JUNE-DAY" WASHES EVEN WHEN CLOTHES HANG INSIDE ALL WINTER LONG.

AMAZING NEW "NO-SCRUB" SOAP

Banishes Winter-Gray Almost Like Magic

- Now—say good-bye to unsightly "winter gray," even though clothes must hang in the basement all winter long. See shirts, sheets, linens—everything you wash—come sparkling fresh and white as a "day in June!"

A remarkable new laundry soap called OXYDOL produces this amazing result. For it works on an entirely new principle—combining speed and safety in a way no single soap has ever done before.

OXYDOL was developed by the makers of gentle Ivory soap at a cost of over $1,000,000. It is the result of a patented process to make soap far faster acting . . . an astonishing new formula that makes mild, gentle soap 2 to 3 times whiter washing. Thus it does these 4 amazing things:

(1) Soaks out dirt in 15 minutes, without scrubbing or boiling. Even cuffs and "grimy" spots come snowy white with a few quick rubs. (2) Cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine. (3) Gets white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter as proved by scientific Tintometer tests. (4) Yet so safe that every washable color comes out dazzling, brilliant, fresh!

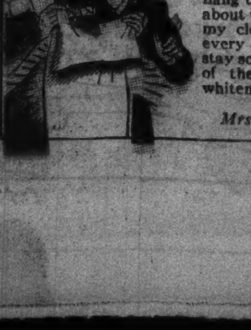
OXYDOL is economical, too. Tests against popular package soaps show that, cup for cup, OXYDOL gives 28% to 60% MORE SUDS. And one package often goes one-third to one-half again as far as even the most modern flakes!

So—for "June day" washes even in the dead of winter, try OXYDOL. At all dealers. Get a package today! Procter & Gamble.

TESTED AND APPROVED BY GOOD HOUSEKEEPING INSTITUTE

Her Neighbors Marvel At Whiteness Of "Basement-Dried" Clothes



"I want you to know how very much I like OXYDOL for washing clothes.

"I dry clothes in the basement—so my white things are without benefit of the sun much of the time. Yet, when I do hang them outside my neighbors remark about their whiteness. In the winter when my clothes are dried in the basement every washday, I marvel that they can stay so white without the bleaching effect of the sun or without any so-called whitening solution.

Good reasons for Wheatena's being "tops". When you take a body-building, strength-and-energy food like rich, brown wheat, and roast and toast it the way Wheatena does—you've got a cereal worth shouting about. Why, athletes train on hot brown Wheatena, six months' old babies thrive on it, convalescents recover on it—and healthy children and grown-ups eat it to help them stay healthy. There is no better way to start the day than with a breakfast of Wheatena. Try it, and you'll see why.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

European Starling

February 5, 1938.

REFUSING to leave the experimental farm even though winter does not make it easy to find food, the European starlings are doing more than their share to add life to the winter landscape. These birds may be seen on many farms in Chicagoland. At this time of the year they travel around in flocks, often coming to silos to roost at night.

We see them at the Wheaton farm perched on the wires along the road, in the osage orange hedges, or flying into cornfields to look for food. They also like to go to the orchards where there are frozen apples. Its fondness for fruit gets it into trouble sometimes, because the starling destroys considerable fruit that is ripening on the trees.

Migrates to Midwest.

Of all the small birds that the farmer may see during the midwinter months, the starling now is about the most common. It has been moving into the middle west from the east, is finding conditions ideal for nesting and rearing its young, and the indications are that the birds will continue to increase until they become real pests . . . a situation that prevails in some eastern cities.

But as we see the starling on the experimental farm this conclusion about this bird is inevitable: he's no softie. The starling does not migrate south when hosts of our song birds go. He's a year 'round resident willing to brave cold weather! In the spring we see them around the barnyard as mated pairs of birds will take possession of old woodpecker nesting sites or build nests in natural cavities in the trees. Last summer we watched a family of these birds close to the sheep barn on the farm. The adult starlings had found a natural cavity in a good sized maple and had built their nest in it.

Enjoy Orchards.

The way the birds sail into orchards and feast on the fruit which still clings to the branches is one of the interesting winter pictures on the farm and elsewhere in Chicagoland. We have watched a flock of 15 or 20 birds take possession of an orchard in order to enjoy a meal of apples. They slide up to the fruit and hammer away on it with their sharp bills. The birds return day after day to feed on unpicked fruit.

When the starlings first began to appear in northern Illinois, they deceived some unobservant bird students. Sometimes the starlings were mistaken for martins and bird fans let these hardy, year round bird residents take over purple martin houses. The starling is dark . . . a metallic purplish green color. Its upper parts are heavily spotted with cream-buff in winter. The under parts of the bird are spotted with white.

It looks something like a spotted blackbird. The tail of the bird is short and square, as if some one had snipped off part of it. These features, as well as the starling's habit of sailing with wings outstretched when in flight, make it rather easy to identify.

REAL ESTATE LOANS, MORTGAGES.

—WE GROW ABOUT LAST YEAR'S WORK—

127 CASES: We got FHA O.K.'s for 78% to 80% of the value on homes—brick, stucco, frame—up to thirty years old.

142 CASES: We advanced about $34,000 for repairs. These repaired homes were sold afterward and we financed the sales by FHA loans.

68 CASES: We financed new constructions for owners who had their homes, apartments and stores built; also for builders who built and sold homes at a profit.

17 CASES: We got reductions of $100 to $5,000 each from mortgage owners, bondholders and banks and refinanced the buildings in reduced amounts. By skilled negotiations we held off foreclosures and saved the homes of many clients.

42 CASES: We advanced funds to make the monthly FHA payments for clients who, because of sickness, sudden layoffs, etc., were delayed in making their payments and saved them from anxiety and worry.

We are proud of our record and ask for your business.

NAIL POLISH BRUSH
which will revolutionize the nail polish industry. The first tangible improvement in nail polish. The principle trouble with nail polish is the method of application, not in the polish. This curved brush outlines the moon precisely and the point fits neatly into the crevice at side of nail, which is always the case when using the old style, blunt, straight brush used in all nail polishes today. This patent may be purchased outright or on royalty basis. For appointment, ADDRESS B 558 TRIBUNE.

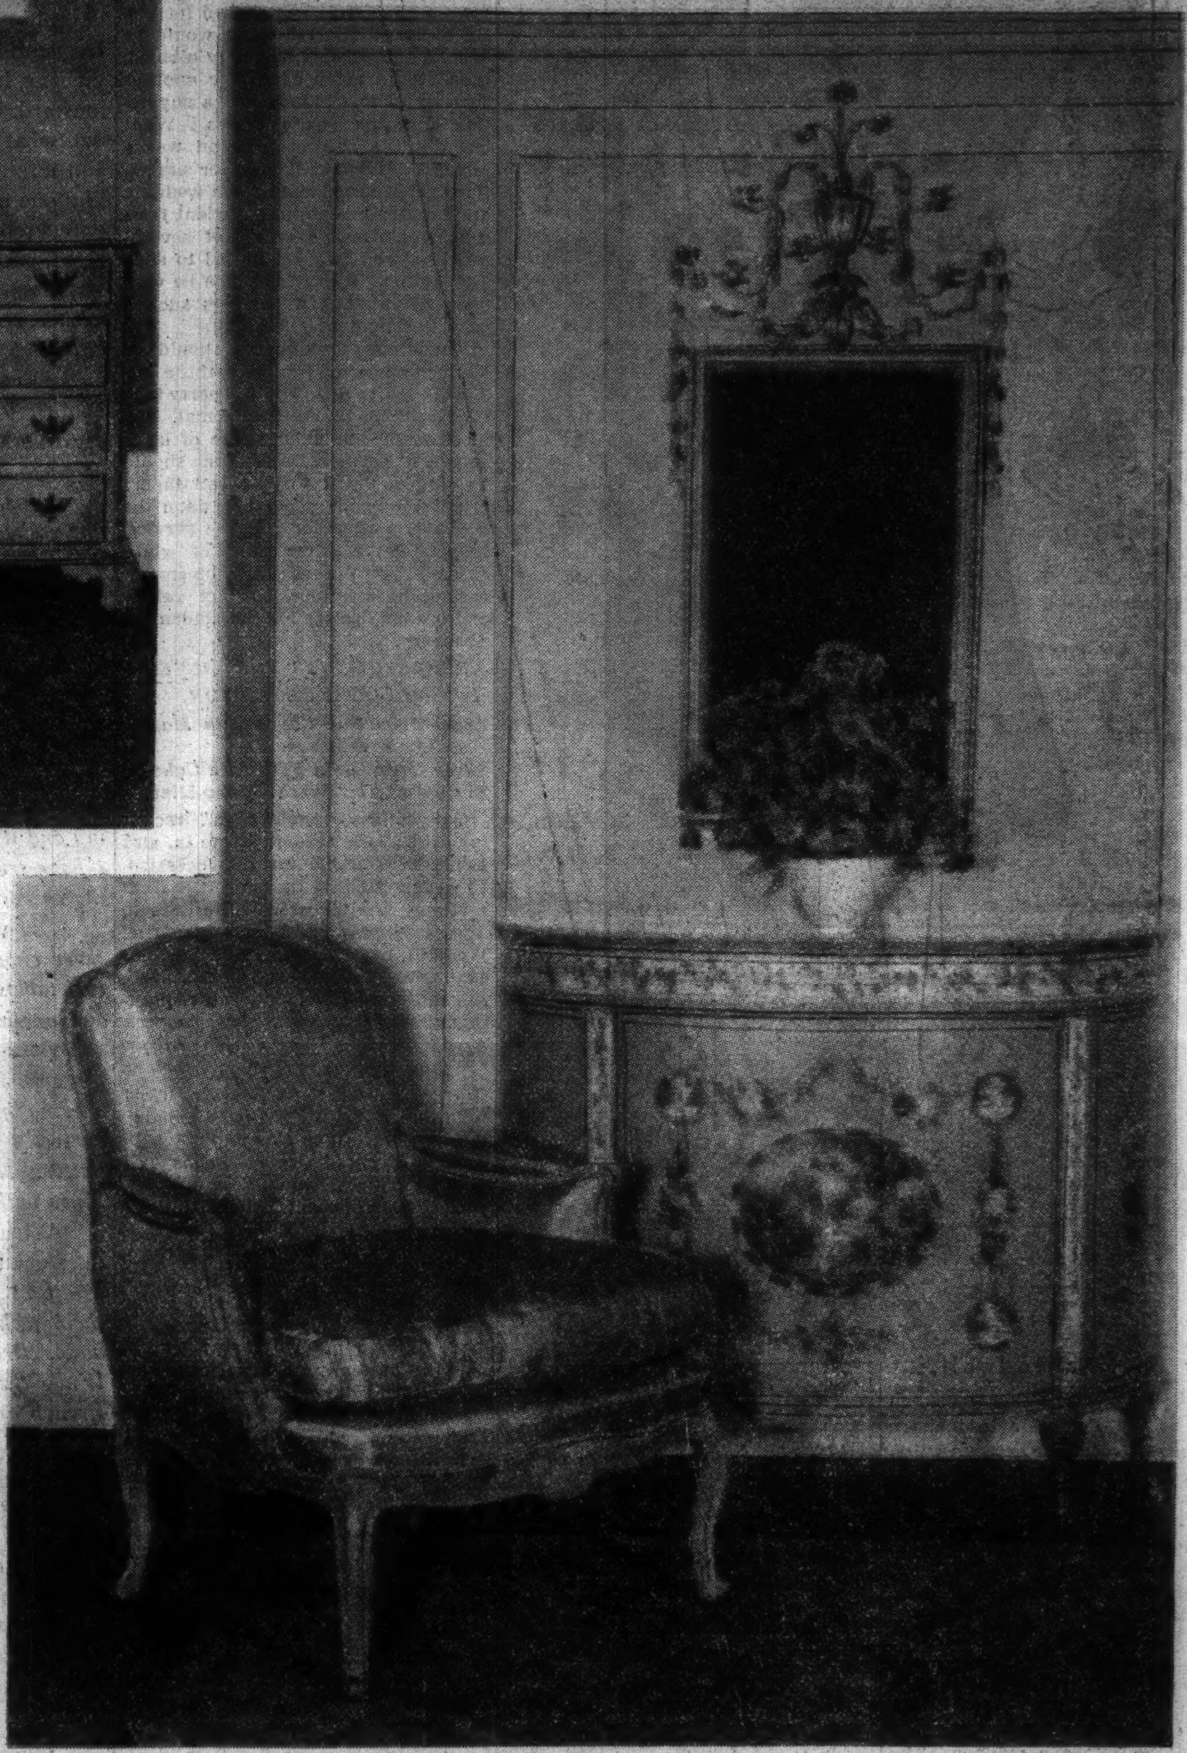
FOUR ARTISTIC ENSEMBLES FOR MODERN LIVING ROOMS

A pair of unusually beautiful small chests and matching lamps flank this charming couch. Before it a low mahogany coffee table is drawn up. The maker of this furniture has been selected by the Williamsburg Restoration to copy authentic pieces there. These are for the first time available to the public.



A symphony in pastel colors is this grouping of arm chair and console cabinet. The lovely medallion painting resembles those of Angelica Kauffmann, who decorated so many of the pieces of furniture designed by Robert Adam in 18th century England. The mirror is a copy of an Adam style. And the bone walnut chair is an adaptation of a Louis XV. bergere made about 1750, which is now in the Boston museum.

This fireside furniture grouping illustrates the livableness and beauty of 18th century English styles, and also shows an interesting combination of dark woods with light. The handsome fireplace mantel and the ornate mirror above it are in pickled finishes designed to bring out the natural tones of the wood. Instead of a low coffee table a taller tea table with graceful cabriole legs is placed before the sofa. This new-old height is in for a style revival. All the pictures on this page were taken at the Merchandise Mart.

Season's Furniture Varied in Style, with Emphasis on Comfort

By EDITH WEIGLE

SOFT, light toned upholstery fabrics, or ones in deep, rich, jewel shades, superior finishes on both blond and dark woods, and an emphasis on comfort tell the story of furniture this season. The photographs on this page, taken by The Tribune color camera, show artistic ensembles in the displays of two manufacturers at the Merchandise Mart.

● Below this picture is a grouping of comfortable arm chair and table that will appeal to men. The chair has a walnut frame and is of the English club lounge type, while the smart lamp table is of blond mahogany, Regency in feeling, and is finished with a little metal gallery. The pottery lamp has a clever straw shade.

● The same firm is showing the charming French chair and 18th century English commode in the next photograph, at the right. So perfectly done is the exquisite decorative medallion on the front of this cabinet that it might be the work of Angelica Kauffmann, who painted so many of the pieces designed by Robert Adam in the 18th century.

● The graceful mirror above this commode is a copy of one designed by Adam. And the bergere which inspired the arm chair is now in the Boston Museum of Art and was made about 1750.

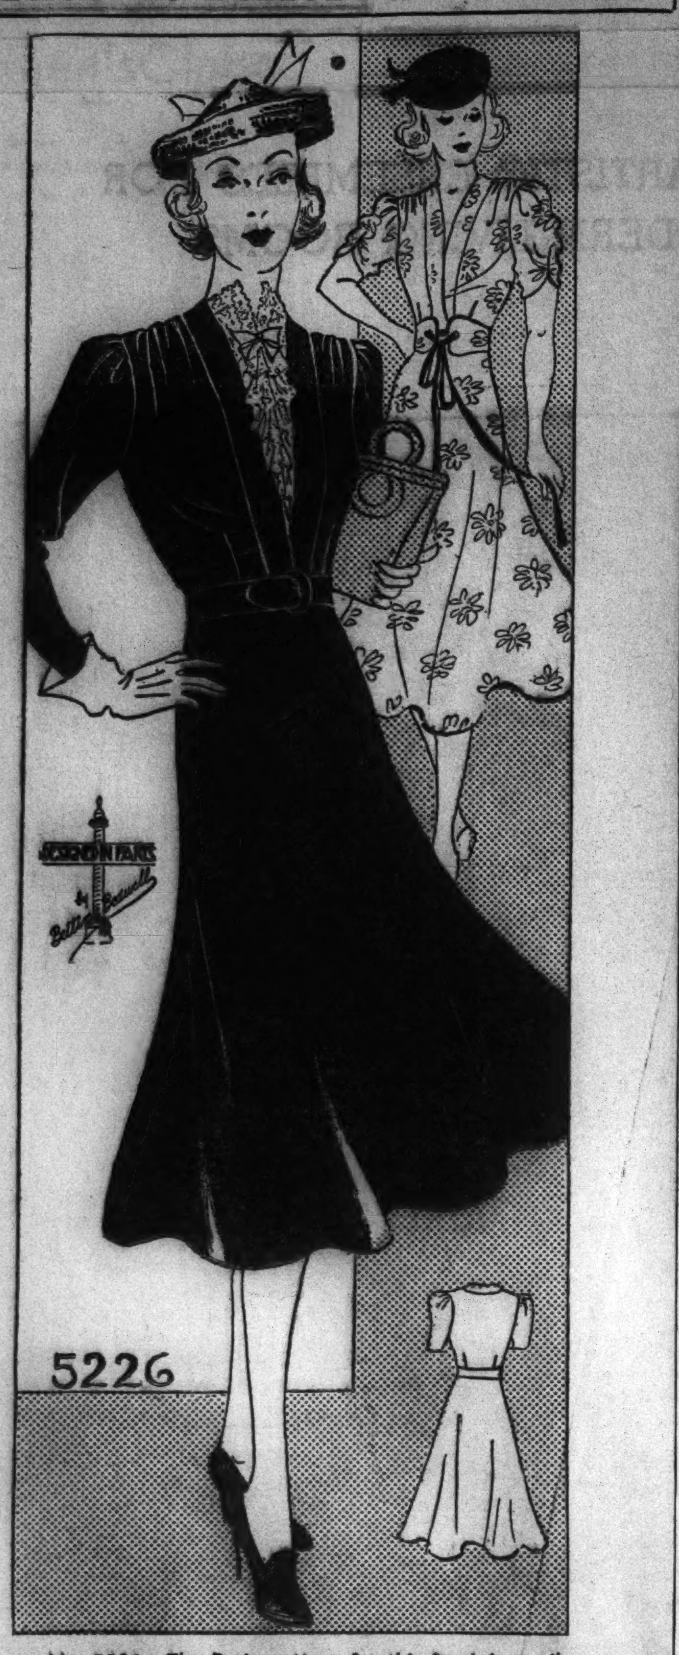
● There has been a decided return to the rococo, the ornate in furniture design as well as in other forms of decoration this season. It goes all the way through the price ranges, from the provincial and Tyrolean types to the prestige Victorian and Viennese trends.

● The Grand Rapids company making the crimson lounge chair and the French chair and painted commode in two of the photographs above has added a number of stunning pieces in pine to their large collection of 18th century reproductions. These are all in the style of William Kent, whose work was rococo in the extreme.

• While Kent's masterpieces were enormous in size because of the tremendous rooms in which they were used, these adaptations have been scaled down and fit beautifully into the average living room, dining room, or foyer.

Paris Frock Places Frothy Lace at Tailored Neckline



No. 5226—The Paris pattern for this frock is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—There's enough spring in the Paris air to make a woman want to pin a gay flower on her coat, put a new ribbon on her bonnet, and place some frothy white lace at her throat. The weather man probably has been treating you to the same type of spring longings, and here's a French frock to help you indulge in them.

The bodice is left open for the insertion of lace, which may be white or some dainty pastel shade. The narrow and very tailored belt may be replaced by a wide one, which is laced in the Tyrolean manner. The sleeves of the frock in the larger sketch are long and puffed at the shoulders. If you prefer short ones, you may have them instead. They may be left quite straight or they may be gathered just a trifle at the tips.

The original of this dress was particularly smart in black silk broadcloth, with the lace jabot in sycamore pink. I assure you, it was a striking combination. Any color combinations you may fancy will do very well. This is a good "basic" dress, too, allowing for a wide variety of color touches at the neckline. Simply vary the jabot with your mood.

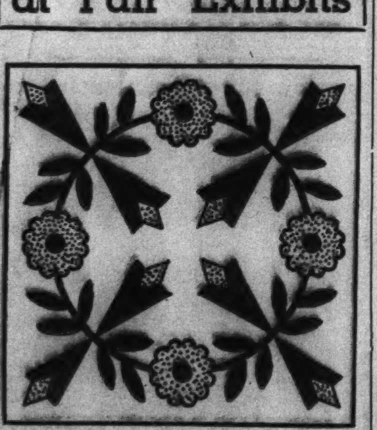
Applique Quilt Frequent Winner at Fair Exhibits



CENTENNIAL WREATH.

By Nancy Cabot.

Almost invariably this colorful and extremely interesting applique design, which we know as "Centennial Wreath," bobs up and takes a blue ribbon when it appears at state and county fairs. Old time quilt makers declare that this name always has been the title by which the block has been known. This, in itself, is unusual, since the quilt dates back to 1877, when it first was made in Philadelphia. The blocks are set together in an alternate arrangement with plain ones. The applique blocks are a combination of printed and plain materials in rose, pink, green, and dark blue against a white background. Finished with a four inch border and a one-half inch bias binding, the quilt measures 90 by 107 inches.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

At Anniversary Party Serve a Simple Menu

By Mary Meade.

A few families still observe the lovely custom of baking fruit cake on a wedding morning, and storing it away for an anniversary years later. Occasionally we read of a golden wedding made happier by the presence of a cake baked and hidden away fifty years before. Sentimental, perhaps, but what beautiful sentiment!

If I were a bride I think I should have a huge fruit cake baked for me. On special anniversaries it would be opened and nibbled, but only nibbled, then stored away again for another such occasion. This is just a suggestion for this year's brides. What brought the subject to mind was a handful of recent requests for suggestions about silver and golden wedding anniversary receptions. Ancient fruit cake won't feed a crowd of several hundred who may be invited to such a reception. It may not even be very good to eat, but if there is such a cake it should be exhibited.

Reception refreshments should be simple, more or less like those for a large tea party. The tea party type of reception is most informal, and most adapted to taking care of large groups of people. Decorations should be simple, too, I think. Tall tapers of silver or gold, depending upon the occasion, a silver or gold tea service, if possible; a silver bowl of white flowers for the silver anniversary, and perhaps a blue bowl of yellow and orange flowers for the golden anniversary.

REFRESHMENTS FOR GOLDEN WEDDING RECEPTION.

Orange Frosted Petit Fours or Gold and Silver Angel Food with Lemon or Orange Frosting
Jasmine Scented Orange Pekoe Tea
Thin Lemon Slices
Cashew Nuts and Yellow Mints

Petit fours may be cut from layers of sponge cake and frosted with boiled frosting tinted with orange food coloring. If a gold and silver angel food is the choice it may be made in one of two ways: tinting half the batter in an angel cake recipe with food coloring and adding egg yolks to half the batter. In the first instance you may use your own favorite recipe. In the second, it's better to follow an especially developed one.

GOLD AND SILVER ANGEL FOOD CAKE.

[For 10 inch tube pan.]

1 1-3 cups egg whites
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups sugar, sifted twice
1 cup cake flour, sifted
4 egg yolks
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon lemon extract
1 teaspoon almond or vanilla

Beat egg whites with flat whip until frothy and add cream of tartar and salt. Continue beating until egg white will stand in points, but not until it loses glossiness. Gradually beat in 1 cup of the sifted sugar. Fold in the flour and remaining sugar, which have been sifted together three times, sifting the mixture a little at a time over the surface of the egg white and sugar meringue. Divide batter into two parts. Add to one part the egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored, the 2 tablespoons flour and the lemon extract. To the other part of the batter add the vanilla or almond flavoring. Drop batters by alternate spoonfuls into an ungreased tube pan. Cut through the batter quickly with a knife to break large air bubbles. Bake for 1 hour in a 325 degree oven. Invert the pan when the cake is baked and let the angel food hang until it is completely cold. Uncooked icing, boiled frosting, or seven minute frosting flavored with lemon or orange may be tinted with food coloring to the degree preferred.

It's a Help to Me, Says—

Clara M., Milwaukee: We've found a way to cure loose, rattling doors in our house. My husband cuts strips of rubber from old inner tubes and fastens these to the casing between the hinges. It does the trick. And to stop a door from squeaking I rub its top and bottom edges with soap.

Martin T. B., Chicago: My wife insists that she's been saved work and worry by an extension top table I made her for those extra guests who arrive for cards. I made it from plywood, larger than our regular table top, with a felt lining underneath. I held it in place with wooden cleats underneath.

T. D. of Wayne: I learned a long time ago to keep plenty of kerosene on hand. Diluted with a little water it cleans linoleum, nickel, painted furniture, and porcelain, and brightens brass. I also use it to give polish to glass when I wash windows, and in summer a little kerosene on my window screens discourages mosquitoes and flies. There's nothing better for removing finger marks from woodwork than to rub with a cloth dipped in kerosene.

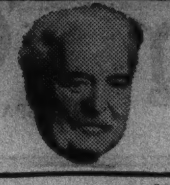
George Rector



[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

It pleased me very much to receive so many letters for more salad combinations and salad dressings. I have always contended that the salad is almost as important as the main course of a meal. It should be served as a course. One of my favorite meals starts with a goodly quantity of soup—let's say onion soup—with oodles of grated cheese sprinkled over it and the piece de resistance—a salad right out of that wooden bowl, a beverage and dessert. Now, don't you think that comes pretty near rounding out a nice meal? Of course, if you have a Rocky mountain appetite this meal wouldn't go very far.

The epicurean of the gay nineties had the right idea. He would have his own salad set-up. For example, Berry Wall, who dined frequently in Rector's, had his favorite olive oil, a special brand of vinegar, his pepper mill and a certain paprika. He accepted our dry mustard, but always demanded vintage salt. I have never yet found out what vintage salt is. Blending in these different ingredients and mixing was a ritual with him. He was in no hurry. I timed him one evening and it took him exactly forty-three minutes to prepare and eat his salad. He always dined leisurely. I guess he's right, because he is around the four score mark today.

Sometime when you are going to prepare a shell fish salad—lobster, crabmeat, or shrimp, which usually calls for mayonnaise dressing—add to the dressing one-half teaspoon of curry powder and mix well. You will be surprised what a delicious flavor it has. Now here's another combination that originated in old Delmonico's—Lorenzo dressing. It is made by adding two tablespoons of chili sauce to one-half cup of French dressing, then add one teaspoon of finely chopped pimientos, one teaspoon of finely chopped chives, and one teaspoon finely chopped parsley, and mix well.

On Glorifying Shredded Cabbage.

You really can glorify shredded cabbage when you mix it well with sour cream dressing. Be sure and get the thick oozing kind of sour cream. To three-quarters cup of sour cream add one-quarter cup of vinegar slowly, stirring all the time. Season with one-half teaspoon of salt, a very light pinch of cayenne pepper, one-half teaspoon paprika, and one teaspoon of chives or finely chopped onion, preferably chives, all to be mixed well. Shred very finely a small solid head of white cabbage. Mix it well in the dressing and it wouldn't be a bad idea to put it in the refrigerator to chill. I have tried this very same dressing for a fruit salad, but I omitted the chives and added a teaspoon of powdered sugar.

Did you ever try a hot slaw? It's good, really it is. Shred finely three cups of cabbage and then start on the dressing. Mix together two tablespoons flour, two tablespoons sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, and one-half teaspoon of dry mustard. Add to dry ingredients two egg yolks which have been beaten with one-fourth cup of vinegar and three-quarters cup of rich milk. Cook in top part of double boiler, stirring gently until it thickens. When the dressing is cooked and perfectly smooth, add, and beat in well, two tablespoons of melted butter. Now add the shredded cabbage so that it will heat in the sauce without boiling.

When you fancy a potato salad and want one that is a little different try this:

Boil one-half dozen medium sized potatoes until tender, with their jackets on. Remove the jackets and drop the potatoes in a bowl. Break up the potatoes with two forks but do not mash them. While the potatoes are still warm, pour over them one-third cup of French dressing, and let them marinate. Add one-half cup of finely sliced almonds, which have been previously blanched and skins removed. Also add one tablespoon of finely chopped onions and the same amount of finely chopped green peppers. Mix well. Now place the salad in refrigerator to chill. Just before serving add three-quarters cup of mayonnaise dressing and one tablespoon of finely chopped parsley. You will have to do some thorough mixing again and then serve this salad on a light bed of lettuce. A couple of dashes of paprika over the top will add a little color and flavor, too. The dressing which I gave you for the hot slaw would go very well in place of the mayonnaise.

Using Leftover Boiled Beef in Meat Salad.

Sometime when you are serving boiled beef or a pot roast and you find there is quite a bit left over for the next day, I want you to make a meat salad. It's delicious. Cut the meat in slices of one-quarter inch and then cut the slices in irregular pieces about the size of a half dollar. Go back to the refrigerator and see if you have any leftover, cooked vegetables. Perhaps you will find some beets, potatoes, or beans, string or limas. If so, you have the makings of a real salad.

Let us cut enough meat to make two cupfuls, which we will place in a bowl. Now cut the cooked vegetables in pieces as you have cut the meat, except, of course, the lima beans, which go in whole. One cupful of vegetables is enough. Add them to the meat and toss in one thinly sliced onion and one tablespoon of finely chopped parsley. To this combination add one-half cup of French dressing and do plenty of mixing. Serve on bed of lettuce garnished with hard cooked, sliced eggs.

I am very fond of leftovers—cold lamb, beef, chicken, or veal—especially when prepared as a hash. I am going to do a whole column soon on various ways to prepare hash and the title of it will be "Sweep Up the Kitchen."

Out in the middle west a lady told me about an inexpensive molded cheese salad, and gave me the recipe for it. I have prepared it a number of times. It's so good I wouldn't hesitate a moment to award it the first prize. Here are the ingredients—the preparation is simple:

2 tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water
½ cup hot water
2 cups cottage cheese
½ pint sweet cream [whipped]
½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup chili sauce
1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
Pinch of cayenne pepper

Soak gelatin in cold water five minutes. Add hot water and stir over low heat until melted, but do not boil. When cool add and stir in well the cheese, whipped cream, mayonnaise, chili sauce and seasonings. Grease round mould with a little oil and fill with the mixture. Place in refrigerator until thoroughly chilled. Invert the salad from the mould onto a platter and place in the center Waldorf salad or alligator pear and orange salad mixed with French dressing.

Foods such as these can be prepared hours in advance. Try this for luncheon sometime, or better, after the bridge party.

This Home-Mixed Cough Remedy is Most Effective

Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of sugar syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking! No trouble at all.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of truly wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It is far better than anything you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It lasts a long time, never spoils, and children love it.

This is positively the most effective, quick-acting cough remedy that money could buy. Instantly, you feel it penetrating the air passages. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membranes and makes breathing easy. You've never seen its equal for prompt and pleasing results.

Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, the most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Refrigerator of 1938 Result of Home Tests

There is a knack to selecting, framing, and hanging pictures. An enlightening booklet, "Selecting, Framing, and Hanging Pictures," by Claire Winslow, Tribune stylist in interior decoration, gives many tips every housewife will appreciate. Get a copy at either of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Claire Winslow.

Before a manufacturer of refrigerators brought out a new electric model it was decided to test the line in more than 100 kitchens under all sorts of conditions and in various parts of the world. The proving kitchen hostesses gave their approval in due time, but recommended four major improvements which have been incorporated in the 1938 models.

The testers of the ice boxes asked why there wasn't more space for the storage of fruits and vegetables, so as a result the manufacturer has installed a built-in humidity drawer, deep and wide, and enclosed by a solid glass top. It is intended to hold a full week's supply of vegetables and fruits, and keeps them crisp and fresh, preventing the moisture from escaping.

It functions in the same way as the cigar humidor. Proof of its effectiveness is seen in the little beads of water which appear on the bottom of the glass top.

And the glass top makes a convenient place for storing small bottles of cheese, olives, etc., that sometimes tip and spill on the usual wire trays.

Another problem called to the attention of the manufacturer of the kitchen tests was that of storage for meats. A large covered meat compartment, finished in white porcelain enamel and located immediately below the froster is the answer. This drawer will hold more than ten pounds of meat where a low temperature of 40 degrees is maintained constantly. This eliminates the growth of bacteria which cause discoloration and spoilage, and it means the meat will be preserved days longer.

The compartment is entirely enclosed and has a ventilated cover to allow the circulation of air around the meat.

The 1938 model of this special make of refrigerator has a closer cold control, too. Eight "positions" are possible: Coldest for continuous operation, four normal operating positions and three extra ones for "economy," "defrosting," and "vacations," besides the "off," switch.

The frozen storage compartment in the froster now is one-third larger and can store meats, chickens, or frozen desserts conveniently and easily. A new "multi-service" tray of this section has a five pound ice capacity.

Other improved features are special mechanical lifts that prevent the ice trays from sticking to the shelves, and mechanical gadgets which eject the cubes neatly and easily. Also adjustable height shelves will permit large sized food containers to be put in the refrigerator without crowding.

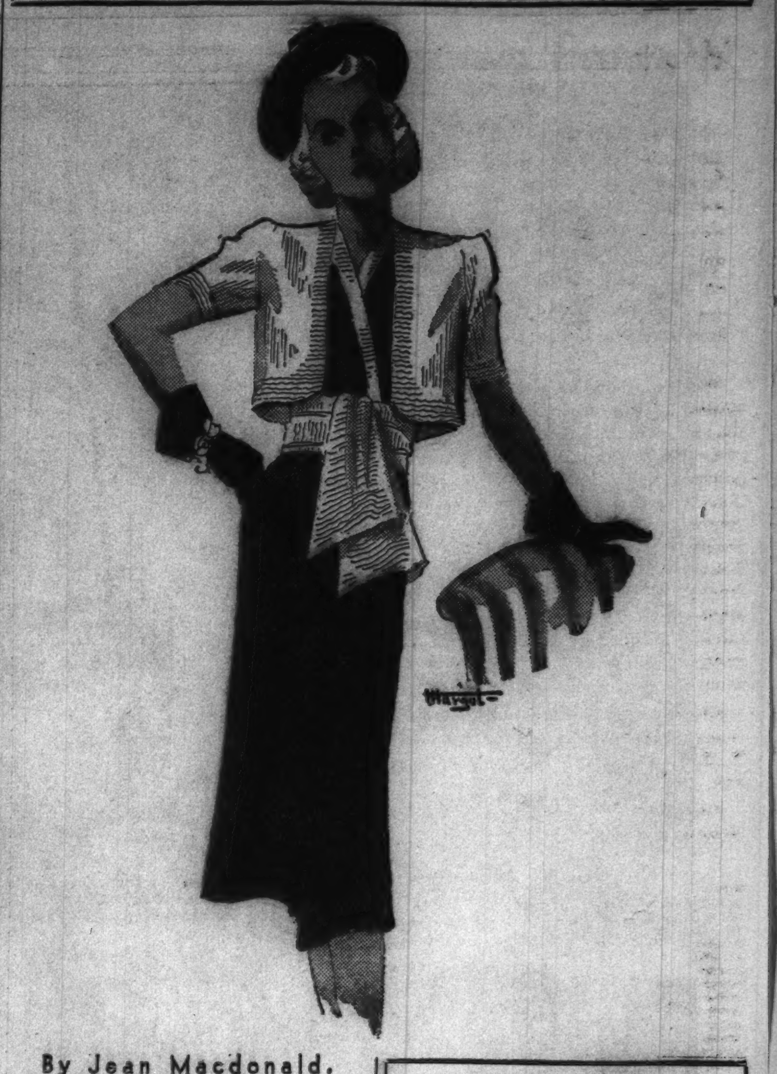
Knitter May Make Spring Bolero and Cummerbund



By Jean Macdonald.

There is no question that the big thing for spring is the bolero. If there are sashes they must match the jacket, and the favorite combination decreed for spring is that of dusty pink jackets and cummerbunds with navy or black dresses. Light blue jackets rank second in choice, followed by tans and greens. The hand knitted bolero and jacket over a one piece surplice dress, illustrated today, is an example of the spring color scheme of dusty pink and navy blue. Requiring less than 1,200 yards of material for the jacket and cummerbund, the outfit may be knitted in less than one week. The garter stitch around the bottom, sides, and sleeves serves as the only trimming. The cummerbund is done in the stockinet stitch, with an inch of single crochet around it to hold it firmly and prevent stretching. A synthetic fiber material is the popular choice for summer outfits, while the chalky surfaced materials, crêpes, and wool and rayon nubbed material are the choices for spring. These jackets also may be made of brilliant tweed over a wool dress.

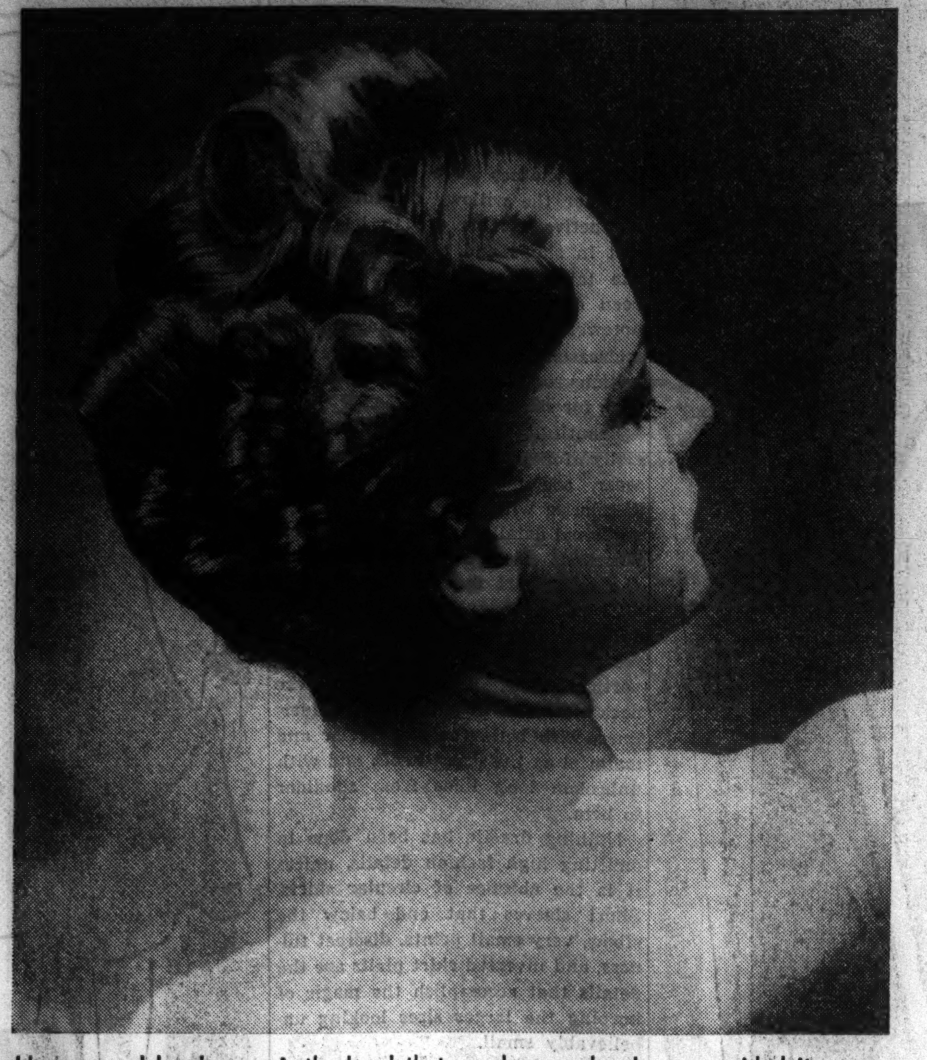
Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle



Happy—and handsome—is the head that can have curls, always provided its owner doesn't pay too high a price for those curls in depletion of natural oil! Hair that is frequently permanented needs far more care than hair that never knows heat.

Not long ago, riding on a bus with a friend of ours, we were commanded by the friend to look at the four feminine heads in the two seats in front of us. "There," said she, "is something for you to write about. You're always moaning about the problem of filling a column 365 days a year, and if heads of hair burned virtually to a crisp aren't something to write about, I don't want to hear another moan out of you!"

The four heads really were something to write about. Not that they were standouts. You can see heads like them in front of you in the theater and on buses any day in the year. The hair is long beneath a shallow crowned hat, and the owners of that hair have gone in for "end curls" like crazy. Without a thought about the cumulative ill effects of heat, they've applied the curling iron, or had inexpensive permanents, until their hair is like straw in the back.

It makes you think some one should paste a copy of Robert Burns' poem about seeing ourselves as others see us on every dressing table mirror. Don't we women ever look at the backs of our heads, except for those times when the hairdresser hands us a mirror after each shampoo?

Who's to blame for all this? Some people lay the black burden of blame right at the door of the beauty shops. Others say it's our own fault that there are such awful heads of hair framing the feminine face. Personally, we'd say it's about fifty-fifty, with perhaps a shade more of fault on our part.

The beauty shop is established to serve you. If you want a permanent more often than is good for you and, in addition, want a bargain one, it's expecting a great deal to have them act as policemen for your own good. It's true that, in the better shops, the manager will say, 'No, lady, we don't want your money. Go and get your hair reconditioned," but that kind of shop isn't as frequently encountered as the shop where they go on the theory that the customer always is right.

As a matter of fact, the customers are pretty nearly always wrong when it comes to the matter of knowing about what hair will and won't stand. The woman who wants a permanent is inclined to think the conscientious shop owner is trying to sell her something when she advises reconditioning treatments. She just steels herself against such advice and goes right ahead and gets permanented.

Permanents are wonderful. The strides made in their mechanical perfection and in the educational work among operators is impressive. But even the best of permanents takes a toll of natural oil. You can't go on forever unless you take steps to replenish this oil. The cheap permanent takes twice as much toll twice as fast. Keep the ends curled if you must, but for heaven's sake, madam, keep the hair brushed and oiled and cared for so that the permanent will be good, not evil in its effects!

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

Up on Etiquet? Try Answering These Queries

By Helen Bartlett.

Can you answer these problems? Our periodical question bee is offered today for your perusal.

"What names does one write on place cards?" is the first question, asked by a telephone inquirer recently.

The surname preceded by the title Miss, Mr. or Mrs., as the case may be, is the answer. For example, Mr. Smith, Mrs. Howard, Miss Thomas. Then, if there happen to be two men or women of the same name, it will be necessary to distinguish them by using their first names, Mr. George Smith, Mr. Ralph Smith.

Another friend of the column is puzzled about dinner clothes. She wants to know: "What is the corresponding correct attire for the gentleman when his woman companion wears a dinner dress?"

The answer is dinner clothes, sometimes called tuxedo. A dinner jacket for men and dinner dress for women are semi-formal attire.

The mailman also delivered this question: "On a social letter is the street address placed in the upper righthand corner or at its close, beneath the signature and to the left? I have seen it both ways and wondered which was correct."

It doesn't matter. On social correspondence either is correct. On business correspondence, however, it is customary to place the date and the address in the upper righthand corner.

Questions such as the following remind us that the bridal season is getting under way again. "Are men ever invited to showers?"

And the answer is "No, no, a thousand times no." Showers are strictly feminine affairs. Even the prospective bridegroom, if it is a bridal shower to which you refer, should not be invited or expected to come. The various escorts of the girls present might be invited to come in later in the evening to partake of the refreshments and see the girls home, but they should not be invited to the shower proper and be expected to bring a present for the bride.

ENGAGED TO BE MARRIED

Miss Jane Emery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Clark Emery, is engaged to be married to Bradley Eben of Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. Siegfried Eben of New York. Miss Emery attended Sarah Lawrence college and her fiance attended Georgetown, Harvard, and Northwestern university law school.

Mrs. Mark P. Mears.

This will be one of two occasions within the week when the Woman's City club will depart from its usual schedule of study sessions and committee meetings devoted to civic problems. On Thursday afternoon a Valentine card will be held in the club lounge overlooking Lake Michigan and Grant park. Mrs. Edward R. Barnard, social chairman, will be in charge, assisted by Mrs. Ira C. Humphrey, Mrs. Harry E. Martin, Mrs. O. H. McCaslin, Mrs. B. J. Rappaport, and Mrs. Cyrus R. Shipman.

On Friday afternoon the housing and local sanitation committees are combining to sponsor a civic forum at which Maj. Joel I. Connolly, sanitary engineer for the health department, and William Galligan, assistant superintendent of streets, will speak. The former will discuss "Housing Conditions in Chicago," and the latter, "Garbage and Ash Disposal."

Hats Intended for Heads Are Style Dictum

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—What this world needs is new hats. I've seen the women of London, New York, and Paris this winter trying to cope with the millinery monstrosities that passed under the banner of style, and for one who got away with being crazy above the shoulders there were thousands who simply looked groggy and ready to go down for the final count. The first spring hats that sprouted around New Year's were still in the comic tradition. It looked as if we'd go through another season staggering under witches' bonnets, skyscraper cones, and other forms of hat insanity.

Now, with the second growth of millinery fashions here in Paris, I have some hopes for female humanity. The newest hats are intended for heads. There is a perfect orgy of brimmed hat fashions, and brims flatter. Maybe you'd heard that. Also crowns have been doctored into rounded and flat shapes that do not deform. And colors have turned sweet and charming. Finally millinery trimmings are real aids to beauty, being flowers, velvet ribbons, wings, and veils for the most part. Millinery has come home from the violent wards of the extremists.

Most of the latest spring hats are made of straw, or of combinations of straw and felt. There are smooth, hand sewed straws which make dressy hats, and plenty of rough or hard straw sailors. Sailor hats, with flattish crowns and medium brims trimmed with gay ribbons, flowers, and birds, are important entries for tailored wear.

Thick headlines are in style, but they are nothing to alarm you. Charming rolled brims give an impression of thickness to any of the new shapes, or padded small toques do the same trick.

There are a great many brimmed hats which are worn off the face, or off one side of the face. They are not so hard as those halo hats which the duchess of Windsor affects, and far easier for the mature woman to get away with. Big flowers falling over the front of upturned brims help the face beneath out.

Milliners for once have bothered themselves about how hats are going to stay on your head. Flat sailors have chin straps or ties, and so have many of the other shapes. Louise Bourbon makes her sailors two piece with a bandeau around the back of the head holding the small straw sailor in place.

The impudent Cuban hat is introduced as a new style by Rose Valois. One hat is made of soft pastel blue felt and trimmed with vivid rose colored felt ribbon, which makes a bandeau slanting over the forehead and a sash around the crown. It is an example of the rolling brim, which leaves part of the face exposed.

All of the prettiest flower colors are okayed by the great French milliners for spring wear with dark or neutral colored suits. Violet is new, so are cornflower blues and rich rose and orchid pinks. String beige with flower color trimming is the smartest neutral hat color. Delicious jonquil green and yellow are combined to make some of Agnes' most flattering new hats.

Agnes would like us to wear flattering brims. Most of our faces could do with a little flattery of this sort after a winter exposed to the crude light of the avenues. She shows a hat made of a new Swiss straw braid in a soft jonquil green, with a pretty wide, gently undulating brim. The crown is one big flower made of soft green and yellow velvet ribbon, and at the back of the head it leaves a circle of hair showing.

Small feminine hats ranging from flattened Watteau shapes to dainty toques laden with flowers and veils will be arrogant in their flattery. Agnes designed a shape which is pastel blue at the back with a pink felt brim turned up in front, and a blue velvet bandeau and chin strap. A pink velvet orchid trims this hat.

Pianos Lose Most of Their Former Traits Of Ugliness

Pianos have changed so in the last few years that you'd hardly recognize some of your old friends. Uprights, for example, have been lowered in height and have been made more compact. The new "spinets" have become vastly popular.

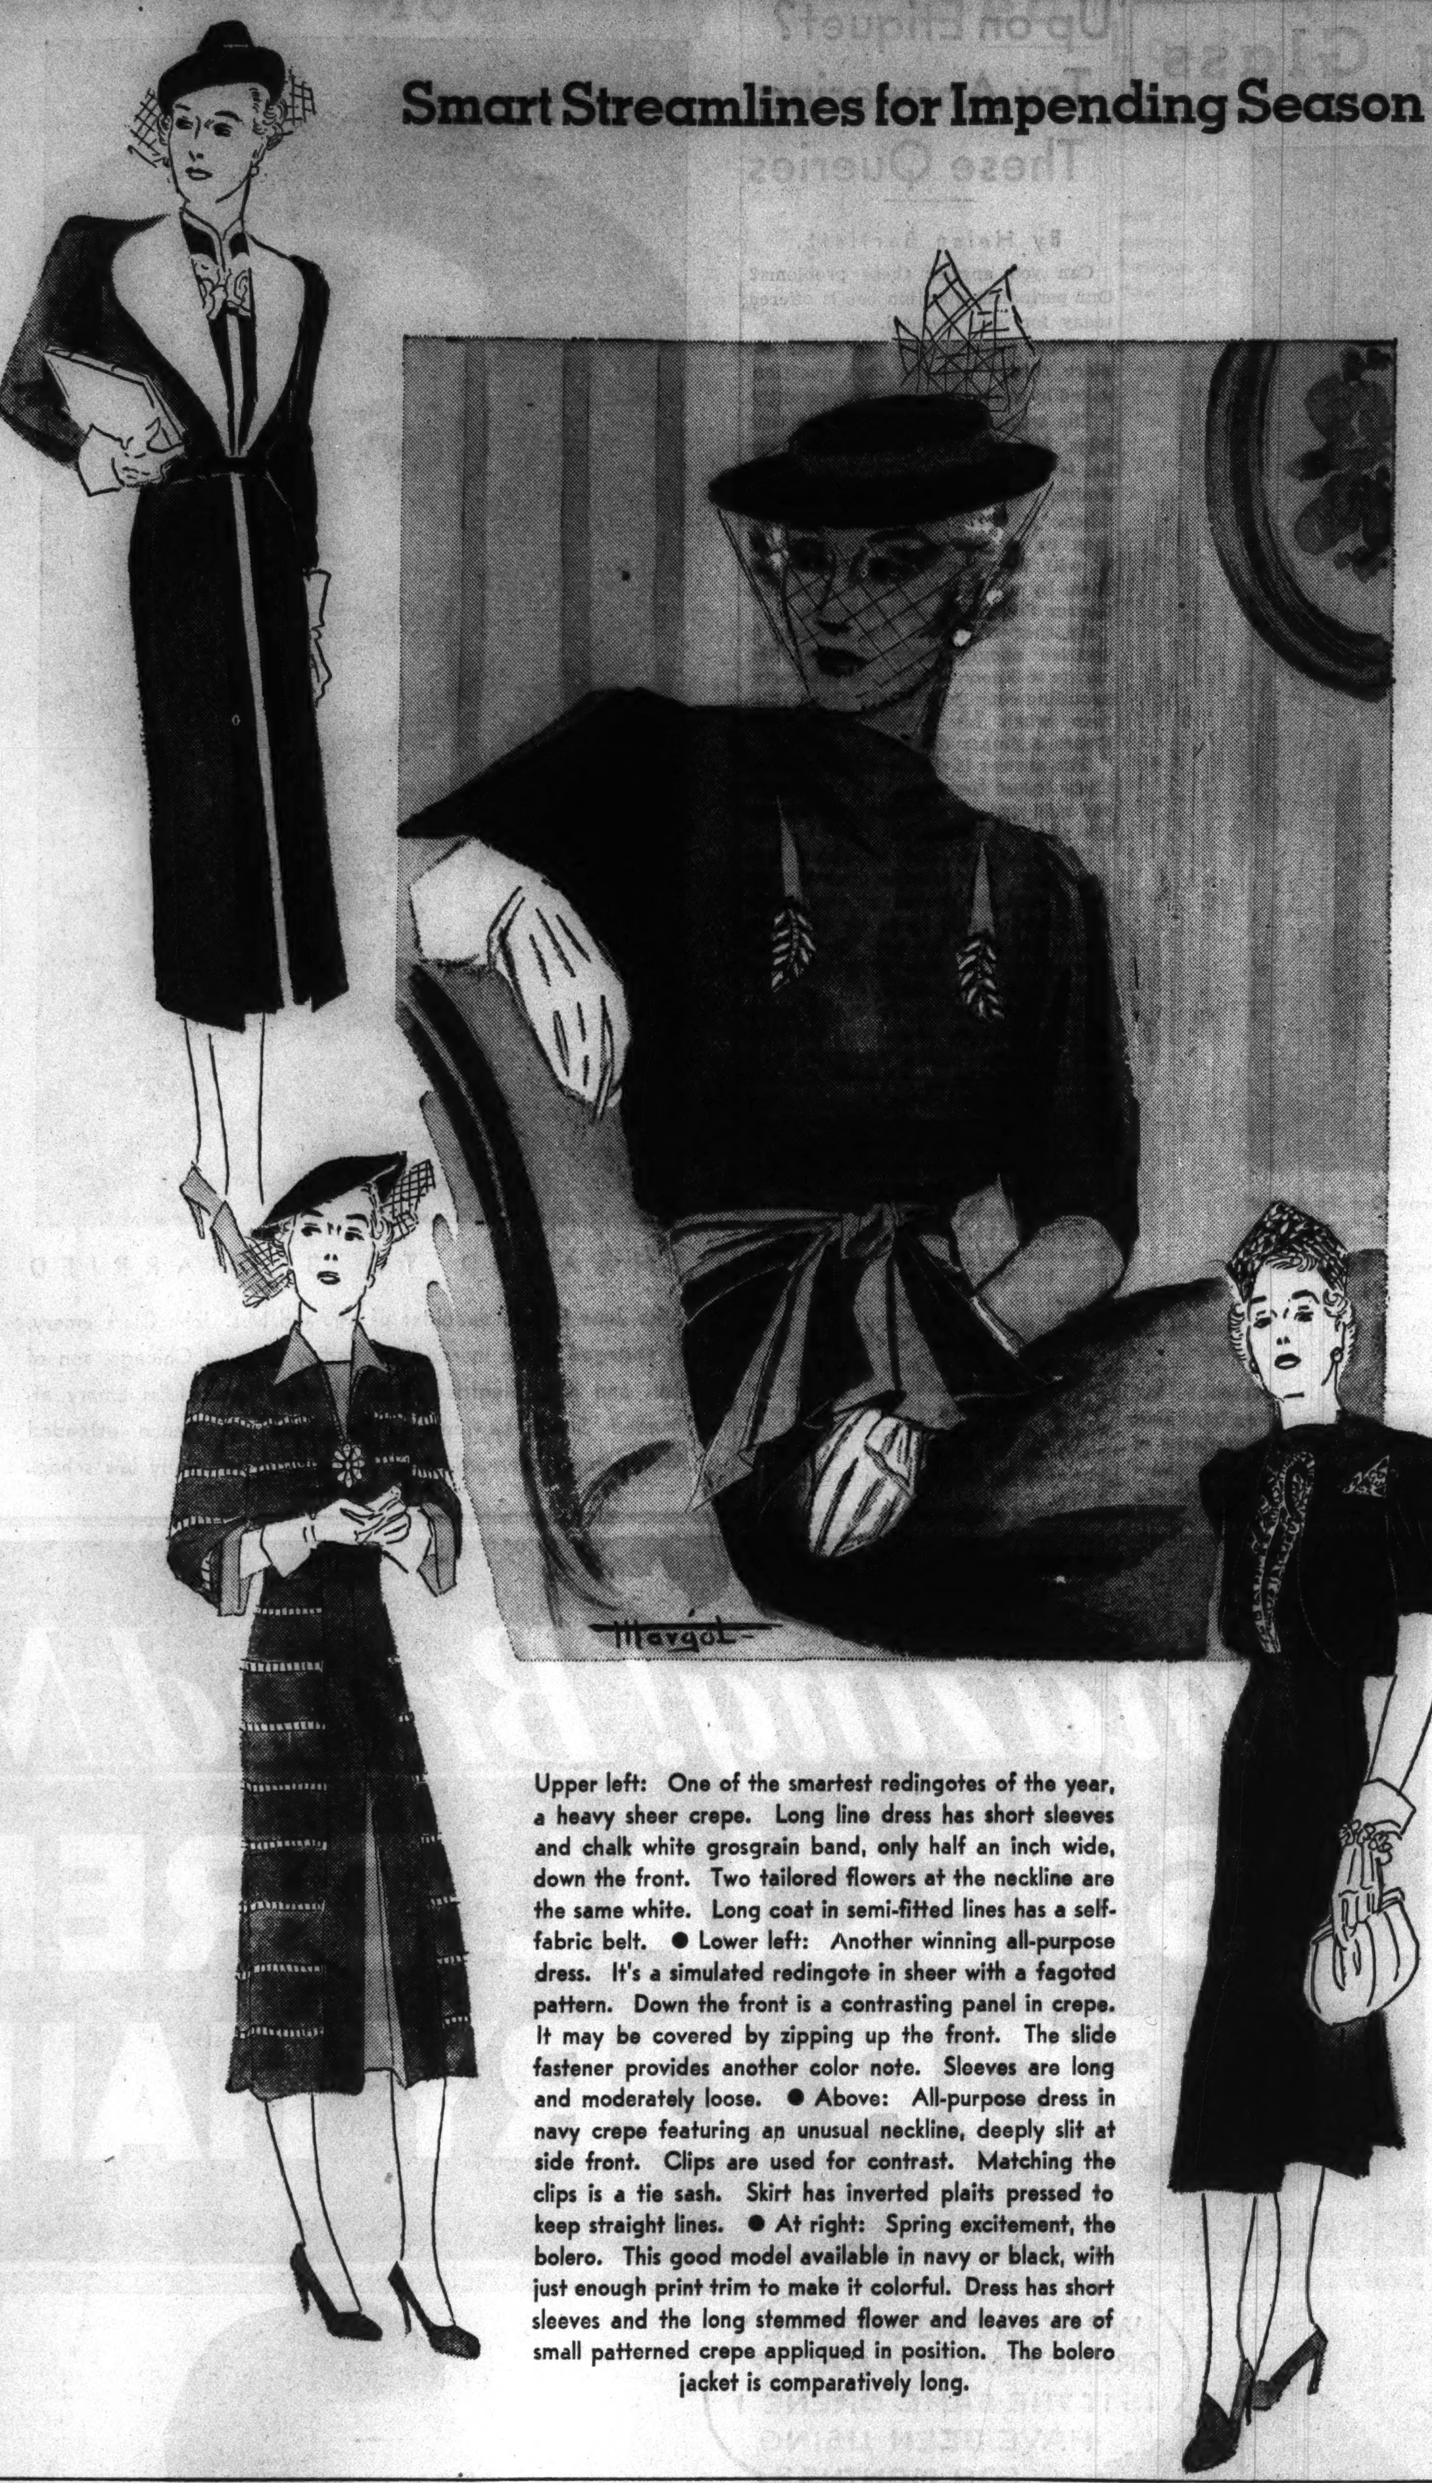
And now a distinguished designer, Everett Worthington, has revamped the case of the grand piano. He has modernized it so that instead of being simply a musical instrument it is a handsome, harmonious piece of furniture. And he has trimmed inches from it, so it occupies much less space in your home.

The legs of this new piano are not just ugly supports, as they were formerly. The are graceful, tapering, and they seem to grow out of the sides. And the lid is curved like a shell, the strings beneath being covered, so when it is raised you do not see all the "innards" of the piano as you used to.

The keyboard is not hidden by the frame, but stands out as one of the most beautiful features of this model. It is a standard keyboard, but the piano itself measures only 4 feet 7 inches long.

All the lines are flowing and rhythmic. This stunning new piano is available in ebony, ivory, walnut, mahogany, or blond maple.

Smart Streamlines for Impending Season



Upper left: One of the smartest redingotes of the year, a heavy sheer crepe. Long line dress has short sleeves and chalk white grosgrain band, only half an inch wide, down the front. Two tailored flowers at the neckline are the same white. Long coat in semi-fitted lines has a self-fabric belt. ● Lower left: Another winning all-purpose dress. It's a simulated redingote in sheer with a fagoted pattern. Down the front is a contrasting panel in crepe. It may be covered by zipping up the front. The slide fastener provides another color note. Sleeves are long and moderately loose. ● Above: All-purpose dress in navy crepe featuring an unusual neckline, deeply slit at side front. Clips are used for contrast. Matching the clips is a tie sash. Skirt has inverted plaits pressed to keep straight lines. ● At right: Spring excitement, the bolero. This good model available in navy or black, with just enough print trim to make it colorful. Dress has short sleeves and the long stemmed flower and leaves are of small patterned crepe appliqued in position. The bolero jacket is comparatively long.

THIS WEEK IN THE GARDEN

Monday, Feb. 7.

Gardening operations will become more and more active with the approach of warm spring days. Complete all planning and order all supplies of shrubs, trees, seeds, tools, and fertilizers as soon as possible. Order a few choice flowering, hardy vines, for vines always are interesting,, beautiful, and serve a useful screening purpose. Clematis peniculata is the most widely planted. It bears dainty, sweet scented flowers in September, followed by fluffy, silvery white tails on the seeds. It will grow in half sun. A few of the large flowering varieties are jackamani, violet purple; duchess of Edinburgh, white and double; Mme. Edouard, velvety-red; henryi, cream white and single.

Tuesday, Feb. 8.

When ordering shrubs do not order extra large plants. The best shrubs to use is one that is stocky, full of vigor, well developed, and with a good root system. Such a plant will quickly become established. But all plants require good soil to succeed. A few shrubs that will grow in shady places are the Japanese barberry, button bush, coral dogwood, red barked dogwood, white fringe, hydrangea hills of snow, sumac, arrowwood, snowberry, tartarian honeysuckle, privet, and inkberry. The following are suggested for dry places: Japanese barberry, jet bead, five leaf aralia, privet, sumac, coral berry, Russian olive, Siberian pea, sand cherry, and buckthorn.

Wednesday, Feb. 9.

Do not prune early flowering shrubs until after they have flowered or the flowering wood will be destroyed. Prune apple trees in moderate weather, but remove broken limbs at any time. Paint cuts that are larger than an inch in diameter. Insect pests are generally active at this time on house plants. Do not delay spraying if a single insect is found. A cigar box, with a few small holes bored in the bottom, is a good place in which to sow seeds. Use a fine, light compost, such as sand, soil, peat moss, or leaf mold.

Thursday, Feb. 10.

Many gardeners wonder why their wisteria fails to bloom. The plant requires several years to develop sufficiently for flowering. It flowers best when trained to grow over a pergola-like structure. With too rich soil an abundance of growth is made at the expense of flowers; occasionally the soil is too poor. Pruning should be given careful attention. Cut out all weak growth as soon as it forms and cut back the stronger stems. Root pruning, cutting back the roots by plunging the spade through them, encourages the flower wood to form.

Friday, Feb. 11.

The yellow stripped sansevieria is readily increased by dividing the old plants, but if increased by cutting of the leaf the variegation will be lost and the color will revert to the more common type. Try an aspidistra for the average room. It is one of the best plants to use, for it is resistant to dry conditions. Sow seed now of begonia semperflorens varieties for outdoor use.

Saturday, Feb. 12.

If a plant becomes badly infected with white fly, throw it away for the pest is hard to control. For scales, wash the leaves with a strong soap suds or a nicotine solution. If a jardiniere is used for the house plants, be sure to remove the surplus water after the plant or soil has drained. Some fine ornamental containers now are available and add much to the appearance of a plant if used intelligently.

Fashion Sleuth Discovers Chic Up to Size 50

By Rhea Seeger.

It's a mistaken idea that all good looking clothes have been designed only for the willowy creatures, that distinctive models are to be found just in shops and stores pampering the tall, thin shoppers. Much has been done for plumper figures and noteworthy results are ready for the midseason rush featured in the collections of dresses, ensembles, and suits for sizes from 16 to 50.

Beautifully designed clothes, especially for daytime and afternoon wear, are plentiful, costumes that slenderize with positive wizardy, exceptional details, smooth streamlines. Excellent materials are used, for the most part dull in texture, and all kinds of navy blues, blacks, and browns. Long lines are achieved in many ways: with narrow bands in vertical lines, flattering deep vee necklines, smooth unbroken shoulderlines, with belts the same color and material as the dress itself, and with unbroken long lines from shoulder to hem.

Nothing drastic has been done in omitting high fashion details, unless it is the absence of circular skirts. Short sleeves that end below the elbow, very small prints, discreet fulness, and inverted skirt plaits are the details that accomplish the magic of keeping the larger sizes looking unbelievably small.

Brand new sheers have been unpacked, together with some stunning southern wear models, outfits that can be worn the year round, all high fashion finds, surprisingly slender and easy to wear. Two piece bolero costumes, redingotes, print and plain combines, and the daytime uniform dress that can be dressed up or down with accessories comprise this newly arrived showing. One piece dresses, fashioned with unusual necklines, below-the-elbow length sleeves, and clever skirts with hidden plaits are abundant. They can be worn from dawn till dark with fur coats and later in spring without a coat.

These are the typical American uniforms for a busy woman, the simply cut and made dresses that allow for all the action of a busy day and yet boast details that can make them dress parade with clips, costume jewelry, a change to brightly colored gloves and matching handbag, or similar accent trickery.

Redingotes are particularly effective in sheers in large sizes. They always do the best slenderizing and can be worn under fur coats now, and as complete street costumes later in the season. Redingotes in sheers, in thin wool, or heavier fabrics provide a wide assortment from which to choose the "just right" model for your own wardrobe.

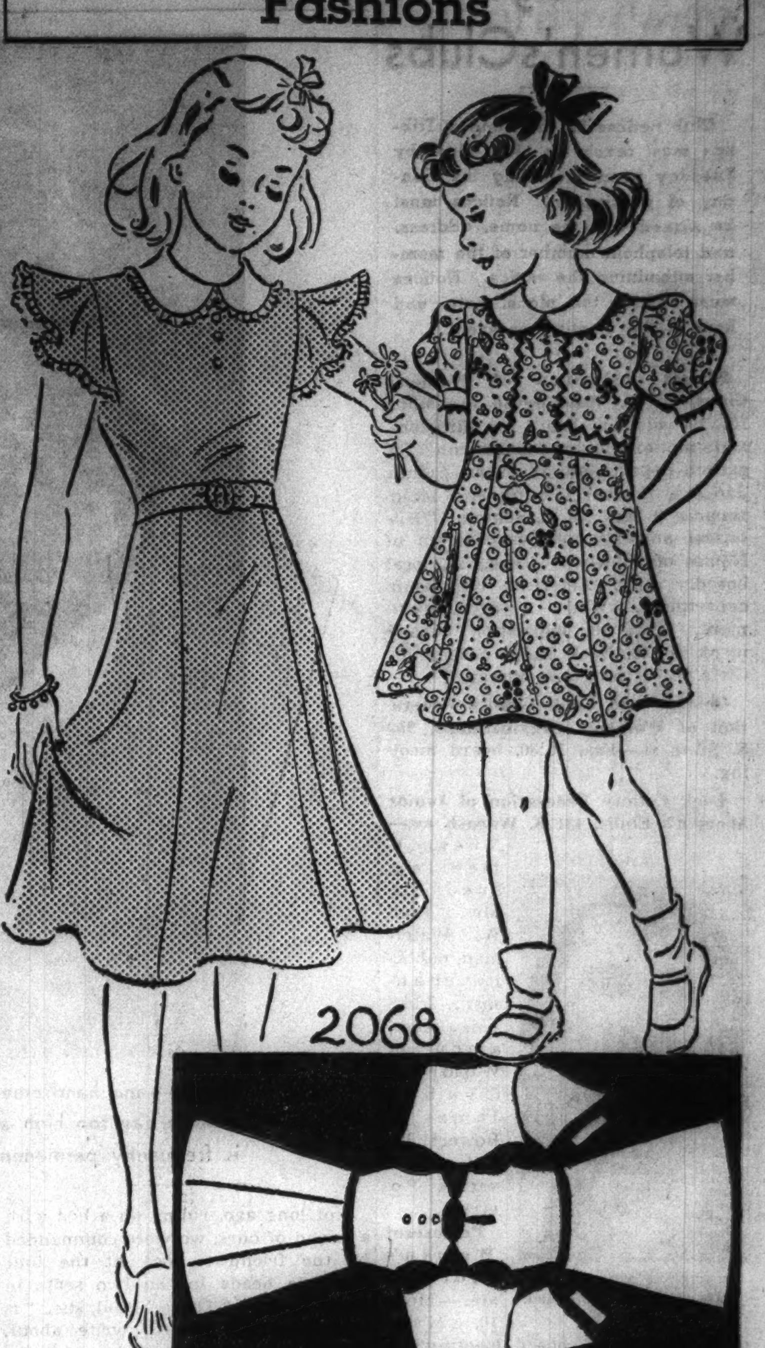
If yours is a desire for prints that must be satisfied, you'll like the plain and print combines of dress and long coat, or the two piece bolero outfits, the top of the dress made of precisely printed silks contrasting the pencil straight skirt and the simple bolero top. There are printed silk dresses designed for the more sophisticated figure, feature designs or prints that are bright and small, prints that do not spread, the kind with a solid dark color with the prints widely spaced. White dots, especially in small discs wide apart, are particularly good finds in the print crop.

From a large and unusual collection of clothes for the larger woman, in a shop where the entire showing is devoted to wardrobes for the shopper who demands comfort, slenderness and high fashion in any large size, we sketched four of the newest models. They're all daytime or afternoon models, suitable for immediate wear and to be worn later during the summer with bright accessories. They come in black, blue, and some in other colors, with the sizes 16 to 50.

Clotilde Children's Fashions



If you have a daughter, niece or granddaughter who is 4 to 10 years old, this pattern will interest you. Mothers can combine thrift and chic by using this pattern, which offers a dainty dress with Peter Pan collar, "butterfly" sleeves, and a flared skirt.

The sketch at the left suggests a smart version for the older girl. The lingerie collar is edged with ruffling or lace, the same trimming which is used on the sleeves. The original is made of cocoa brown chambray, while the collar is of piqué. The illustration at the right gives an idea of what will be smart for the 4 year old. It has puffed sleeves trimmed with bands of lingerie fabric to match the collar, and the cuffs, collar, and bodice all are trimmed with rickrack braid, economical, easy to apply, and always decorative.

Style No. 2068 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 39 inch material, with three-eighths yard of 35 inch contrasting and three yards of rickrack braid for the puffed sleeved frock.

NO OTHER TYPE OF LAXATIVE CAN DO EXACTLY WHAT FEEN-A-MINT DOES

LOOK at that healthy, happy grin! You'd never guess that just a little while ago he, too, was one of those dull, logy, irritable, unhappy victims of constipation. Then he turned to FEEN-A-MINT, the delicious chewing gum laxative—and what a difference it made! And no wonder—for FEEN-A-MINT not only removes waste, but guards against upsetting digestion too—in these 3 important ways:

1. NO STOMACH UPSET—With FEEN-A-MINT you don't swallow a heavy, bulky dose; there's nothing to burden digestion.
2. CHEWING AIDS DIGESTION — The chewing stimulates the flow of the same natural alkaline fluids that help food digest.
3. ACTS WHERE IT SHOULD—FEEN-A-MINT's tasteless laxative ingredient does not affect stomach action. It passes to the intestine and works where it should.

You'll enjoy taking FEEN-A-MINT — and there's no griping, nausea, or weakening after-effect. Wonderful for the whole family—ideal for children. Get a package of FEEN-A-MINT today at your druggists.

Young People Severe Critics of Own Group

By Doris Blake.

Today we address you young readers because we have been hearing things from your contemporaries that are worth passing on, and in which you may find a cue to making yourself even more popular.

One thing that we have learned that pleases us enormously is the way you young people, when left to your better judgment, can iron out your problems with your own age doing the censoring.

You know how we older folk are apt to shrug shoulders and raise eyebrows when we observe certain behavior and stupidly embrace the whole body of young people when making accusations. You have shown us now that you can work out your own fine programs of conduct and that, when a style in good behavior is set by the top members of your crowd, you are eager to follow the pattern.

About drinking [the old eyebrow-raiser] you have done something splendid. On your very own you decided that liquor itself, and the conduct common to it, was not getting you anywhere in the long popularity run. You saw how cheap girls and boys were considered who made spectacles of themselves under its influence. And so, the style leaders among you set a new standard. We are not just reporting this on hearsay. We have gone about investigating the truth of the statement that you smart young women have adopted the motto that it is smart not to drink. We have done considerable inquiring in drinking spots. And, while proprietors of these places will admit that the house loses money on the motto among you that it is smart not to drink, every man of them [fathers themselves] loves to see you as you now appear at your loveliest and best.

So, if you don't mind our pointing a moral at this stage, we would merely call attention to the fact that the girl who overdrinks and makes an exhibition of herself just isn't "in the know" on what is the smart thing to do. And believe that the rule does not apply only to the girls. The young man who does not know when to stop gets as rigid censorship from the young group.

We were talking with a young actor, Charles Walters, who gets around to the smart places where young folk gather. He verifies this anti-drinking trend and thinks that the current popular dances, in which partners are not held in the old close embraces on crowded, stamp-sized dance floors, have a wholesome influence. He refers to the "Big Apple," and so on. Formerly a couple sat together at a crowded table, drank, got up and danced, came back, sat down and drank again. This new group type of dancing gets rid of energy, providing release for gay young spirits.

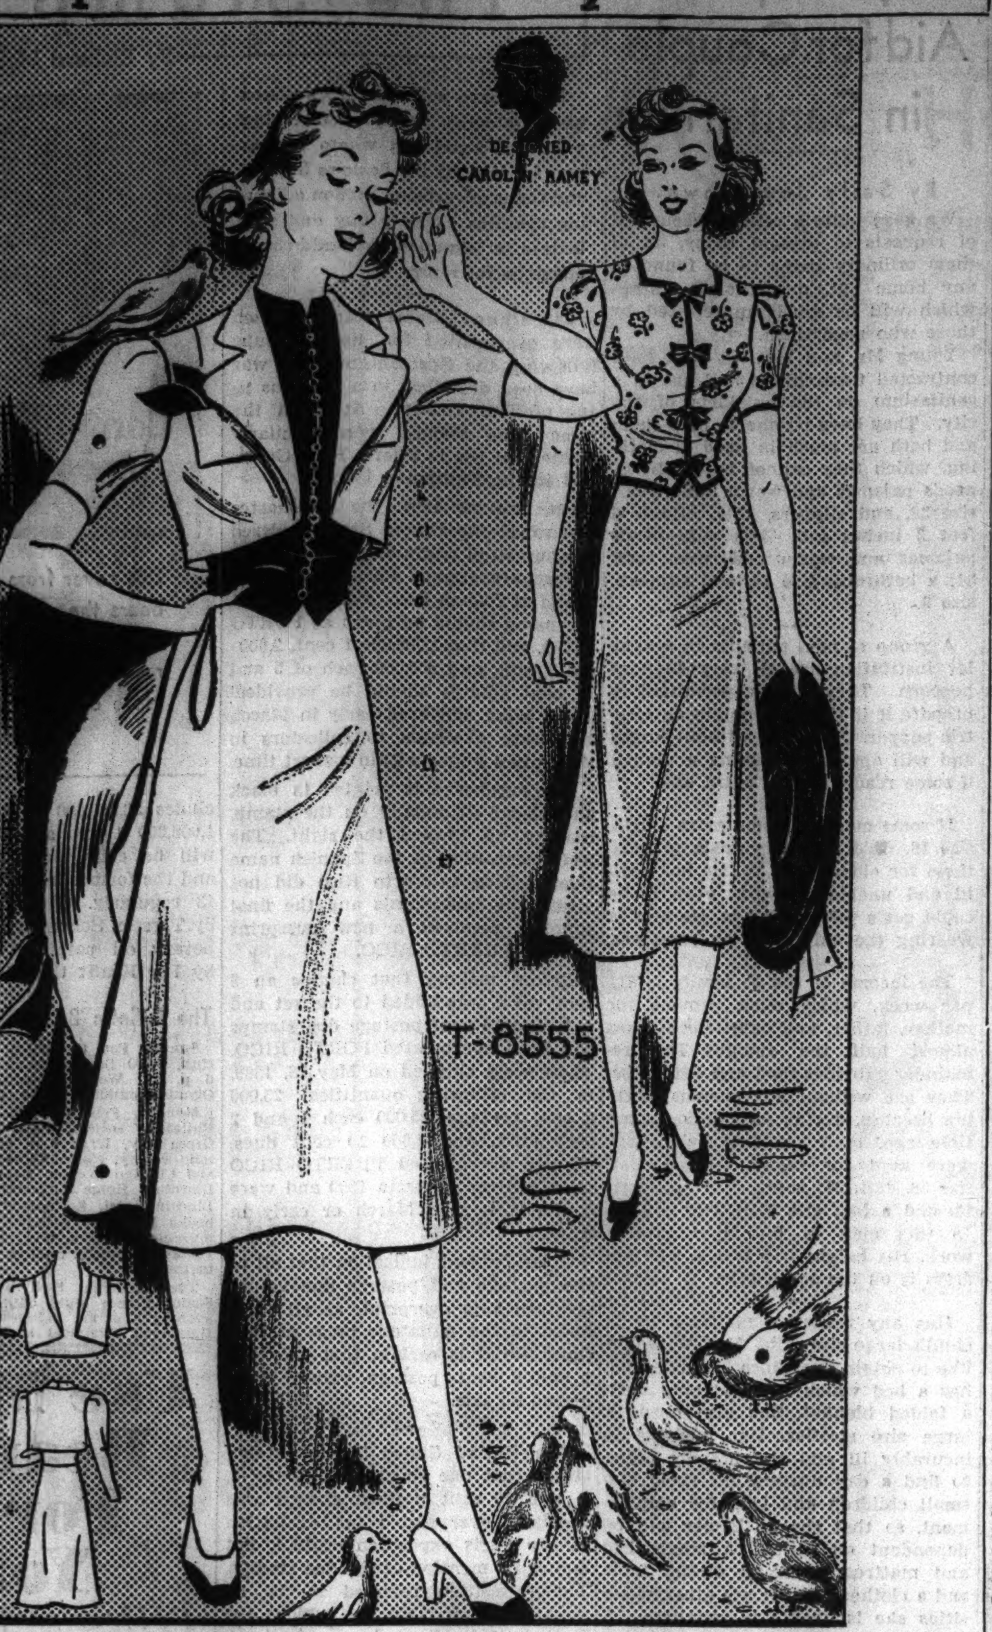
Another feature of improvement which your age has popularized is the dismissal of profanity from feminine lips. Now, if you must swear, your severest critics, meaning your contemporaries, say you swear because you haven't the vocabulary for better words.

Another thing our young informer lets us pass on for your benefit is that the girl shouldn't be so perfectly bland about everything. When she is asked where she would like to go, what she would like to do, she should have some ideas. If the girl says, "O, anywhere you say," that isn't flattery as some may think. It suggests disinterest and takes the kick out of the evening.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed



When spring finally arrives you will thank me and your lucky stars if you have this bolero dress at hand. It's the sort of frock that will make any co-ed or business girl take a new lease on life. This wearable costume consists of the brief jacket, which has a more than ordinary amount of jauntiness, a basque waist, and a flared skirt.

I think my own costume is particularly smart, so with pardonable pride I shall describe it to you. The bolero and skirt are of navy blue sheer woolen. The "weskit" is of bright jonquil yellow in silk jersey. From one of the two large pockets on the jacket flutters a kerchief matching the blouse.

I made an extra blouse for this ensemble, which is sketched on the figure at the right. It is created in white organdy with brilliant embroidery.

This is an extremely easy pattern to use, in spite of the impeccable tailoring of the ensemble. All types of silks, woolens, and cottons will make up beautifully, and the gayer the color combinations you achieve, the better for your fashion stock.

Style No. T-8555 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 years.

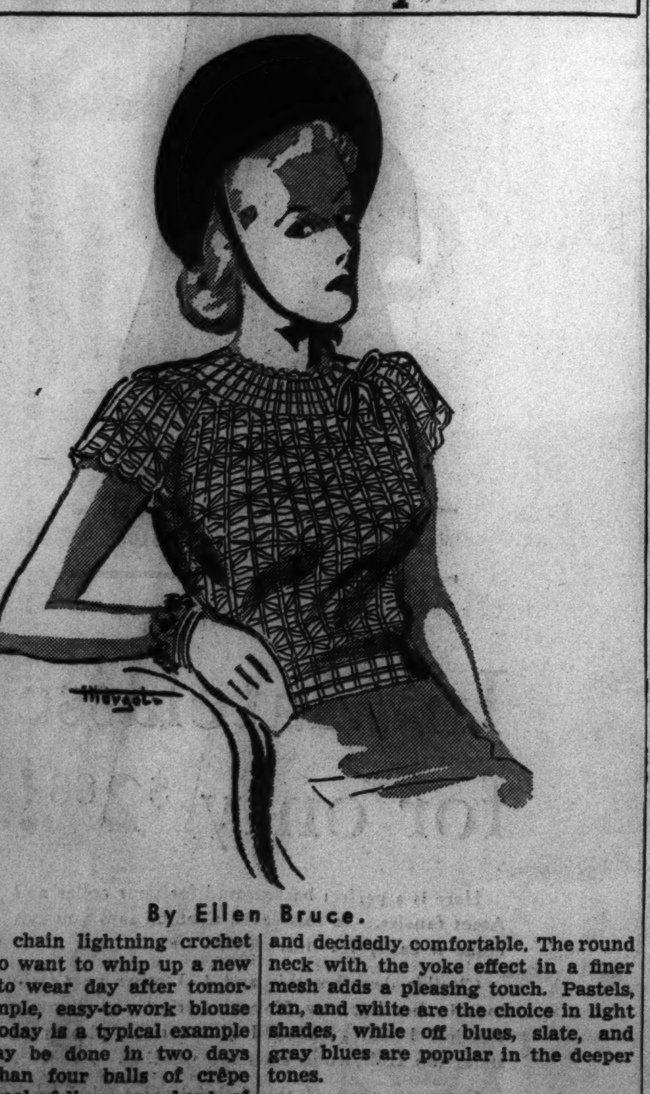
Dainty Crochet Blouse May Be Made in a Day or Two



By Ellen Bruce.

For those chain lightning crochet workers who want to whip up a new little trick to wear day after tomorrow the simple, easy-to-work blouse illustrated today is a typical example of what may be done in two days with less than four balls of crêpe yarn, one spool of linen or a hank of crochet cotton. This blouse is an ideal one for summer and one which may be worn under a suit at this season of the year. The whole garment is done in a pretty openwork mesh on a No. 2 crochet hook. This, in itself, shows how much speed may be gained in making the blouse. The small cap sleeves always are favorites and decidedly comfortable. The round neck with the yoke effect in a finer mesh adds a pleasing touch. Pastels, tan, and white are the choice in light shades, while off blues, slate, and gray blues are popular in the deeper tones.

If you wish instructions for crocheting the openwork wesh blouse with small cap sleeve illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

It is interesting to observe that hands are the center of attention among women at the present time. The topic is successor to diet, silhouette, hair coloring and posture in feminine conversation.

We have gathered some interesting data on hands from Helen Menken, well known actress and possessor of what at least one admirer termed the "most beautifully used hands on the stage."

This is the aspect that is being discussed more and more: How one uses her hands. It really doesn't matter what shape the hands are, whether square or round, or long and artistic, although the latter always will occupy first place in beauty standards. But our point is that you can make your hands lovely by the manner in which you use them. This, in effect, is Helen Menken's opinion.

Miss Menken does use her hands with superb artistry, the sort of artistry that knows no art or seemingly studied effect. In repose and in action they're expressive. As Tashimara, a well known dancer, said of a rôle performed by Miss Menken on the stage: "It was amazing, the manner in which she played that entire act with her hands, seemingly not playing with them at all!"

Miss Menken tells of her father's counsel from her early girlhood: "When you are given a voice with which to speak, why use your hands unless they have something definite to say?" In other words, don't let your hands out-talk your voice. Some women do that, you know. They over-talk with the hands in some instances, with gestures and gracelessness comparable to loud, strident voices. Or, they talk with the hands in tight-fisted, tight-wristed, effect comparable to that of the high strung or nerve ridden voice. Every ugly hand gesture is attributable to stiff wrists, fingers, minds, and to taut nerves.

Miss Menken petitions parents of lefthanded children to become familiar with the new and wise method of letting the youngster use the left hand instead of trying to force the use of the right under constant nagging or punishment.

Hand grace and charm may be self-taught assets, Miss Menken assures us. A great teaching aid is studying other women's hands, those that are used beautifully and others that are not used well, both on the stage and off. The thing is thinking about hands in terms of assets.

Hands should be used as lightly as possible, we're told by our authority.

One does not have to grasp a handbag tightly either to hold it or open it.

Small objects can be picked up with the fingertips. The whole fist is not needed.

You can practice passing a book to some one or simply setting it down on the table when holding it lightly. So with your cup of tea [a lovely gesture when nicely handled.] Times without number women have been urged to avoid the finger fidgets with beads, hankie or purse clasp.

One needn't be rule bound, thinks the well known actress, because that would only succeed in making one more self-conscious.

Simply think of the hands as potentially great beauty assets and, as assets, governed more by ease and grace of gesture than by their actual construction.

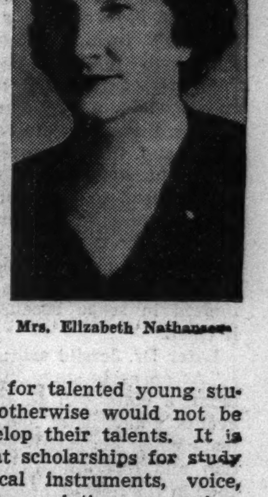
Mrs. Howard R. Peterson, vice president of the Chicago association of Alpha Delta Pi, is chairman of the party. This is one of several hundred benefits for the student loan fund to be given this month by the sorority's 55 active chapters and 125 alumnæ associations in America and Canada. The fund was established in 1915 as a memorial to Abigail Davis, an outstanding member of the sorority, who was a graduate of the University of Chicago.



Mrs. Elizabeth Nathanson.

Another scholarship benefit is a combined Valentine dance and Mardi Gras party to be held by the All Arts association next Saturday evening in the grand ballroom of the Drake hotel. Mrs. Elizabeth Nathanson, herself a sculptress, is chairman of the event.

The association recently was formed to provide scholarships for talented young students who otherwise would not be able to develop their talents. It is intended that scholarships for study of all musical instruments, voice, dancing, acting, painting, composing, and conducting, will be awarded through competitive examinations. Florence R. Hirsch is president of the foundation, and Benjamin Wering, chairman of the board.

Child's Fears Often Marked in His Behavior

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

Fear. What a factor it is in life!

People who have much to do with children and know a great deal about them often are puzzled by the fears they evince. These observers of children notice the number of their fears and the degree of them, and are often baffled as to the cause for them.

And the reason why they are baffled is because they can't help thinking that each fear must have a definite origin and that we grownups can control the arousing of fears in children. The more one studies the fears of children the more one realizes that this is true to only a limited degree. Fear in children is often a complex thing, and as often shows itself by behavior that does not look to the eye like fear.

I step aside today and let Dr. Arthur T. Jersild talk about fear. He is professor of psychology at Columbia university and the author of the book on children's wishes, dreams, and fears. He and his colleagues have made an extensive and intensive study of children's fears at the Child Development institute at Teachers' college and he gave an address on the subject at Fordham's Psychological forum. Since the address was too long to reproduce here in full I shall take out what I think would be most helpful to you.

Says Dr. Jersild:

"First let us look at the fears of children during early infancy and through the ensuing years. During the first year of life, we note that children's fears are mainly in response to tangible happenings in their immediate environment. Loud noises, sudden happenings, strange persons, things and places, unexpected lights and flashes, and sudden displacement or loss of support frequently lead to signs of fright. The world of the infant is a narrow world. His imagination does not borrow trouble from regions which his senses cannot penetrate. His fears are limited in scope because his world is small."

Later Dr. Jersild said:

"At an early stage in his development, a child will be impervious to events which later may arouse his fears when his capacities for perception and discrimination have developed in the normal process of growth. One fear seldom observed during the first few weeks of life is fear of strange or unfamiliar persons.

"By about the age of five or six months, however, most babies are capable of a good deal of discrimination in this respect. So it is that fear of strange persons occurs at about this age for the first time in the case of many children.

"Although the reasons for the development of one fear rather than another, and the conditions underlying the fact that one child remains afraid while another does not, often are quite obscure, there is one factor which plays an important rôle. This factor is the child's general security, his confidence in those about him, his freedom from tension and strain.

"If a child, for example, is ill at ease regarding his status in the home, feels rejected by his parents, feels that they discriminate against him in favor of other children in the family, is ignored or blamed while others are praised and applauded, there may be an increase in his susceptibility to fear. A child may suffer from uneasiness of this sort without being able to put it into words. Under such conditions, the particular forms a child's fears or nightmares may take are less significant than the insecurity that underlies them. The same factor may operate throughout life. The person who feels unsure of himself, of his abilities, his reputation and prestige will conjure up worries and fears of all kinds. Often the particular form the worry takes is quite incidental to the conditions underlying the disposition to worry at all."

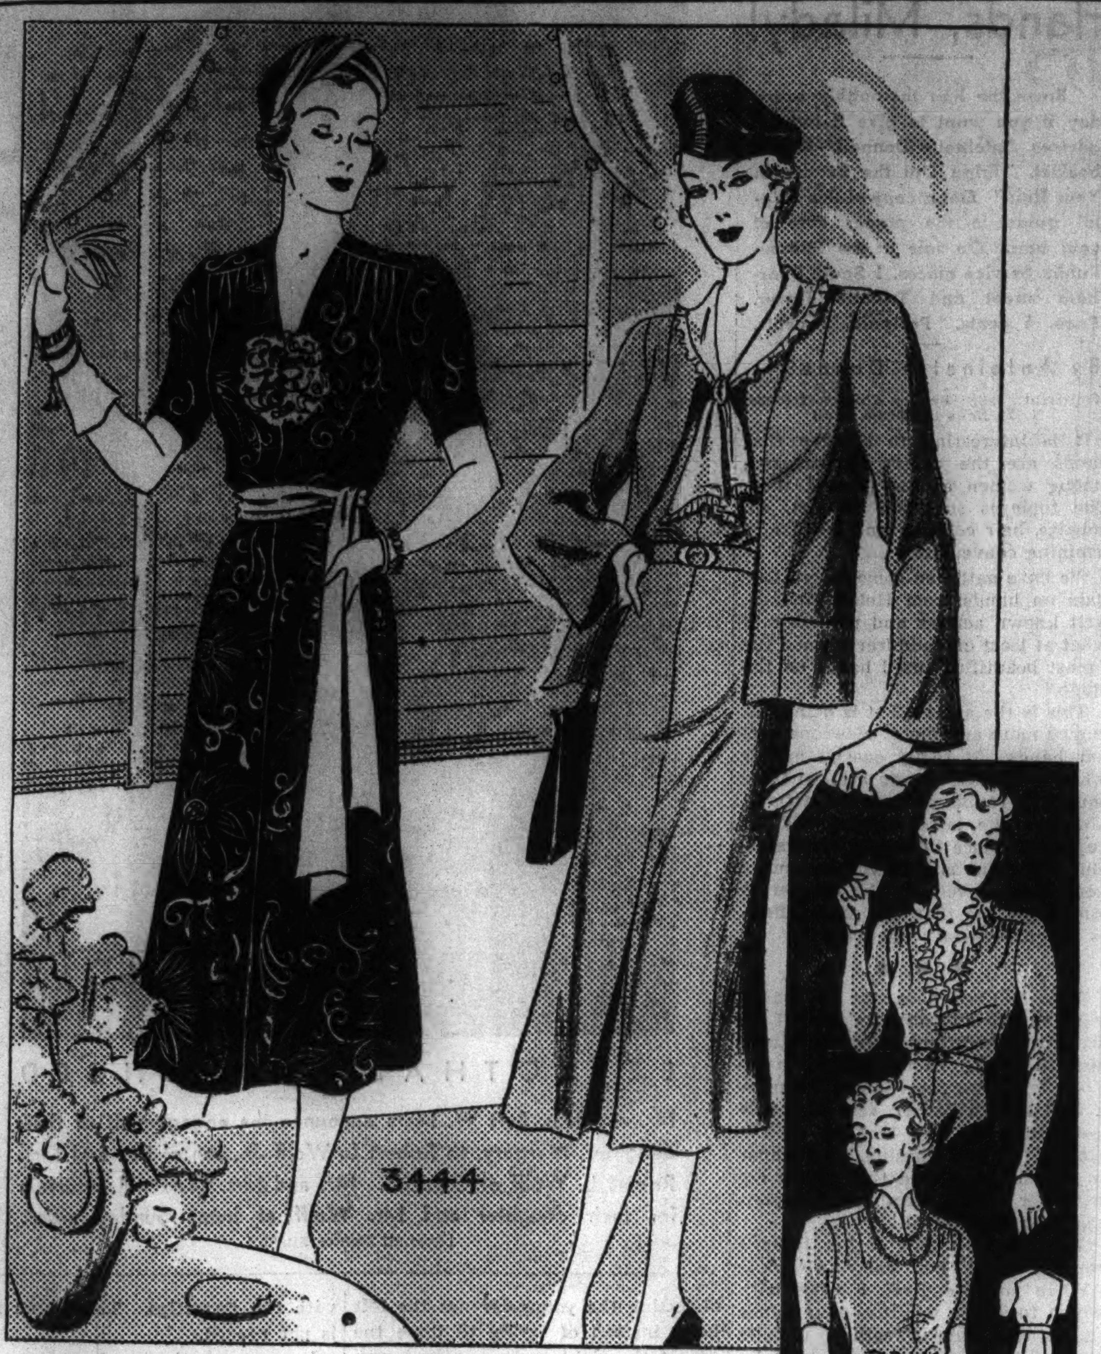
The bidding [North-South vulnerable]:

South	West	North	East
2 spades	Pass	2 no trump	3 hearts
3 spades	Pass	4 diamonds	Pass
6 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

North should not have made his too-encouraging four diamond bid, and South should not have leaped to a slam in spades. But, since the final contract actually is six spades, how should declarer play against the opening lead of the heart ten?

ANSWER: Win opening lead and cash ace and king of spades. The outstanding spades fortunately dropping, declarer then should cash diamond ace, after which he should overtake diamond jack, and lead and pass the diamond ten, discarding losing heart. The two remaining diamonds will become established; dummy is entered with the spade nine and declarer's losing clubs can be discarded.

Patterns by Clotilde



By Clotilde.

This one pattern offers dignity for the woman who wears any size from 36 to 50, and it possesses plenty of chic, too. This smartness may be packaged in a one-piece dress or in a jacket frock.

The original of the jacket dress was fashioned of rayon alpaca, sturdy and practical for all of a busy woman's daytime activities. The lingerie jabot collar was of shell pink as contrast for the navy blue chosen for the ensemble.

Our designer created an original, too, of the one-piece version. It is stunning in a black background print featuring green and red motifs. The nosegay at the simple V-neckline is made of shredded fabric, the same material used for the soft sash. Since short sleeves are ace high for spring, this frock has them. It is a mistaken conception that women with larger figures must wear only long sleeves.

May we suggest that you select gloves to match the corsage and belt you make for the frock? It's a grand and colorful theme for the new season.

Style No. 3444 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 39 inch contrasting and 2¼ yards of 39 inch fabric for the jacket.

Contract According to Culbertson

He-Man Players Drive Companion Back to Feminine Bridge

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1938: By Ely Culbertson.]

My German correspondent, Dr. Biermann [whose dispatches have graced this column several times] writes me in highly disgruntled mood:

"How happy I was. Fed up to the teeth with women-bridge, I had fled to a real manly play. There were my companions, all trustful bachelors, Rudi and Frank and the honorable Heim. The first bidding, North-South reached a four spades contract. This was the dealing:

"The king of hearts was led [Frank had bid hearts] and Frank gave the deuce. A heart followed and so I fulfilled, ruffing the second heart lead and discarding, after the third round of diamonds, dummy's club loser on the high diamond.

"'Why did you not shift to clubs?' sniveled Frank. 'Poor player you are! The two of hearts was a shift-demand, was not it?'

"'Bridge idiot!' murmured Rudi, evidently impressed. How I brightened; this was not that made-up speech, this honeylike whispering of women. I was playing with vigorous men. This was the next bidding:

"Frank's ace of hearts won the first trick. Dummy had ducked and I dropped, of course, the king. Frank, supposing that Rudi would ruff a second heart lead, followed with heart. I discarded my diamond loser on dummy's jack of hearts and led the king of diamonds. Frank covered and I ruffed. With the ace of spades I came to dummy and ruffed another low diamond. After having forced out West's high trumps I could discard, without taking the club finesse, the club losers on the high diamonds.

"'You awful bridge ox!' shouted Rudi. 'You lead hearts, hearts, hearts! You play like a grandmother!' Now Frank got angry. 'What is the matter with the grandmother?' he roared.

"We are here nowadays a little sensitive about grandmothers and so I did not wonder when both partners rose slowly. 'Go between,' whispered the honorable Heim. So I did, and was just in time to get a blow on my right cheek and a little cactus pot on my left ankle. Then the opponents bowed stiffly and went away. 'Nothing of importance,' remarked my host mildly, uncorking another bottle of Bavarian beer. 'Tomorrow you will enjoy a smooth bridge.' 'Maybe,' I said with dignity. 'But I have decided to return to my female bridge. Till now, at least, they don't say it by flowerpots!'

"DR. BIERMANN,
"Furth, Germany."

I receive so many letters such as the following that I publish it, with my answer, in the hope of casting light on a point that seems obscure to thousands of players:

"Will you please clear up a disputed point in the rules of contract bridge? The play was as follows: The current trick was won in the dummy. The declarer then laid down the four of hearts from the closed hand. The defenders instructed him to lead a heart from the dummy, which he did. But he picked up the four of hearts he had led from his own hand and played a higher one. I claim the low heart from his own hand was a played card and could not be picked up. Please say which is right. "R. I., Milwaukee, Wis."

The declarer was right! Having played from the wrong hand, and having been "called" by the defenders, declarer was privileged, under the laws, to pick up the card he had led and put it back into his own hand, before leading from the correct hand. When it became his turn to play, he could play any card he chose—not necessarily the one he had previously put upon the table.

Humorous bridge stories have become rather rare lately, at least in the neck of the woods from which I write. If any of my readers can contribute one or more, I shall be duly grateful and shall publish it or them in my column, either anonymously or with due credit, according to the instructions of the donor.

When my Gold Book was first published about two years ago, it carried an offer of $5 for each hand containing a thirteen card suit or the exact opposite, a hand with only one five spot and all lower cards, reported to me. I was promptly swamped with reports, all duly authenticated, of such holdings, and admit that I paid out a pretty penny before I could close the floodgates. I cannot offer like compensation for humorous stories, but trust that this will not diminish the response. It would be a pity to deprive bridge players from Timbuktu to Toledo of a chuckle just for the sake of filthy lucre!

So send them along—husband-and-wife stories, duplicate-director-and-old-lady stories, in short, any stories containing a laugh that started at the bridge table.

New Penny Coins Used as Jewelry in England

Because Great Britain's new 12-sided three penny "bits" still are regarded as a novelty, women of Islington are having them made into brooches, pendants, and earrings.

Sally Requests Aid for Couple in Sanitarium

By Sally Joy Brown.

We have quite a miscellaneous list of requests to present today, all of them ordinary items to be found in any home but, nevertheless, things which will be much appreciated by those who need them.

Young Mr. and Mrs. O. both have contracted tuberculosis and are in a sanitarium on the outskirts of the city. They have no one to help them and both are much in need of clothing, which they cannot buy. Mr. O. needs pajamas and warm underwear, size 38, and slippers, 10½. He is 6 feet 3 inches tall. His wife needs pajamas and warm underwear, size 34; a bathrobe, size 16, and slippers, size 6.

A group of men patients in a similar institution are all very fond of popcorn. They will be permitted to prepare it if they can obtain an electric popper. They are without funds, and will appreciate having a utensil if some reader has an extra one.

If some man has some extra shirts, size 16, we'd like very much to have them for elderly Mr. W. He has been ill and unable to work, even if he could get a job at his age. He now is wearing the only shirt he possesses.

The income of the F. family is $11 per week, which must provide for mother, father, and baby. Rent takes almost half the amount. The remainder provides food and little else. They are without any surplus clothing because, during an eviction some time ago, their personal belongings were kept for rent. An overcoat, size 36, suit, 35; shoes, size 7; shirts, 14, and a hat, size 7, will be a help to this man in finding profitable work. His height is 5 feet 6. The address is on the south side.

Has any reader a mattress for a child's large size crib? Mrs. W. would like to obtain one, since her daughter has a bed which is fitted only with a folded blanket. She also needs a large size stroller. Her husband is incurably ill and she bravely plans to find a day nursery for their two small children and look for employment, so that she no longer will be dependent on relief. A single bed and mattress, a small dining table and a clothes hamper are other necessities she is unable to purchase. A friend of the famliy who owns a truck will be glad to call for these items should any reader have them to spare.

Mrs. M. B. is suffering from tuberculosis and, during the long hours of enforced leisure, likes to do handwork with odds and ends of yarn. She will appreciate having leftovers from readers' knitting bags, but is unable to call for them. The address will be supplied to any interested reader.

Mrs. J. K. lives on a small farm in a sparsely settled community southwest of Chicago. Her husband suffered a stroke several years ago and she is confined to the house caring for him. She would appreciate yarn and unfinished fancy work if some reader has some which can be mailed to her.

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

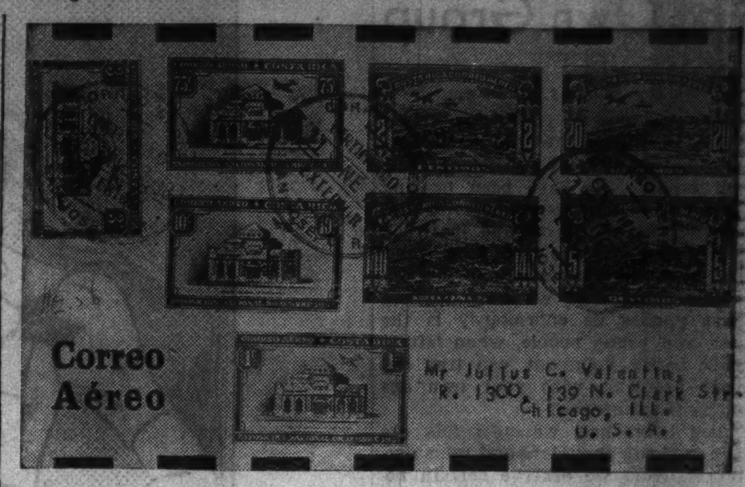
Cape Town Housewife Is Builder of Model Cruiser

Between housekeeping tasks Mrs. M. Bates of Cape Town, South Africa, has built a model cruiser, 32 inches long, in three months.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



This cover from the collection of Julius C. Valentin of Chicago bears the new Costa Rican airmail issue which was placed on first day sale on Jan. 11. In this case the Costa Rican government played no favorites but employed the American Bank Note company and Waterlow & Sons, a London firm, to produce alternate values.

The United States stamps which were overprinted for use in Cuba following the Spanish-American war have been described in a previous issue of THE TRIBUNE. At about the same time stamps were similarly treated for use in Puerto Rico, Guam, and in the Philippine Islands.

On Feb. 16, 1899, the postmaster general of the United States ordered the bureau of engraving and printing to prepare stamps for use on the island of Puerto Rico, specifying that the name should be given as PORTO RICO, and that 1,000,000 1 cent, 2,000,000 2 cent, and 500,000 each of 5 and 10 cent stamps should be provided. These were delivered early in March and were available to collectors in the United States within a short time.

The surcharge is printed in black and placed diagonally on the stamp, reading up toward the right. The Americanization of the Spanish name Puerto Rico to Porto Rico did not please the inhabitants and the final supplies received a new overprint reading PUERTO RICO.

Before making that change an 8 cent value was added to the set and 1, 2, and 10 cent postage due stamps had been overprinted PORTO RICO. These were shipped on May 16, 1899, in the following quantities: 25,000 8 cent postage, 25,000 each 1 and 2 cent dues, and 5,000 10 cent dues. Stamps overprinted PUERTO RICO were ordered early in 1900 and were available late in March or early in April.

There is some indication that all of the postage and postage due values received this overprint, as all were noted in the philatelic press of that time, but it is certain that only the 1 and 2 cent postage values were placed on sale.

The United States Stamp catalog states that one sheet each of the 5, 8, and 10 cent postage stamps was specially overprinted for exhibition at the Paris exposition of 1901, but makes no mention of the due stamps. The exposition referred to is no doubt that of 1900, in which the United States located an extra-territorial postoffice from which letters could be posted to addresses back home at domestic rates. There are no errors of surcharge in the stamps issued for Puerto Rico, but the specialist will find that the first type comes in two different inclinations, the 1, 2, and 8 cent postage, and all dues being available in both inclinations.

The stamps with PUERTO RICO overprint may be found with a defective U which is without serifs at the right hand side. Envelopes, newspaper wrappers, and postal cards also were overprinted, there being ten varieties of envelope stamps with the first form, and eight with the second, one envelope wrapper with the first form, and two postal cards in the first type followed by one in the second.

SVERIGE

[Courtesy K. A. Wallquist, Chicago.]

Emanuel Swedenborg, Swedish scientist, philosopher and founder of Swedenborgian theology, whose birth on Jan. 29, 1688, was commemorated throughout the world, has been honored by the Swedish postoffice department through an issue of stamps bearing his portrait. The issue includes 50,000,000 10 öre stamps and 1,000,000 1 krona stamps, and each will be coils, perforated, vertically, and the former in booklets perforated 13 regularly. The stamp design is by Torsten Schonberg after a contemporary oil painting of Swedenborg by Per Krafft the Elder.

Irish Players Return to Chicago with Six Programs

By CHARLES COLLINS.

THE historic "Irish Players," formally entitled the Abbey Theater company of Dublin, will return to Chicago, their favorite American city, tomorrow night for an engagement of two weeks and no longer at the Grand Opera house. They would have liked to begin their tour here and remain for a run, but their American management made the routine decision that New York was the correct starting point. They come here, therefore, on the wing, headed toward the Pacific coast, with Canada for the route of return; and so they will almost whizz past their loyal Chicago admirers, sadly admitting that they ought to settle down here for five or six weeks instead of the conventional fortnight.

The Abbey's acting roster this year is practically the same as that of 1935. A few of the familiar players have tasted the fleshpots of Hollywood since then, but Barry Fitzgerald is the only one to remain in that environment. (His quaint Celtic face may now be seen in the movie version of Stevenson's South Seas tale, "The Ebb Tide.") P. J. Carolan, able veteran of the Abbey's repertory, has fallen heir to Fitzgerald's principal rôles, and he is an actor who can be counted on to support the tradition sturdily. He is, incidentally, more intelligible in his use of the brogue than Fitzgerald, whose comic characterizations were occasionally inarticulate.

The company is rich in familiar faces. It contains Arthur Shields, whose Playboy is a masterpiece; Eileen Crowe, the best all-around actress the Abbey has produced; F. J. McCormick, able actor of a wide variety of leading rôles; Maureen Delaney, a rare comedienne in many types of peasant women; May Craig, excellent in gentle village widows; Denis O'Dea, who plays the "gossoons" and merry young fellows; Michael J. Dolan, who has spent his life at the Abbey and trains the younger generation in the old artistic faith; Aideen O'Connor and Frolie Mulhern, the colleens of the troupe, and Udolphus Wright, who has been on every American tour of the Abbey since the beginning, nearly thirty years ago.

Also prominent in the troupe is Ria Mooney, who was absent in 1935, but is easily remembered from the tour of 1933, when, with Kate Curling, she figured in the schoolgirl merriment of "The Far Off Hills." She is an attractive young actress of extended experience which has not been limited to the Irish drama. She was, for a time, active in New York with Eva Le Gallienne's repertory company. Two new names appear on the list — Joseph Linnane and Austin Meldon. They are graduates of the Abbey's school of acting, well grounded in the method.

This week's performances will be devoted to two of the most popular comedies in the Abbey's repertory, "The Far Off Hills," by Lennox Robinson, and "The New Gossoon," by George Shiels. The former will be acted on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday; the latter on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. Both plays are well known here, but the flavor of their humor has not grown thin.

The second week will open on Sunday night, Feb. 13, with the only new play of the engagement—"Silver Jubilee," by Cormac O'Daly, to which J. M. Synge's brief tragedy, "Riders to the Sea," will be added. There will be three perfomances of this bill, on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday nights. "Drama at Inish," a comedy by Lennox Robinson, which has had only a few performances in Chicago, will be given on Wednesday afternoon and evening. Sean O'Casey's drama of the Easter insurrection, "The Plough and the Stars," will be the bill on Thursday and Friday evenings. The engagement will close with performances on Saturday afternoon and evening, Feb. 19, of J. M. Synge's "The Playboy of the Western World," with Lady Gregory's "The Rising of the Moon" as curtain raiser.

Stage Fare Bolsters New York Record as Theater Capital

Eloquent Irish Play at Top of Dramatic Heap

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Interesting variety in the local theater these last several days. Progressing, happily, from the ridiculous to the sublime, which is the most satisfactory way to travel. We began with an impertinent bit of burlesque called "If I Were You" and reached a susceptible playgoer's heaven with an eloquent Irish play, "Shadow and Substance," which has been a year on the way from the Abbey theater in Dublin. In between there were an agreeably sentimental bit of English school life called "Bachelor Born" and an interesting series of revivals by the New York state unit of the WPA federal theater. These included O'Neill's "Diff'rent," Shaw's "Pygmalion," and Fitch's "Captain Jinks." Occasionally this theater capital does take on a stature befitting its rating.

"Shadow and Substance" is the Paul Vincent Carroll play that the Abbey Players produced in both Dublin and London. It fell into the hands of Eddie Dowling, who achieved a new interest in the serious drama last season through his success with Maurice Evans and "Richard II." Mr. Dowling bought the American rights to the play and cast Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Julie Haydon in the two leading rôles.

This was Miss Haydon's first rôle of major importance in the living theater. Previously she was known chiefly as the wraithlike young actress who played opposite Noel Coward in the picture called "The Scoundrel."

Stripped of symbols and subtleties that may be concerned with the state of Ireland and the crushing influences that have been borne in upon it [I should be the last to know about those], "Shadow and Substance" is the story of a conflict in faith inside the church.

Canon and Servant Girl Are Leading Roles.

On the one hand there is the Very Rev. Thomas Canon Skerritt, a pompous, high minded, intellectually snobbish classicist, born of an Irish father and a Spanish mother, who has been assigned in his middle years to the village of Ardmahone in the County Louth, Ireland. On the other hand there is Brigid, a young servant girl employed in the canon's parochial house, whose simple and trusting faith is based on her belief that she has seen and talked with her patron saint, that same St. Brigid for whom she was named and who, on earth, had deliberately disfigured her pretty face to discourage her many suitors.

The canon is impressed by the piety of Brigid and selects her as a friend from among all the "fools and boobs and vulgarians" with whom he finds Ardmahone infested. He would, however, disabuse Brigid's mind of her foolish belief in visions and the voices she hears. Particularly would he belittle that promise Brigid has made to her saint that she will ask the canon to help with the performance of a new miracle.

"You are just very young, Brigid," the canon tells the child, with great dignity, "and your poor mind is ill. If you were as wise and old as me, Brigid, you would know that out there where you cannot see there is a whole world of spiritual rowdies willing to sell themselves to anything that can produce signs and wonders to please their vanity. And there you are, Brigid, in the center of them, backing them up—you, the canon's friend, who should know better."

Still Brigid cannot see nor understand, and in the end, when there is a village uprising against a radical young schoolmaster [also her friend], who has written a book attacking the church schools, she is mortally hurt. She dies in the belief that her face, too, has been marred as was St. Brigid's. Beside her as she dies the canon prays for her healing and knows that through her much that had gone from his own faith has been restored to him.

Performances Aided by Well Written Text.

The performances are exceptionally satisfying, bolstered as they are by an eloquently written text. [You can have this in book form, as published by Random House, New York, for $2.] Sir Cedric has scored his first solid American success as the austere canon and little Miss Haydon [who is, I hear, really Donella Donaldson of Oak Park, Ill.] has neatly fitted her limited experience and an appealing gentleness and fineness of personality to the rôle of Brigid. A big stride forward for Miss Haydon. Sara Allgood, playing a garrulous parishioner, is a featured importee and Lloyd Gough adds a forceful radical.

"Bachelor Born" stems from the same playwriting influences as did "Young Woodley" and other English school plays. It was written by Ian Hay, a schoolmaster himself at one time, and has been playing in London for a year. Its school atmosphere is a bit strange to us, naturally, but its humors and humanities are sufficiently universal to give it a chance of success on this side.

The bachelor's romance theme is as dependable in the theater as that concerned with the lowly Cinderellas. The old codger who was defeated in love as a young man and adopted a life of celibacy in a sweetly sacrificial spirit is a common stage character. In "Bachelor Born" Maj. Hay rings a few reasonable changes. Charles Donkin saw his sweetheart married to another and came to believe that he was a bachelor born, which in fact he was. But this did not save him his romantic adventures. When, twenty years after, the aforesaid sweetheart died and left three precocious daughters Donkin was sentimentally led to take a hand in their upbringing. All three, with an aunt, are brought to a boys' school of which he is a housemaster and there quartered temporarily. One girl is 20, another 18, and a third 14.

Immediately they cause such havoc at the school that old Donkin is constantly in a mess of one kind or another. But, among their other excitements, they do manage to start a school rebellion that rights one of their patron's wrongs. Being a gentle, uncomplaining soul, he had been passed over in the promotions. The students form so strong a pro-Donkin organization that they get him a headmastership and all is well. The oldest girl marries a professor of chemistry and the other two are returned to their father, who, having been a bit wild, has settled down and recalled his family.

This cast is largely Anglo-American, being headed by two English players, the Frederic Leister who played the judge in "Libel" two seasons back, and Peggy Simpson, an attractive ingénue brought over from the London company. Phoebe Foster plays the aunt, Helen Trenholm, who is English, and Janet Sterling, who is American, the older daughters.

"If I Were You" an Outrageous Farce.

The burlesque bit I spoke of, "If I Were You," was an outrageous farce made from a Thorne Smith story called "Turnabout." Constance Cummings was in it, which gave it some little claim to recognition, but not enough. It was the story of a biochemist who was experimenting with the transposition of sex harmones, with the idea of turning a male hophoad into a female and vice versa. He made little progress with his experiments, but an Irish maid in the house, who had been instructed in witchcraft by her aunt in Connemarra, put a spell upon the professor and his wife and one morning they awakened to find that they had switched bodies — she had become coarse voiced and strident, he falsetto and mincing. You can, I suspect, imagine the rest. There were amusing incidents, but they were few, and the general result was pretty boring.

The WPA federal theater did better with its revivals. These were played by the New York state unit, which has been active in Roslyn, N. Y., for a year and is directed by Charles Hopkins. Both Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," the play about a London flower girl who, on a wager, was sold to a Buckingham palace garden party as a duchess by a professor of phonetics, and "Capt. Jinks," in which Ethel Barrymore began a starring career thirty-six years ago, were popular. "Pygmalion" sold at a top of 55 cents because Mr. Shaw refused to permit the federals to charge more. "Capt. Jinks" was priced at $1.10 and did no more than half the business. The group also gave one performance of Ernest Toller's "No More Peace," and are to revive Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" next week.

This repertory experiment probably comes close to what we might expect of the federal theater project if later it should become a lightly subsidized national theater, represented by perhaps a half hundred stock company units stretched across the country. The plays are interesting revivals, competently staged and performed for the entertainment and cultural advancement of the people. The object of the project at the moment being to give as many folk work as possible, all units are naturally overstafed and overpeopled in general. Also the directors are denied the commercial producers' privilege of casting to type in all instances. But the net result is good. If we ever do enjoy a return to what once we accepted as normal conditions, something for the good of the people should be salvaged from the federal theater.

Abbey Troupe Limits Stay to Two Weeks

Higgins, the Irish poet, who is one of the seven members of the Abbey theater's board of directors. The others are William Butler Yeats, eminent as a poet and a leader in the Irish cultural renaissance; Dr. Walter Starkie, an author; Dr. Richard Hayes, a historian and government representative on the board; Frank O'Connor, a novelist; Lennox Robinson, the playwright, and Ernest Blythe, a statesman who keeps a close eye on the theater's finances.

Mr. Higgins joined the Abbey's board in 1935. He has published the following volumes of poems: "Salt Air," 1924; "Island Blood," 1925; "The Dark Breed," 1927; "Arable Holdings," 1933, and "The Cap of Brightness," 1935. He is also the author of "A Deuce o' Jacks," a one act comedy which was staged by the Abbey in 1935, and co-author with William Butler Yeats of "The Broadsides." He is regarded as an authority on Irish folk songs.

Maurice Evans Joins Shakespeare Stars.

Maurice Evans, who will come to Chicago two weeks hence in the production of Shakespeare's seldom-acted historical tragedy, "Richard II.", a major success of last season in New York, is known here through his appearances with Katharine Cornell. He was the Romeo to her Juliet in November and December, 1935, and the Dauphin to her Joan of Arc [Shaw's "Saint Joan"] in June, 1936. These were his first appearances on the American stage.

He is 37 years old and had a brilliant career in London before coming to the United States. He made his professional debut in 1926 at Cambridge, where he spent a season in repertory, and then went to London where he won immediate recognition in leading rôles. In 1934 he began an association with the Old Vic theater, where he established himself as a brilliant actor in classical tragedy and comedy. His Shakespearean rôles at the Old Vic were:

The king in "Richard II.", Hamlet in a complete text production, Iago in "Othello," Benedick in "Much Ado About Nothing," Petruchio in "The Taming of the Shrew," Justice Silence in "King Henry IV.", part 2, and Octavius Caesar in "Antony and Cleopatra."

He has recently added Falstaff in "King Henry IV.", part 1, to his Shakespearean repertory, in occasional performances on his present tour. He announces a special appearance in this drama in Chicago on Tuesday night, March 1.

"Richard II." has not been produced on the American stage since Edwin Booth's time. The Evans version omits only two of the nineteen scenes in the text—the episodes dealing with the treason of the Duke of Aumerle to Bolinbroke. The performance is divided into three acts and thirteen scenes. The playing time is 2 hours and 45 minutes.

Irish School Teacher Writes Drama for Broadway.

"Shadow and Substance," the latest notable dramatic hit on the New York stage, was written by Paul Vincent Carroll, an Irish school teacher who lives in Glasgow. He has spent seventeen years handling lower grade classes in a tenement district, and his salary is $30 a week. His play will bring him royalties from $800 to $1,000 a week for a while, and the motion picture rights may be sold for $50,000 or more.

Carroll frequented the Abbey theater of Dublin in his boyhood, and when he was 21 years old his first play, a one-act sketch called "The Watched Pot," was staged there. The Abbey brought out his first full length work, called "The Things that Are Caesar's," in 1932. "Shadow and Substance" had its world première at the Abbey in 1937, and was purchased for American staging by Eddie Dowling, New York impresario. Sara Allgood, who was prominent in the Abbey company's first American tours, has a leading rôle in the New York cast.

Symphonic Fete

The Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., announces that the 1938 festival will take place at Tanglewood between Lenox and Stockbridge, Mass., on Aug. 4, 6, 7, 11, 13, and 14. A new music shed seating 5,000 is to be erected. Approximately $78,000 of the $100,000 needed for its construction has already been pledged. All six of the concerts will be given by the Boston Symphony orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky, conductor. Inquiries concerning the festival may be directed to the Berkshire Symphonic festival, Stockbridge, Mass.

Lou Holtz and Dancing Stars Come to 'Chez'

A new cabaret revue will be started at the Chez Paree next Friday night with three stars—Lou Holtz, Harrison and Fisher, and June and Cherry Preisser. Holtz has been prominent as a comedian of Broadway revues, including several of George White's "Scandals," for the last fifteen years. He made his debut as a café entertainer at the Chez Paree last year. Harrison and Fisher are a team of ballroom dancers who made their début in the Empire room five years ago. The Preisser sisters were prominent in a recent "Ziegfeld Follies." Duke McHale, dancer, and Kitty Colt, singer, will also be on the bill.

- Hal Kemp's orchestra began an engagement in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel last Friday night. He has a large group of musicians and entertainers, including Bob Allen, baritone; Rosalind Marquis, singer; Maxine Gray, singer; "Saxie" Dowell, comedian, and saxophonist; and the Telegraphic Trumpeteers.
- A shawl dance by Harriet Smith's ballet is a feature of the amusement program in the Marine room of the Edgewater Beach hotel this week. Orrin Tucker's dance band and soloists continue.
- Sterling Young, orchestra leader and violinist, leads the entertainment in the New Boulevard room of the Stevens hotel. He has been active on the Pacific coast during the last two years. Gene Marvey, comic opera singer, is master of ceremonies. Other performers are Donna Lee and Gil Dagonais, singers; Vic Francone, comedian; and Don Julian and Marjorie, ballroom dancers.
- Shep Fields' orchestra and the current floor show will remain in the Empire room of the Palmer house until Feb. 23. Bernie Cummins' orchestra and a new bill of entertainment will open the next night.
- Harry's New York cabaret has Jack Irving, master of ceremonies; Tommy Jones ballad singer; Tex Morrissey, Marion Joyce, Madeline Gardiner, and Betty Saxon.

Proposes Novel Test of Accepted Ratings of Composers

Critic Outlines an Experiment with Children

By Edward Barry.

If you want to win the eternal gratitude of the music world, and are not above sacrificing even your own children to this desire, try subjecting the luckless youngsters to the following experiment.

From the age of eight to eighteen give them every opportunity to hear music and to become familiar with the names of the various composers. But every book about music, as well as every encyclopedia and even biographical dictionary, must be kept locked away in the cellar along with Krafft-Ebing and "Droll Stories." Be ready to shoot the tubes out of the radio rather than allow the erudition of an announcer or a commentator to despoil these innocent ears.

You must frown darkly on unescorted trips to the public library, whose reference room and 780 section could do such incalculable harm. Far better that the toddlers should be bundled off to the movie house, there to revel in a rousing afternoon of westerns.

Will Reach Maturity in a Curious State.

Thus, with minds dwarfed by the caprice of a brutal parent, these children will arrive at maturity in a most curious and fascinating state. The names of all composers will be as familiar to them as their own. Their poor heads will be bursting with thousands of pieces of music. Yet they will not know whether Haydn is a highly respected fifteenth century composer or an indifferently regarded tunesmith of today!

Now comes the crown of the experiment—and the whole world of music will hold its breath until the results are announced. Ask these sons and daughters of yours, these unprecedented blends of knowledge and ignorance, to perform the following feats. First: Rate the composers in the order of their excellence. Second: Arrange them chronologically. Third: Write a paragraph describing the general musical character of each. Fourth: Divide them into "schools," national and otherwise, and describe briefly the traits of each of these schools.

The results are likely to be staggering. Remember that no one [except possibly some bad companions on the street—and who can protect children against this type of menace?] will ever have told these innocents that Brahms is more austere than Wagner, that Schumann's bursting emotionalism sometimes overcomes his sense of form, that Mendelssohn is polished but shallow, that Tschaikowsky is morbid, that Beethoven is the noblest symphonist, that the music of Sibelius suggests the stern north while that of Smetana is dewy with the peasant mirth of a somewhat gentler clime.

Standard Adjectives Will Have No Meaning.

Remember that the words "classical," "modern," "impressionistic" will have no meaning whatever for your remarkable youths. And they will not know that German music is supposed to be profound, French music superficial, Italian warm and glowing, and Russian brightly barbarous.

The result of the experiment will be nothing less than a complete revaluation of music. Perhaps it will largely support conventional critical opinion, perhaps it will knock such opinion higher than a kite.

If you do not agree that this whole experiment is desirable, brood for a few minutes on the fact that none of us ever achieves a wide acquaintance with music without allowing the thoughts and opinions of others to color our attitude toward composers and schools.

Before a youngster has explored Mozart's music beyond the "Don Giovanni" minuet he is apt to gain from his reading the feeling that this composer stands almost at the head of the class. From then on it is impossible to be completely open minded.

Years before he hears the Matthew Passion he knows that it is considered one of the greatest, if not the greatest, piece of music in the world. The news that Liszt is bombastic and empty comes prematurely, often when the child's personal acquaintance with the composer's works does not extend beyond the "Liebestraum."

Haze of Words Blocks Intelligent Criticism.

He goes to see "La Tosca," expecting that it will be melodious but a little vulgar, and sure enough he finds [or thinks he finds] that it is melodious but a little vulgar. At a first experience with "Die Walküre," on the other hand, he hears the music through the thousand word haze of Henry T. Finck, and concludes falsely that he, the actual listener, thinks that the music drama is everything that the great missionary says it is. The fact that Finck may be right does not blunt the point.

Similarly in the case of schools and trends and influences. Years before we have done enough listening to produce the actual musical background which is necessary for any independent conclusions we know definitly what we are supposed to believe. Small wonder, then, that we do believe it. Worse still, musical criticism of the present relies largely on that of the recent past while that of the recent past plainly shows its relation to what was thought and written at a still earlier time.

Is it possible that all of us—public and critics and musicians—are the victims of our bookish backgrounds? The experiment sketched above, if it could ever be made, would do much to write a definite Yes or No to this question.

SALZBURG GUILD SOPRANO

Grete Menzel is a member of the touring opera group which next Sunday evening takes over the Auditorium theater for a seven day engagement. Little known works by Monteverdi, Mozart, Rossini, Ibert, and Milhaud compose the repertoire of the group.

Civic Orchestra

The Civic orchestra, the admirable training school for orchestral players sponsored by the Orchestral association and conducted by Hans Lange, gives the first of four monthly concerts in Orchestra hall this afternoon. The program is an arduous one:

Overture to "Oberon" .... Weber
Symphony, D Major, "With the Horn Signal" .... Haydn
"Death and Transfiguration" .... Strauss
Spanish Caprice.............. Rimski-Korsakov

Tschaikowsky's opera "Eugene Onegin," not heard in Chicago since the visit of the Russian Opera company in 1922, will be revived by the Associated Cultural groups at the Goodman theater tonight.

Week Will See Art of Dance in Foreground

By Cecil Smith.

The popular art of the dance moves into the foreground with a sudden rush this week. Doris Humphrey and Charles Weidman, with their modern dance group, will appear in concert at the Auditorium theater on Friday night and give a technical demonstration in Thorne hall the following evening. Trudi Schoop and her comic assistants toss off their high jinks twice today at the Studebaker theater. Eleanor Block, together with Walter Camryn and a group, will present two new dance sequences with the Saidenberg Symphonietta at the Goodman theater Tuesday evening. Anne Rudolph and her dancers provide the Beaux Arts salon program at the Medinah club today.

The Humphrey-Weidman dancers are the first representatives of New York's clan of modern dancers to visit Chicago this season. The program they promise for the Auditorium theater Friday night places considerable emphasis upon humorous subjects. Chief among these is "Race of Life," a new composition by Miss Humphrey based on drawings and a story by James Thurber.

Trudi Schoop is likewise armed with a new comic piece this year. The irrepressible Swiss mime has fashioned seven episodes, entitled "All for Love," in which seven aspects of Love [with a capital L] are swiftly harpooned, to music by Lothar Perl. The size of the troupe has been increased by four members this season, and the augmented group has been preparing for its American tour by rehersing in some remote Swiss fastness.

Eleanor Block's two new dance suites, to be given Tuesday with the Saidenberg Symphonietta under the baton of her husband, Daniel Saidenberg, make use of the music of two distantly separated composers, the contemporary Hungarian Bela Bartok and the eighteenth century German Johann Sebastian Bach. "Earth Figures," to the Bartok music, depicts the rôle played by energy, or the lack of it, in human activity through the course of a day. "Cycle of Seven," even more abstract in conception, with no general theme, is an interpretation in movement of several short pieces by Bach.

The first half of the program will be given over to orchestral items:

Concerto Grosso No. 11, D Minor...... Vivaldi
Five Bagatelles............. David Van Vactor
[First performance]
Two Pieces...................... Shostakovich
[First time in Chicago]

Two cellists will make solo appearances with the Chicago Symphony orchestra during the week—Raya Garbousova at the Tuesday matinée and Gregor Piatigorsky at the Thursday-Friday subscription concerts.

Miss Garbousova is a native of Tiflis, Russia. Though still in her twenties, she has won great acclaim wherever she has played. She will give the first American performance of the Concerto Moldave by the Rumanian composer Stan Golestan. Hans Lange will conduct the Tuesday concert:

Concerto Grosso, for Three Flutes, Harp, and Orchestra. David Van Vactor
"The Swan of Tuonela" .... Sibelius
Concerto Moldave, for Cello and Orchestra .... Stan Golestan
[Raya Garbousova.]
[First time in America.]
Symphony No. 7, A Major .... Beethoven

At the Thursday-Friday concerts Mr. Piatigorsky, an established favorite here, will repeat two works he played with the orchestra several seasons ago, the Boccherini Concerto and Ernest Bloch's yerning Hebrew Rhapsody "Schelomo." Frederick Stock will conduct:

Prelude to Act. I. of "Fervaal" .... Vincent d'Indy
Concerto for Cello and Orchestra, B-flat Major .... Boccherini
[Gregor Piatigorsky.]
Symphony No. 4, B-flat Major .... Beethoven
"Schelomo," Hebrew Rhapsody for Cello and Orchestra ...... Ernest Bloch
[Gregor Piatigorsky.]
Finale from "Feuersnot" .... Strauss

Find Unknown Letter Penned by Washington

A letter by George Washington, hitherto unknown, was discovered recently among the papers of Gen. Gage in the William L. Clements library of American history at the University of Michigan by John Alden, teaching fellow in the department of history, in the course of researches on British Indian policy in North America before the revolution.

Under date May 17, 1768, and written in Washington's own hand, the letter is addressed to John Blair, president of the council in Virginia and acting governor of the colony after the death of Francis Fauquier that same year. Blair forwarded it to Gen. Thomas Gage, British commander in chief in America.

Washington's purpose in writing the letter was to obtain through Gen. Gage a special favor for some Virginian friends who were engaged in furnishing provisions to the British garrison at Fort Pitt. The Virginians' trade route ran between Forts Cumberland and Pitt through an area which they feared might be left in the Indian territory by the new boundary which was to be drawn in 1768. Washington had been asked to use his influence in obtaining the maintenance of some supply stations on the road between the two forts.

The fears of Washington and his friends were groundless, however, for a report to the board of trade in England of March 7, 1768, had already provided that the territory in question should be placed outside the Indian reserve. But Washington's letter is significant because it shows his continuing interest in the efforts of the Virginians to develop the Ohio valley; also it shows the apprehension of Washington and his friends regarding the plans of the English government for the west.

The last of three conferences on "The College Looks at Life," which have been held at DePauw university, Greencastle, Ind., will take place on Friday, Feb. 18.

Respectively, the speakers will be Dr. John H. Upham, president of the American Medical association; Dr. Roger Adams of the University of Illinois and former head of the American Chemical society; Richard Thomas Alexander, chairman of New college at Columbia university, and Lee White of the Detroit News.

Opportunity to win a trip to Europe and gain a one-year scholarship to Knox college, Galesburg, is again made available to high school students in the middle west through the 12th annual national competitive examination to be conducted by the League of Nations association, the midwest office of which is located at 75 East Wacker drive. The examination will be based on essential facts regarding the league, the covenant of the league, and the alternative to war.

Edward Hallet Carr, British diplomat and head of the department of international politics at University College of Wales at Aberystwyth, will lecture at Carleton college, Northfield, Minn., for the week beginning Feb. 13 in the department of international relations recently initiated under the Frank B. Kellogg foundation.

Guests Affect Film Stars in Varying Ways

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Is it an inferiority complex, temperament, or what that makes some stars forbid visitors on their sets? It's amazing how stars differ on this matter. Some love an audience while they work; others refuse to do a single line until all visitors but the necessary "crews" are excluded from the set.

This isn't a new state of affairs. In the old silent days Norma Talmadge would walk right into her dressing room at the advent of visitors, and rest until they left. Mary Pickford was always most cordial to visitors. In that era things stacked up pretty much this way: Film folks who had come to films from the stage always welcomed visitors. Due to stage audiences they were totally unself-conscious. William S. Hart was of this number.

Today the rule doesn't hold so well. Sometimes it does, but it is honored as often in the breach as in the observance. Charlie Chaplin had stage experience yet he has never been one to admit visitors. He will allow visitors as a special favor when he is directing other actors in scenes, but ordinarily it is almost impossible to get on Chaplin's set.

W. C. Fields observes the stage tradition, however. He likes a crowd watching his stuff—seems to stimulate him. So does Hugh Herbert. He will polish off the silliest monkeyshines to delight visitors. He'll give them his famous "Wu-Wu" with the handclaps and the giggle, just for fun. He'll stroll over and introduce himself, and a few new stories.

The Marx brothers don't mind visitors, if any one is hardy enough to take his life in his hands by visiting their set. But they pay visitors scant attention, and seem to devote themselves largely to business, unconcerned whether visitors come or go.

Garbo Didn't Protest in Her Early Career.

Greta Garbo is typical of the stars with no stage experience. Yet, in her early days Garbo did not protest about visitors. We watched her often, though she never seemed friendly. When a big emotional scene was to be done she was too shy to do it unless the set were boxed off. For some years, of course, her sets have been hermetically sealed.

After she got into the celebrity class the crowds of visitors that came to stare disconcerted her. Her old co-star, Jack Gilbert, who came of a stage family, didn't mind visitors in the least. Bert Lytell, Eddie Lowe, and many stars of the stage like them who came to films always made it a point to greet visitors with "a honeyed word, a beaming smile" figuring, no doubt, it was one easy way to make fans. They were right.

Then, with the advent of sound, and the development of the intricate and expensive processes that have followed, the flow of casual visitors was cut down, but those who do break through, either as writers or specially privileged guests, still find that stars are different about the open or closed set business.

Today's stars who insist on closed sets are Katharine Hepburn, Mae West, Grace Moore, Kay Francis, Marion Davies, Miriam Hopkins, Boris Karloff [because of the element of surprise and mystery in his makeups], Director John Ford, Fred Astaire [who is unbelievably shy, unless he knows a visitor to be "friendly"], Carole Lombard [who will sometimes permit men, but rarely women on her set], Joan Crawford, and Marlene Dietrich. The latter two will admit newspaper folk of long acquaintance. Deanna Durbin, understandably enough, because of her youth and inexperience, prefers isolation. Irene Dunne, who used to be freer about visitors, now prefers to be isolated. Grace Moore refuses to let people watch her work.

Constance Bennett Relaxes Privacy Rule.

Constance Bennett used to insist on the most strictly closed set in films. Lately she has relaxed this, and while she will eye visitors sharply she does not object.

Lily Pons and Gladys Swarthout bring their operatic aplomb to the set. Lily, who still can't get the English off her tongue fast enough that the gun doesn't jam sometimes, is a good fellow and doesn't mind visitors seeing her in scanties in her comedy scenes. She is pleasantly conversational, too, when introduced. They call her the "good little frog" at the studio.

Shirley Temple and Jane Withers both seem to enjoy an audience. Jane always greets her friends with a whoop and a halloo and a rush as she comes across the set.

Rudy Vallee and Dick Powell turn on the old charm when visitors come around. They've both had their share of autograph chasers and goofy dames who imagine they're in love with them, but the boys handle it well, and strut their stuff on a wide open set, come who may.

Douglas Fairbanks Sr. in his day, and young Doug now, always have been friendly to visitors. John Barrymore has been known to make faces impishly at sedate looking ladies on his sets, but he is usually a good fellow and will stop for a bit of chat if he isn't immersed in a scene. Sonja Henie is always friendly, dimpling, and cordial.

Ronald Colman does not like to be stared at by too many strangers, but is not temperamental about visitors. Any one with legitimate entree, either as a member of the press or as a guest of the studio, is made welcome by him in a quiet, friendly way.

Myrna Loy and William Powell aren't temperamental. Myrna will stop and chat about finger nail polish or her new house, or whatever's on your mind, and her smile is very pleasant to see. Powell, if he is in the mood, will clown a bit, pretending to be bored but furnishing a lot of funny gags. He is never on a closed set.

Critic Names 7 Best Films for January

AMPHITRION. WELLS FARGO.
THE HURRICANE. THE BUCCANEER.
BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE.
SHE MARRIED AN ARTIST.
IN OLD CHICAGO.

Honorable Mention Pictures: You're a Sweetheart, Thrill of a Lifetime, Viennese Nightingale, Hollywood Hotel, She's Got Everything, Penitentiary, Night Club Scandal, Club De Femmes, Manhattan Merry-Go-Round.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Quite a month, January, so far as unusual movies were concerned. Take a look at those "Bests!" Quality, what?

"AMPHITRION," said the original review, was "something new under the sun . . . a mythological farce with music; cunningly and elaborately produced and brilliantly acted. . . . The dialog is delightful and the treatment of risque scenes the acme of directorial cleverness . . . " Played by a foreign cast.

"WELLS FARGO"—A rugged and impressive offering . . . latest of screen's factual and fictional accounts of early American history. . . . Interesting and well done . . . grand and inspiring scenery . . ." In the leads, Frances Dee, Joel McCrea, Bob Burns. . . .

"SHE MARRIED AN ARTIST"—Proves fine vehicle for exploitation of Viennese Luli Desti—"if you don't say she's a find, a knockout, a honey, and a beauty, I miss my guess . . . definitly 'big time' . . . picture, a lightweight comedy, also gives John Boles opportunity to show up to good advantage . . . . action is swift . . . some of Miss Desti's costumes ravishing . . ."

"THE BUCCANEER"—"Lots of color and action . . . built around the exploits of that patriotic pirate, Jean Lafitte . . . history with many a grain of salt and sugar . . . fictional seasonings deftly insinuated . . ." Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, Margot Grahame, Akim Tamiroff, and Walter Brennan heading an able cast.

"IN OLD CHICAGO"—"A grand show. As absorbing and thrilling a spectacle as it's been cracked up to be . . . has sweep, color, humor, warmth, romance, and suspense . . . its story leads up dramatically to the great fire which conflagrated Chicago on the night of Oct. 9, 1871 . . . acting throughout absolutely tops . . ." Featured are Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Alice Brady, and Brian Donlevy. . . .

And now January makes way for the February output. Here's hoping it will be as should be.

See you tomorrow.

An Aftermath of the Hat Shop Cocktail Party Is the Discovery of a Woman's Body

THE STORY TO DATE

● A shot fired through the window of their London home barely misses Rosemary Bellamy-Pryce and her aunt, affectionately called Boggie. A nephew of Tommy Rostetter, a journalist, persuades him to investigate. Calling to question Rosemary's aunt about possible enemies, they find her bound and unconscious from a blow. Her assailant, she later says, was small and shabby and wore black gloves. Tommy sees Boggie grow furious at finding her manuscript case had been searched and suspects her of knowing more than she tells. Rosemary tells Tommy that her uncle, Gavin Bellamy-Pryce, always wears black gloves. Gavin would benefit by the death of Boggie, Rosemary, or Rosemary's vicar father. Gavin was a steerage passenger on a boat returning from India when Boggie's husband died of heart failure. Captain Argus, now in London, was also on the boat. Rosemary receives word her father is in town on the day a cocktail party is being given in the hat shop where Rosemary works. Countess Rakovsky owns the shop.

INSTALMENT V.

(Copyright: 1938: By Alice Ormond Campbell.)

THE countess had darted forward, seized hold of Rosemary, and with ferocious energy was thrusting her toward the bar.

"Look out, countess, darling!" cried the girl, unperturbed by the onslaught. "I'm dropping the stuff. Rank, do leave—go!" For Rank, appearing from nowhere, was trying to relieve her of her burden. "No, Capt. Argus, I can manage nicely, thanks. Just clear a passage for me, will you?"

She steered an intrepid course. Various male guests turned with livened interest. The countess shrugged and Boggie good humoredly bade Argus remain where he was.

"Better leave the child alone," she advised. "There's already a hopeless jam in that bar corner. O, well, if you must help, see if you can fetch me a bracer." She shook her head as she watched the Australian doggedly shouldering his way past obstructions. "It's no use, he'll only spill it," she said to Tommy. "Suppose we go, too, and try our luck?"

Rosemary, busy with her mixing, was surrounded six deep by stationary men who resisted all efforts to be restored into circulation. With the greatest difficulty he secured Boggie her cocktail and together they retired to a less crowded spot.

"Well," said Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce in a whisper, "have you heard anything more?"

"Nothing, except that I've discovered your brother-in-law's address. I've been there, but his room seems to have been empty for some days."

"Seems!" she repeated skeptically. "Let's hope he isn't fooling us. With Cuthbert in town—well, it's a bit of a strain. The inspector called on me this morning. He's inclined to think we must do all we can to prevent the two brothers from meeting."

Absently she finished her drink, murmuring that she loathed crowds, and meant to go once the downpour had stopped. Tommy, however, hardly heard her. Through the mass of heads he had just caught from Rosemary what he took to be an S O S signal. He left his companion and managed to wedge in behind the bar, where his nephew and Argus were competing with an Italian naval attaché for the privilege of opening bottles. At once he saw what the annoyance was. All three men, having freely imbibed, were urging Rosemary to drink something to avoid catching cold after her soaking, and Rosemary was determined not to oblige them. The Italian was gayly persuasive; Rank, whom anything above three cocktails rendered preternaturally solemn, was by turns demonstrating that hers was the infallible road to pneumonia, and beseeching her, as a parting favor, to do this one small service to please him. Argus had reached the stage of inebriety when repetition replaces eloquence. Over and over he kept up the stubborn growl: "How can good liquor make you sick? Just nonsense, that's what it is." She had been brushing them off like troublesome flies, going steadily on with her task; but now Argus elbowed the others away and tried to enforce his argument by laying masterful hands on her shoulders.

"That'll do, thanks!"

She twisted herself free, an angry scarlet in her cheeks and in her eyes a dangerous glitter. Tommy got between her and the Australian, who edged sullenly to the side. Constituting himself assistant bartender he remained, and presently discovered that both the Italian and his nephew had melted into the throng. It must have been some five minutes later that he saw Rosemary, shaker in hand, leaning forward with a stare of comic dismay.

"Daddy!" she whispered. "O, dear, he did come!"

Rosemary seized Tommy by the hand to begin pushing through the mob. Midway the room, however, she stopped, drew in a sharp breath, and dug her nails into her companion's palm.

"Look!" she gasped. "There, behind him!"

Tommy looked. Over the vicar's shoulder hung a visage of dark sallowness, almost green in the shadow of a villainous black hat. A pinched, sinister face it was, with uneven streaks of jet hair trained before the ears, a long nose, and bilious, sunken dark eyes which glinted with a saturnlike humor.

Gavin gone away? On the contrary, he was here in their midst.

In another moment they had reached the newcomers. Even as Tommy caught sight of Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce gazing in startled fashion at the two brothers Rosemary was introducing him with gay nonchalance.

"Surely you remember Mr. Rostetter, daddy darling? He's Rank's uncle from Paris. Uncle Gav, this is a surprise! You'll neither of you like this, you know. Stay put and I'll fetch you some sherry." In Tommy's ear she muttered a fierce, "There is sherry, thank goodness—one bottle. Find it!"

The vicar beamed with vacant amiability. Gavin, having jerked his head the merest fraction of an inch, let his eye travel in malevolent, bored amusement over the company. Both were perfectly at ease and, though the vicar made vague murmurs about not remaining, he expressed his willingness to partake of refreshment. Tommy therefore set off to find the sherry, but his progress being stayed by the entanglement of a diamond bangle in his cuff link, he was a witness to Boggie's new exhibition of sang froid.

"Well, old stick-in-the-mud!" cried Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce, surging up and bestowing, on the way, a careless nod in Gavin's direction. "Not going to cut me, I hope, after the good curry I gave you last night?"

"Honoria? Dear me, so it is." He summoned his vagrant thoughts. "You slept well, I trust? No—er—further disturbances?"

Boggie laughed robustly.

"Not a bit of it!" she declared. "Our little excitement's fizzled out. False alarm, as I told you."

"Yes, yes, so I was explaining to Gavin. Most unnerving, though, and might, to be sure, have led to serious results. Similar street names. O, quite understandable!"

Gavin was watching Boggie with an evil, penetrating smile. That smile remained when, in an effortless, detached way, he began to worm toward the bar. Tommy, fishing up the sherry bottle from the corner, found Gavin facing him, and there he still was, darkly sipping his drink and rolling it thoughtfully over his tongue when Tommy conveyed a second glass of sherry to the vicar. In fact, it was one of the few impressions which stood out clean cut when the time came to reconstruct past happenings—Gavin stationed close to the regiment of bottles calmly enjoying his Amontillado, his dingy caped overcoat buffeted by the smart, surging crowd, but his puny figure immovable as a crab stuck to a rock. He had kept on his gloves—nearly green with antiquity.

THE family group was as he had left it—Rosemary, absent and tense, fondling her father's arms; Boggie alongside, keeping up her lively patter; the vicar himself gazing fixedly at the beautiful ladies who passed, spellbound by their charms and uncritical as a boy of six seeing his first bevy of circus queens. Tommy remained for a few minutes, but was dragged away and into the other room by a woman acquaintance, who firmly assured him he had been at school with her latest husband; and it had only just come out that the husband's school had been Eton, not Winchester, when a disheveled Rosemary brushed against him with a scarcely audible, "They've gone! O, quick, see where they're off to!"

Into the subsiding drizzle Tommy dashed—and stared blankly up and down the street. In this short interval the pair of brothers had completely disappeared. He had to go back to report failure.

Rosemary had gone suddenly quite white, and from the frown on her forehead seemed to be thinking rather desperately.

She murmured, "They may, of course, have gone to daddy's hotel. O, could you find out?"

For a second time Tommy made off, just as Capt. Argus, hot eyed and smouldering, once more shoved toward the bar.

It was after 8:30 when he regained the shop, sufficiently emptied now to reveal the litter of cigaret ends and broken biscuits underfoot. Only the countess and a few intimates lingered, and these, blissfully comatose, took no heed of him. The bar table was deserted, but as he looked about, Rosemary came in from the rear room, her hair freshly combed, but her whole air that of exhaustion.

"No luck, I suppose?"

"None. I've tried the Shaftesbury, and the Lambs' Conduit street place. They've probably made for some restaurant. By the way, what became of Rank?"

Gone, she told him. Didn't he know? This had been Rank's farewell indulgence. She hoped he hadn't been too tight to make his boat train.

"And Argus?" he asked, recalling the dogged look last seen on the Australian's face.

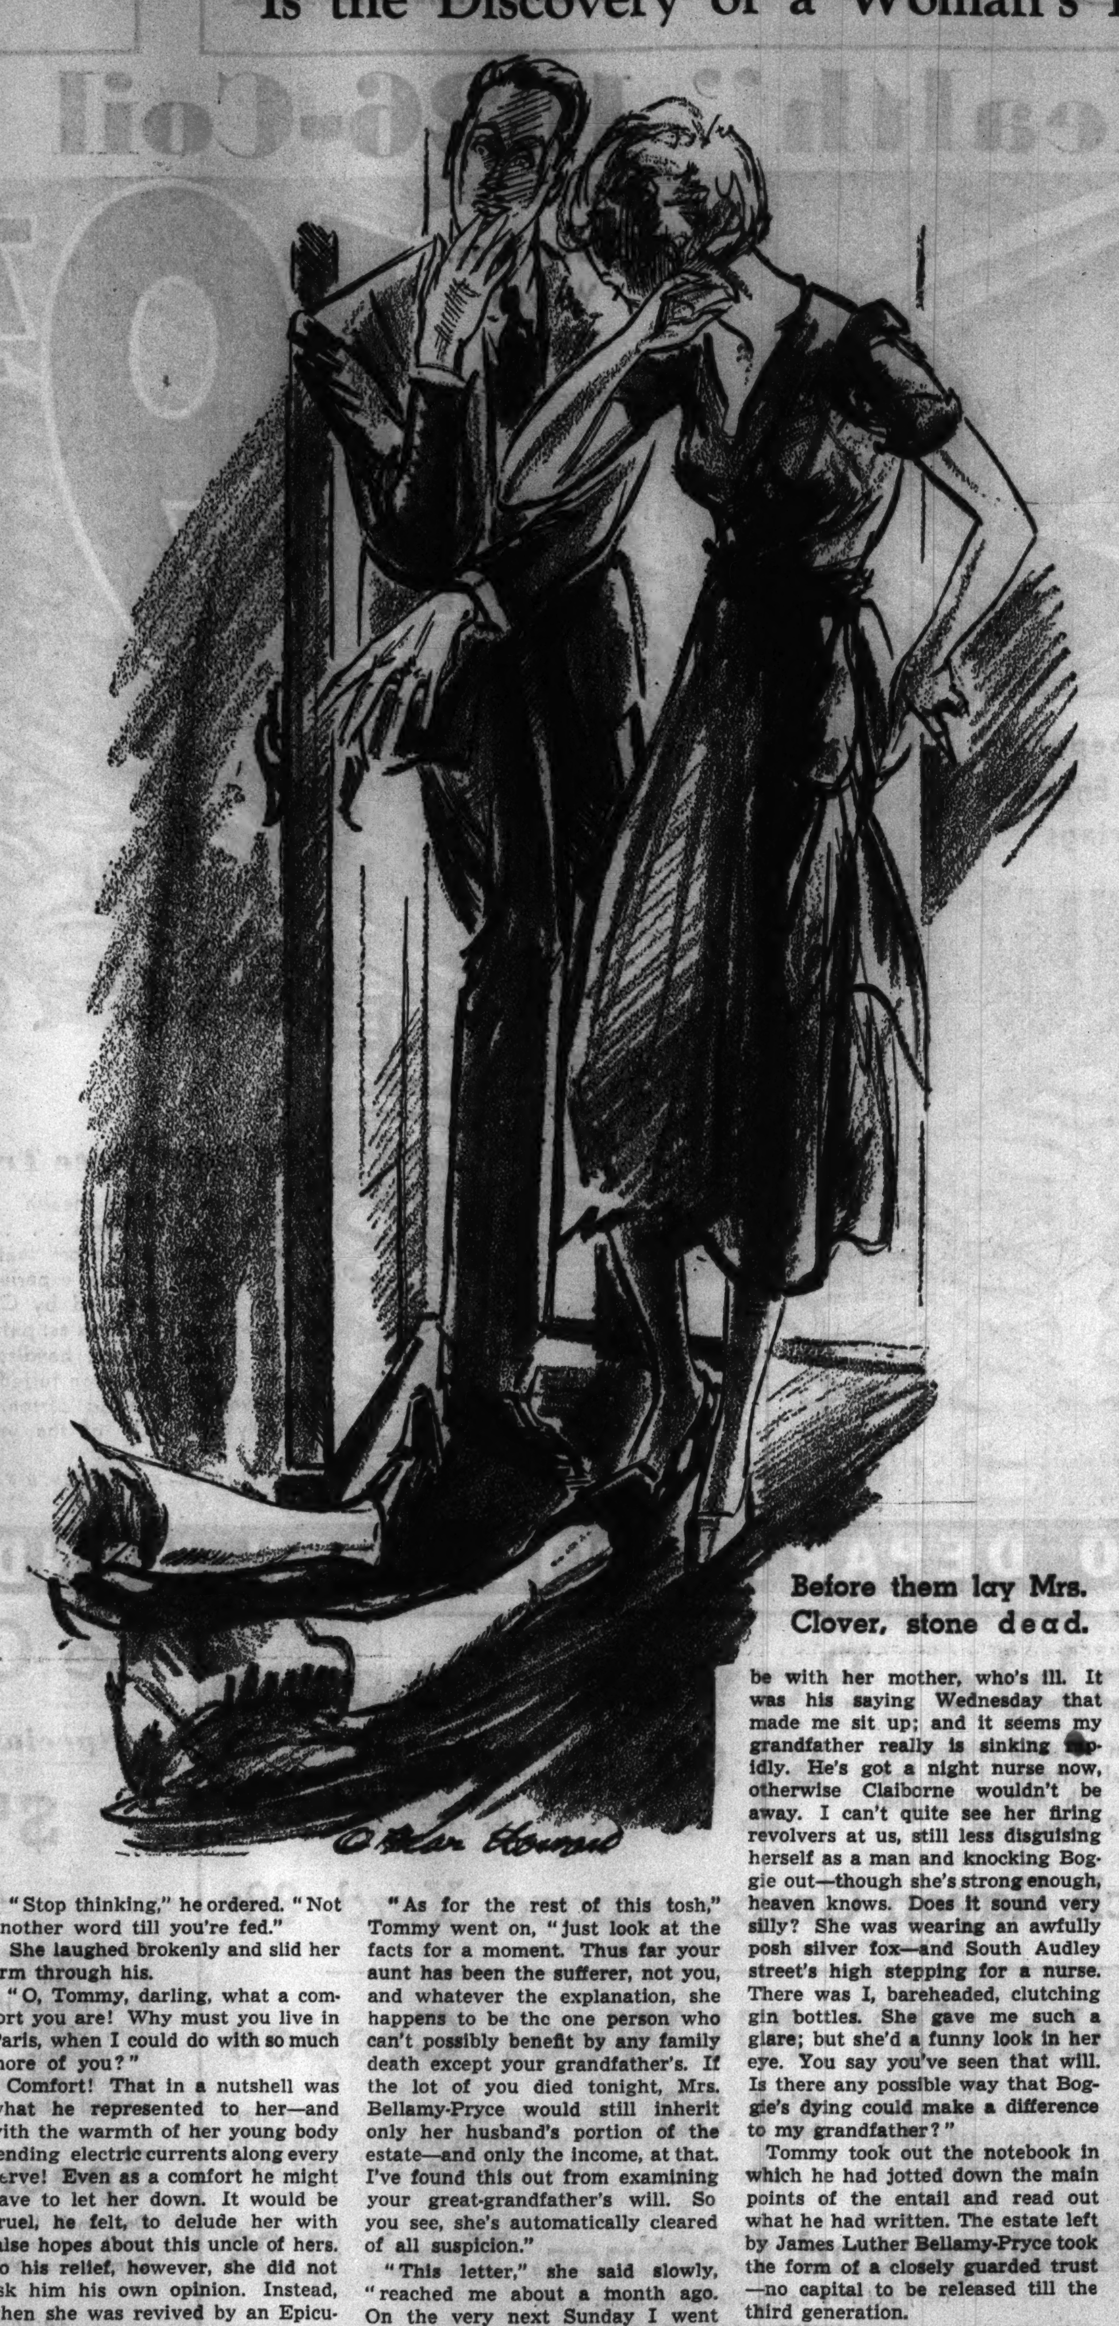
"O, he went, too—in a huff. Imagine expecting me to come out and dance!"

"That other fellow, the Italian, seemed to cherish similar hopes."

"S-sh!" She sent a warning glance toward the countess, picked up her hat and bag, and moved listlessly toward the door. "Well," she sighed, "I've done all I could. Now I'm going home to turn in."

"Not home," Tommy spoke dictatorially. "To a restaurant, for food. I'm taking you there now."

In the car she said, "Boggie, of course, was wonderful; but did you see her face when they came in together?" Not waiting for a reply she continued: "She tried to persuade daddy to dine with us again, but he simply wouldn't. He'd got his heart set on hobnobbing with Uncle Gav. O, Tommy, how horrible this is!"



Before them lay Mrs. Clover, stone dead.

She laughed brokenly and slid her arm through his.

"O, Tommy, darling, what a comfort you are! Why must you live in Paris, when I could do with so much more of you?"

Comfort! That in a nutshell was what he represented to her—and with the warmth of her young body sending electric currents along every nerve! Even as a comfort he might have to let her down. It would be cruel, he felt, to delude her with false hopes about this uncle of hers. To his relief, however, she did not ask him his own opinion. Instead, when she was revived by an Epicurean meal, she led the talk into an unexpected channel.

"You remember what I said about my grandfather's sending us all abusive letters? Well, I've got mine here in my bag. It came straight from Black Gables—typed, but with his signature. So he must have dictated it. I must tell you to begin with that it's a beastly letter. Not attacking me—I could have borne that—but saying the most vile, unspeakable things about my aunt. Stupid, impossible things," she insisted vehemently. "Warning me—yes, warning me, to keep clear of a harpy who'd ruined my Uncle James' life, and—just fancy!—would ruin mine if I let her. It actually hints—but here, read it yourself."

She thrust the letter across to him and watched, on tenterhooks, while he ran through its amazing contents.

Laying the communication aside, but still glancing at it, Tommy answered with truth that her grandfather sounded a mixture of Jeremiah, Cassandra on a bad day, and the ghost in "Hamlet."

"With a spice of individual venom thrown in. Yes, I'd say one assertion he's made might constitute grounds for a legal action."

"You mean where he accuses Boggie of causing her husband's heart attack on purpose so she could have his money to herself?"

"Exactly. And what does she say to it?"

"Boggie? She doesn't know. Do you imagine I'd let her see a thing like this?"

Suddenly he realized the reason for her acute anxiety, and hastened to remove it.

"And you've been afraid I also might get wrong notions? Don't worry. Even if you aunt were a different woman from the one I judge her to be, I shouldn't dream of connecting her with her husband's death. Your Uncle James, by all accounts, was likely to die very soon in any case. It would have been taking a stupid risk to hurry things."

"Naturally. O, thank God, you take a sensible view!"

"As for the rest of this tosh," Tommy went on, "just look at the facts for a moment. Thus far your aunt has been the sufferer, not you, and whatever the explanation, she happens to be the one person who can't possibly benefit by any family death except your grandfather's. If the lot of you died tonight, Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce would still inherit only her husband's portion of the estate—and only the income, at that. I've found this out from examining your great-grandfather's will. So you see, she's automatically cleared of all suspicion."

"This letter," she said slowly, "reached me about a month ago. On the very next Sunday I went down to Sussex, and without saying anything to daddy, sneaked up to Black Gables. I meant to have it out face to face with my grandfather. My blood was up."

"And——?"

"I didn't see him. The nurse who's been his dragon bodyguard for seven years quite literally turned me out of the house. O, she was most plausible! She declared my grandfather had taken a turn for the worse; but that same afternoon I met your brother, Dr. Rostetter, and he told me grandfather's solicitor had been down during the morning for a business conference. So I wondered—as we've all wondered, at times—whether this nurse didn't exceed her instructions. There's simply no way of knowing. And then, since these awful things have been happening in Victoria Grove, I keep asking myself how could my grandfather predict calamities, unless——" she picked up the bitten marron and examined it. "Unless he meant them to happen?"

"But why should he want them to happen?" objected Tommy.

Rosemary shrugged. "You might ask that about any of his actions toward us. He might want to punish Boggie for an imagined evil deed. Warning me to leave her might be done to prevent my running into her danger—or to remove a damaging witness. But," she added, frowning, "I also asked myself if my grandfather really did write this letter? His signature might have been traced. I thought of it again this afternoon when I ran bolt into Nurse Claiborne coming out of a dressmaker's in South Audley street. She was just getting into my grandfather's car."

Tommy gave sharper attention.

"The woman who barred you out? Tell me this: Is she young, good looking?"

"Neither, especially. Very hard, highly efficient."

"How long has she been in town?" asked Tommy pointedly.

"Whitechurch, the chauffeur, told me she came up last Wednesday to be with her mother, who's ill. It was his saying Wednesday that made me sit up; and it seems my grandfather really is sinking rapidly. He's got a night nurse now, otherwise Claiborne wouldn't be away. I can't quite see her firing revolvers at us, still less disguising herself as a man and knocking Boggie out—though she's strong enough, heaven knows. Does it sound very silly? She was wearing an awfully posh silver fox—and South Audley street's high stepping for a nurse. There was I, bareheaded, clutching gin bottles. She gave me such a glare; but she'd a funny look in her eye. You say you've seen that will. Is there any possible way that Boggie's dying could make a difference to my grandfather?"

Tommy took out the notebook in which he had jotted down the main points of the entail and read out what he had written. The estate left by James Luther Bellamy-Pryce took the form of a closely guarded trust—no capital to be released till the third generation.

"Which is you. I gather. No other great-grandchildren, I suppose?"

"I'm the one and only. Well?"

THE will had been drawn up after the birth of Osmund's four sons. In accordance with its terms neither Osmund, sole direct heir, nor his children in their turn, could enjoy more than a life interest in income derived from property largely invested in the tea business. At Osmund's death this income was to be apportioned among the legitimate offspring and the widow, if surviving. The distribution was to be equal, unless some of the sons took on the business, in which event the son so electing would receive considerably more than his co-heirs. The death of any of Osmund's sons would increase by redistribution the income of his brothers, but the childless widow of a son would, at Osmund's decease, receive only that portion of which her husband would have been heir at the time of his death. Thus Boggie, having no children, was now due to receive an income on one-third of the estate.

"That's plain enough, isn't it? Your grandmother predeceased her husband. So did your mother. Now, then! If a childless widow dies her income reverts. . . . Hold on, though. Does it revert? By Jove, here's something I'd overlooked."

Tommy bent over his scribbled notes. He must yesterday have been hypnotized by the obviousness of Gavin's motive to have paid so little attention to this altering clause. He looked up suddenly.

"That's odd. If Boggie dies before either your father or your uncle, her income is divided between them; but supposing she dies while your grandfather also is alive, the capital from which her income is derived is set free, and four-fifths of it passes to——"

"To whom?" demanded Rosemary tensely.

"Why, to your grandfather! Here, let's have another look at that letter. . . ."

Wednesday morning, nine-forty. Brackham place washed clean by a night of rain, and inside the hat shop three yawning maidens rehashing yesterday's foray.

Rosemary was ruminating depressedly over Boggie's strangely irritable manner last night.

She cast her mind back to the moment when, having said good-by to Tommy, she had entered the dark hall, and not bothering about lights started up the stairs. All at once the door at the top had opened, and a voice so hoarse she had scarcely recognized it had called down, "Who's there?"

It was the combined anger and fear of the tone which had startled her into momentary speechlessness.

"Me, of course. Why, what did you think?"

"You!"

The anticipated chuckle had not come. Instead there had been a pregnant pause.

"Indeed! And have you any notion what time it is?"

"Late, isn't it? Nearly one. We got talking, and——"

"We?" Boggie had interrupted in sharp anxiety.

"Why, yes, Tommy and I. He gave me dinner at Scott's. Is there anything wrong about it?"

For a second Boggie had stood there gripping the balustrade with her firm, cushioned hands and breathing with difficulty.

"After this afternoon," she had said, "anything might have happened. I should have imagined you'd appreciate the state of mind I'd be in."

With this cutting reproof Boggie had gone back into her room and banged—yes, banged the door behind her.

Boggie at breakfast time had been her usual serene self, and her father, as they had found out by telephoning the hotel, was perfectly safe. . . .

The earl of Hollings entered.

"Ro, my sweet," he said, "where are you going, with the blood all oozing from your finger? Is it where he bit you?"

Not troubling to reply, Rosemary removed a splinter of glass from her hand, pushed Lord Hollings aside, and disappeared into the back room. From the inner regions Rosemary called out.

"I can't get this door open? Why's that, I wonder?"

"It's locked, darling," answered Lord Hollings. "Which door?"

"The lavatory door, you ass. How could it be locked? It's got wedged somehow, from inside. Come help me shove, can't you?"

Grumbling Lord Hollings rose and lounged to her assistance.

The obstruction behind the door gave suddenly. Rosemary and Lord Hollings tumbled headlong over that which blocked the tiny floor space within. One gasped, the other turned a faint pea-green and slumped where he stood. The two girls came running, took one look, and shrieked.

Before them, back stiffly arched, grinning mouth upturned, lay Mrs. Clover, stone dead.

Tommy, over his breakfast coffee, studied again the letter handed him the night before. The phraseology, Rosemary had said, was typical; the signature? With the aid of a reading glass he fancied he could detect a faint doubling of the down strokes. He, however, was no expert. Headcorn must see this and decide if the matter was worth following up.

He had just dug from his pocket a crumpled handkerchief he had found in the car and was holding it shamefacedly against his nose when the telephone rudely shattered his day dream. What he heard over the wire sent him speeding, stern eyed, to Brackham place to meet, on the very doorstep of Anatol's, Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce, just going in. She greeted him with her broad smile.

"Well met!" she said breezily. "I've come to buy that hat. Didn't feel like it yesterday. She recoiled a little as a six foot, youthful police constable blocked the entrance.

Rosemary appeared, her face chalk-white.

"It's my aunt and a friend," she explained evenly. "Please let them in. No, Boggie, that's only David." For Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce, now inside, was staring goggle eyed at the prostrate young man stretched in her path. "He passed out, but he's coming round. The trouble's over there. It's Clover; but don't look. It's not nice to see."

Boggie did look, uttered a smothered cry, and sank heavily on one of the mirrored stools. A doctor, bending over, glanced up and resumed his scrutiny of the woman's body, clad in rusty black and calico apron, which occupied the center foreground. Tommy went close.

"Strychnine, I suppose?" he asked in a low voice.

"O, certainly!" The doctor muttered the words without raising his head. "A thumping big dose of it, too. Must have died very quickly, ten to twelve hours ago, I'd say. Where she got hold of the stuff is another question."

"All empty, I noticed, but you can look to make sure. There was a bit left in some of the glasses. I dumped it all in the ice bucket."

The constable produced the ice bucket. It was empty and clean. He replaced it, and disappeared for a moment, to return with a small glass held in gingerly fashion by its stem.

"What about this?" he asked. "On the shelf above the wash basin it was. Seems sticky inside."

It was a glass slightly larger than the ones now washed and ranged in rows on a table. It was also of better quality, with a line of cutting round the bowl. They all stared hard at it. Rosemary had begun to frown when a gulping sound drew the company's eyes in her aunt's quarter. Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce's color had gone blotched and her fingers were picking clumsily at her lips.

"Anything wrong, madam?" inquired the constable, and then, as the object of his interest remained mutely gazing: "Pardon me, but were you present as well?"

She murmured confusedly: "Yes—O, yes, I came. Don't mind me; it's nothing." She fumbled for her handkerchief and mopped her brow. "You say this glass was on the . . . the shelf?"

"In the lavatory—where the body was lying." The constable sniffed at the glass and handed it to the doctor. "Smells like gin."

The doctor stopped his long nose over the glass and made a sour face.

"And strychnine," he said shortly. "Analysis will show it; but that's not my affair."

Tommy took the constable aside and informed him that Inspector Headcorn, from Scotland Yard, would be in charge of the case, and that when he arrived it would be well for him to have a private word with Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce.

"Inspector Headcorn, sir?" The young officer pricked up his ears. "You mean you've got in touch with him yourself?"

"As soon as I heard." Tommy kept his voice low. "But don't noise it about. I'm going to take the two ladies I've referred to somewhere near by. The inspector will want to interview all three of us, but not in public, I think." He turned to Rosemary, who had come within earshot. "Where could we go? Your aunt is looking rather faint."

Rosemary understood. Boggie had something to say but was unwilling to utter a syllable before the others.

"We'd better get her along to David's. His place will be quiet, and it's only two doors below."

Tommy advised the constable as to where they would be found when wanted, and offered Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce his arm. In the decorating establishment no one was visible. Boggie subsided onto a regency sofa.

"I know where David keeps his whisky," Rosemary said in a leaden tone. "Shall I fetch her a drink?"

"Drink!" Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce shook her head with repugnance. "Don't let's speak of it. I'm quite all right. It did give me rather a turn, but it's quite over now."

Very quietly Tommy said, "That was your glass, I take it?"

She hesitated and gave a nod, but avoided his eyes.

"Y-yes, so it was. Or one exactly like it." She moistened her lips. "It had neat gin in it. After a . . . a certain thing happened I felt decidedly wonky. There was no brandy, and I didn't dare risk any more mixtures. So I just poured myself a little plain gin. You saw me do it, didn't you?" she appealed to her niece, who did not seem to hear her. "O, well, perhaps you didn't. You were very busy at the time."

"You didn't drink it, of course," pursued Tommy. "I suppose you set it down and forgot about it?"

"Must have done. There was so much confusion. . . . I do certainly remember setting down the glass when I saw my brother-in-law leaving; and I noticed, I don't know why, that it was different from the others. A scrap larger, with cutting round it. Rather a good glass. There must be more like it?"

A poignant silence, and then: "There aren't," said Rosemary detachedly. "It's an odd one that belongs to the countess; all the plain ones were hired."

Before more could be said Inspector Headcorn pushed open the street door and moved across the thick gray carpet. Tommy, thinking it wiser to leave him alone with Mrs. Bellamy-Pryce, withdrew to a distance. Rosemary touched his arm and beckoned with her head. In another moment the two of them had slipped quietly out of the shop and with one accord were moving toward the corner.

A small group composed of errand boys, the waitresses from the Snuggery, and three children sucking lollypops stood gazing ghoulishly at the hat window. It was temporarily dispersed by the arrival of a taxi which hurtled up and set down a woman in black whose slenderness seemed wrought of steel wires. It was Countess Rakovsky.

Social Corps Takes to Sea in Dash to Rio

By Cousin Eve.

"A-rolling down to Rio," says the gay nautical song, and some of our most shining stars sailed yesterday on the Normandie for points south and Brazil, land of the armadillo. Mrs. James Ward Thorne and her sister, Mrs. Alden Swift; Mrs. Ralph Shaw and her daughter, Louise Steinwedel of Cleveland; Mrs. Jacob Baur, and Mrs. Edward F. Carry are on this dash to the southern hemisphere. Katharine Linn of New York and Mrs. Emma Patten Hoyt also are aboard.

Several of these passengers are friends of the American ambassador, Jefferson Caffery, who married Miss Gertrude McCarthy of Chicago at Rio in November. The Cafferys, however, are not yet established in the magnificent new American embassy, but their hospitality will be none the less warm and cordial, for life has been a series of great diplomatic parties since their wedding day in the luxurious house where they live temporarily.

A fascinating book that keeps one reading late o' nights is Hugh Gibson's "Rio," written when he was lately envoy to Brazil and an enthusiast in the physical and historical wonders of his post.

In spite of glamorous cruises, this is my favorite time of year in Chicago. One really sees one's playmates. New visitors and new things to do are popping up daily like rabbits out of a magician's hat. Next on the spot, Philip Guedalla coming on from Hollywood, and our highest brows are agitated as to who is mentally up to meeting him. Dr. William Nitze, I believe, solves the question by taking this British lion for a week-end in the country en famille.

Last Sunday night there was a delightful show at the Saddle and Cycle when 150 came out to a good buffet supper. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Loesch and the Fletcher Durbins had the largest parties. Afterward Robert Stevenson introduced, in his nice way, Capt. Warwick Tompkins, who had a tale to unfold. Also marvelous pictures to show of a trip round the Horn in his schooner yacht with his pretty young wife at the wheel.

Their two small youngsters were frolicsome as squirrels in the film, in such pictures of wind and wave as landlubbers seldom see. The South Atlantic as pictured by the yachtsman was certainly a nasty bit of sea.

This Tompkins evening was such a hit that the Saddle may engage the navigator later on for some magnificent colored slides of the Hawaiian group.

One of the great excitements of the week was the Grove house benefit at the Apollo, when the movie "In Old Chicago" was shown. The Grove house benefits are always fashionable. This private hostel for convalescent women was founded in 1905 by Mrs. Hermon Butler and Mrs. James L. Houghteling, who bought a house in the country which is now well inside Evanston. The first board included also Mrs. Arthur T. Galt, Mrs. Morton Butler, and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson.

The present day president of Grove house and chairman of the highly successful benefit is Mrs. John M. Butler, daughter-in-law of Mrs. Hermon Butler. This ever has been a popular charity, and the audience was dotted with leaders of Chicago society, the conservatives whose names are written large in Chicago history. Mrs. Frederick West was there, Mrs. Cyrus Bentley, Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick, Mrs. Wentworth Field, the Wallers, the Dicks, Mr. and Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Col. and Mrs. Langhorne, the Walter Brewsters, and several hundred others.

The Historical society, which owes its beautiful early American brick building in Lincoln park to Charles Burrall Pike, its president, has been quiescent during his long illness of the winter. Now, however, he is better and on Feb. 8 in the evening there will be a reception of import to Americans who love Italy. The Italian consul general, Franco Fontana, will present a delegation of Italians bearing gifts from Italy to the Historical society, trophies of the great war. They do things awfully well up there and it is sure to be a good party with music, Italian ices and lots of gold lace, gleaming white teeth, and shining black eyes.

The Visiting Nurse association had its annual meeting Thursday at the Historical society in the large hall, and the officers were afraid nobody would come. But this year everybody goes to everything, and 400 active members showed up to see Mrs. Robert Gardner reëlected. It was the finest, most enthusiastic meeting they've had in years.

The Visiting Nurse association was founded forty-seven years ago, in the drawing room of Mrs. William C. Conger, who died at Christmas time. She had never missed an annual meeting and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson are maintaining a nurse for one year in her memory. The association, to honor her memory permanently, is changing the name of the Humboldt station to "The Emily Lyon Conger station," a tribute to one who really cared.

The tea tables were gloriously set with small cakes bearing the Visiting Nurse emblem, and the two youngest members seated at the silver urns, Mrs. John Bent and Mrs. James Douglas. At another table, set in the same chic style, were seated Mrs. Charles Edward Brown and Mrs. Morris Rosenfield, the two longest term members.

A week from tomorrow night, an operatic novelty of high rank comes to the Auditorium, the Salzburg guild. And the Eli Bates committee takes it over for a benefit. One pays $10 a seat at the opera in Salzburg, with Toscanini leading and this company singing, and here in our own home town, they come to us for much less. Miss Carol Bush is chairman of this great gala.

A wedding which took Chicago by surprise was John Wentworth's to Mrs. Mary Tilt Bartlett, last week at Sea Island, Ga. Mrs. Bartlett is one of Chicago's younger beauties, and she put her Bellevue place house in order and traveled down to the Georgia estate of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Tilt, for the wedding, without her closest friends being aware of the romance.

The new Mrs. John Wentworth should fill a high position in our town on every count. She is beautiful, accomplished, and charming, and her new husband has the delightful qualities of being genuine and interesting in himself. In addition, his fortune is large and the Wentworth mansion at 1240 Lake Shore drive, closed for a year or two, is one of the few great houses still owned by its builders, where the tempo of comfortable living never changed.

A military dinner in honor of Gen. and Mrs. Hugh Drum was given by Col. and Mrs. Charles Thuis in the lounge of the Lake Shore Drive hotel on Thursday night. The only people present who had no military handles to their names were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bernays and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, the others being highly attractive members of the new staf recently come out from Honolulu. In this stimulating company an engagement was whispered softly as being in the air—that of lovely young Edith Ann Corbin, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Clifford Corbin of Fort Shafter, to young Walter Dillingham, son of the Harold Dillinghams.

At Mrs. W. Alexander Yager's tea, the news was excellent, for it concerned the sizable debt owed by Passavant Hospital corporation on its magnificent building over in the Northwestern University center, near Lake Michigan.

Some benefactor has agreed to pay up this million dollar deficit, and in return the name of Patterson will go down in Chicago history over Passavant's gothic front door.

Mrs. Yager's apartment, famous for its decor of gold and silver, old world éblouissement of Savonnerie and Gobelins, and vivid satins and brocades, was the scene of a lively party, most of the guests being about to take off for Palm Beach, including the Yagers themselves.

The American Friends of China had an excellent time at Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick's tea in their honor. The hostess' large mansion at 20 Burton place was much en fête with flowers and guests, who were ushered at once into the dining room for tea, where Mrs. Chauncey Borland and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick Jr. were busy as possible pouring out tea in an uproar of conversation.

Mrs. William B. Hale presided in the absence of Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, and she presided well—for her words were apt and few. Present also was Miss Lucy Driscoll, secretary of "the Friends," there for the first time in a twelvemonth. She had taken a sabbatical two years away from the University of Chicago in order to make certain research in Peking, and was on her way thither when the unpleasantness with Japan broke loose. Having arrived with her mother as far as Moscow on her way, she spent several months inspecting the art collections and art movements of Russia, for they could get no further.

The speaker at this tea was Dr. Hu Shih, pronounced softly "Whoosh." His topic was "The Survival of Chinese Culture." A vital talk in accents of Harvard concerning a vital matter, the speaker discussed it with well bred simplicity. He believes that in the end China's geography will defeat the wholesale conquest by Japan.

Mrs. Hale announced that the next meeting of the society would be at Col. and Mrs. Langhorne's house on Feb. 18.

BRIDE OF WESTERNER

The wedding of Miss Ruth Eleanor Boylston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Boylston of Wilmette, to Edward Woodruff Gibbs, son of Mrs. O. R. Gibbs of Seattle, took place on Dec. 18. A reception held at the Shawnee Country club followed the ceremony.

Pasadena Gets First Glimpse of Springtime

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL.

Fuzzy pink splotches have been appearing this week and last about many Pasadena residences, which mean simply that spring is a month ahead of herself. Flowering peach, coaxed into early bloom, is out in profusion on the William Wrigley Jr. estate and there's a miniature tree in the more intimate inclosure at the William B. Harts' on Orange Grove avenue.

Spring brings with it, inevitably, too, the dog show. The Junior league plans its second annual show at Santa Anita as soon as the racing season closes in mid-March. An innovation and side attraction will be the puppet show in charge of Mrs. William Lake [Meredith Hanley].

Mrs. Lake and her committee are making the entire "cast" of the show and they boast of creating a clown who will throw a ball up with one hand and catch it with the other. Also helping are Mrs. Paul Buhlig, Mrs. Carl Alton, and Miss Theodosia Smith of the Chicago colony; Mrs. Addison Luce, who works miracles with costumes for Junior league productions; Mrs. Alvin Adams, in charge of "manipulation"; Mrs. Donald Hamblin, Mrs. William Schmidt, Mrs. Arthur Dayton, and other prominent leaguers.

The puppet show is to be repeated for the Children's Aid society, the Day nursery, and other groups, and will be used also to raise charity funds throughout the spring.

There was another canine exhibition of interest here and in Chicago, last Sunday, out on Wilshire boulevard, when the California Associated Specialty clubs put on their seventh annual dog show. Inevitably Mrs. D. Herbert Hostetter's beautiful Danes were shown and she, incidentally, is the club's president. Champion Guardian and Champion Grizelda of her Ridgerest kennels were there, along with some of Donald Hostetter's dachshunds.

Eugene B. Price, once of Sheridan road, planned a pleasant evening for a large company of his friends last week at Annandale Golf club. Forty-two guests were seated about dinner tables artistically appointed with masses of pink roses and pale blue delphinium down the center. Later all adjourned to the lounge for bridge.

Chicagoans were preëminent on the guest list. They included his sister-in-law, Miss Maria W. Little, and Mrs. Thomas Gordon, sister of I. Newton Perry of Lake Forest, who reside together in South Pasadena; also the George Marcys from Hotel Huntington, the George A. Schofields, Paul Richters, J. Allan Joys, Mrs. William C. Free, Mrs. Ethel Carpenter, Mrs. James Fletcher Skinner, Mrs. Cora Auten Baxter, and Alex Banks.

Winter visitors soon to arrive will be Mr. and Mrs. William Shippen Jenks, according to Mrs. Jenks' brother, Edwin S. Gillette, who looks for them by the middle of the month.

Among those who have come this week are Mrs. E. D. Hulbert, Mrs. Homer A. Stillwell, the Sanford Vaughans of Oak Park, the N. G. Coles, Mrs. Warren G. Dennis, the G. Russell Leonards, and James McVittie, who are at the Huntington; Mrs. Edgar McCullough of Lake Forest and Mrs. F. M. Cross of Wilmette, at the Vista, and Miss Eleanor J. Pellett at the Green.

Mrs. A. W. Raymond has returned from a visit in Winnetka with her daughter, Mrs. D. W. Mercer, and will be here with her other daughter, Mrs. Harry A. Mayhew, in the Linda Vista section.

Robert W. Campbell, who has adopted Pasadena, also has been adopted by local citizens and they have made him president of the Pasadena Community chest for the ensuing year.

His daughter, Mrs. Edward S. Clark, was hostess a few days ago at a luncheon for more than a dozen guests honoring Mrs. W. Carol Wilson Alton, who with her husband moved to Pasadena from Evanston last year. They are located at 1497 Lombardy road.

Today the Pasadena Society of Artists holds its exhibit and formal reception, an annual event, from 2 until 6 o'clock in the Grace Nicholson galleries, and among the members who will be represented are John Stacy and Anna Lee Stacy, recently here from Chicago, and Marion Kavanagh Wachtel, another ex-Chicagoan.

Announcement is made of the marriage yesterday of Mrs. Catharine Donaldson Mallory of Santa Barbara, formerly Mrs. Earl P. Mallory of Chicago, to Francis Eldred Boland of San Francisco. The wedding took place at 7:30 o'clock last night at the Town house in Los Angeles, the Rev. Hugh McLean of Santa Barbara officiating. A dinner for relatives and intimate friends followed the ceremony.

The bride's attendants were Patricia Chapman and Irvin Cobb Brady, grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin S. Cobb. Mr. Boland's best man was Douglas L. 40 Clubs Join in Sponsoring Stevenson Memorial Benefit

Among the benefit events that loom large on this week's calendar is a card party to be given Tuesday by the 40 women's organizations interested in the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial at 2412 Prairie avenue. More than 1,000 reservations already have been received for the party, which will take place at 2:30 o'clock in the Boulevard room of the Stevens hotel.

Mrs. Arthur Jackson, chairman of the memorial committee of the Chicago Woman's club, is in charge of arrangements for the party. That club is among the 40 women's groups contributing to the support of the lodging house for destitute women and children.

Mrs. Earl R. Reynolds.

The Illinois Club for Catholic Women will raise funds for the treatment of needy tuberculous patients in their homes through proceeds of a card party Friday evening in the grand ballroom of the Knickerbocker hotel. Mrs. George J. Aste is general chairman, and Mrs. Earl R. Reynolds, Mrs. William O'Connell, Miss M. Louise Jones, Mrs. John Lavecchia, and Mrs. Harry Powers are among those assisting with arrangements.

Another benefit at the Knickerbocker will be a bridge tea which the Juniors of the Protestant Women's Service Club will give at 2 o'clock Friday to raise funds for their charities. Miss Charlotte Hartman is general chairman of the committee in charge.

The annual philanthropy card party of the Woman's Organization of the Chicago Retail Druggists' Association will take place at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday at the Medinah club.

Mrs. C. Robert Swinehart.

Through its annual benefit bridge party Saturday at the Medinah club the Chicago Alumnæ Club of Alpha Gamma Delta will raise funds to help support the Alpha Gamma Delta summer camps for underprivileged children at Jackson, Mich., and Welland, Ont., Canada. Members of the sorority do all the work at these camps, which annually care for 800 children. Mrs. C. Robert Swinehart, president of the Chicago club, is working on arrangements, together with Miss Evelyn Armour, Miss Eleanor Anderson, Mrs. D. G. Malone, and Miss Kathryn Kirn.

The Campion Mothers' club will give its annual card party for the benefit of the school's chapel fund at 2 o'clock tomorrow in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

The auxiliary of the St. Rose social center and kindergarten, 308 West 25th street, is holding its 17th annual grocery shower this afternoon in the new gymnasium of the center.

The Sisters of St. Mary of Providence conduct the establishment. Five hundred girls attend sewing classes, and there are classes in girl scouting, citizenship, English, and other subjects. Hot meals also are provided for needy children. Mrs. Emma Huising Wall is chairman of the shower. Mrs. Mary Whalen heads the auxiliary.

Yacht Mizpah Sails Today on Ocean Cruise

By Clarissa Greene.

MIAMI, FLA. A member of the youngest social set is embarking on a cruise typical of the many now luring palatial yachts from their moorings in Biscayne bay. This diminutive mariner is little Marianne McDonald. She and her mother were joined Thursday by Commander Eugene F. McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Herriot, who will be guests on the Mizpah when it quits port today for an eight weeks' sojourn at sea.

Also aboard the Mizpah during this cruise through equatorial waters and down the east coast of South America to the Orinoco river, up which the yacht will make an exploratory voyage, are Dr. and Mrs. Leonard E. Keeler. Probably the Otto Eitels will go as far as Havana.

While awaiting the arrival of her husband Mrs. Eitel has been Mrs. McDonald's guest aboard the Mizpah.

Completing the party are Dr. Hiram Hawley of Syracuse, Col. Pedro Hiribarne of Havana, and young Gene Kinney, Commander McDonald's nephew, who is realizing every schoolboy's dream as he leaves classes behind in Buffalo to become an initiate of that select fellowship into which Father Neptune will welcome him and others aboard, who will be experiencing their first crossing of the equator.

Delighting in the strange and lovely names on the charts for this cruise, Mrs. McDonald is anticipating most the Mizpah's visits to out of the way and rarely frequented parts, she confided to friends on the eve of departure. There will be, for instance, the Island of Saba, an extinct volcano crater where, lacking any port, the Mizpah will be obliged to lay in on the leeward side of the island. To reach the town, which lies inside the crater, members of the party must cover the distance in baskets pulled on cables.

Garden parties of major proportions vie with important sports events throughout the season. Outstanding is the annual event held at Harbel villa, ocean front home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, when the Community church of Miami Beach stages its seventh annual garden fête. Mrs. Lonsdale B. Green is a member of the gift tree committee.

An outstanding event of yesterday was the Longview garden party given at the botanical garden in the lovely house recently presented to the University of Miami by W. T. Grant. Among patronesses for this garden tea, also an annual event, were Mrs. Chauncey McCormick and Mrs. Fred A. Poor.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis E. White have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grayson in Cocoanut Grove between cruises which they made to the West Indies.

Mary Loretta Snite, whose marriage to Terrence Dillon will be an event of Tuesday, is being complimented by a series of prenuptial parties, prominent among them being a luncheon and swimming party at the Nautilus Cabana club, given by Kathryn Glavin of Miami Beach and Escanaba, Mich.; a dinner party at the Whitman, at which Mary Kathryn Kotte was hostess; another luncheon and afternoon at the races arranged by Virginia Ragen; a cocktail party by Ernest Winston, and a luncheon by Mrs. Alexander Winston at the Surf club, where, incidentally, the wedding breakfast is to be held.

Races at beautiful Hialeah continue to occupy a major position in social life. The park, as a proving ground for spectator sports apparel, new colors, and amazing hats, has no competition.

Only an event such as the opening of the Colony club in Palm Beach is of sufficient importance to lure Mrs. Warren Wright from her box, where she recently entertained Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, Mrs. John S. Knight, and the latter's sister, Mrs. Edwin Ford of Winnetka.

Guests of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars in her box on the occasion of her second day at Hialeah this season were A. S. Brown of New York and M. A. Feeney of Pulaski. That same afternoon Mr. and Mrs. John C. Clark had as their guests at luncheon and for a box party afterward Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. McCulloch.

With Col. Joseph E. Widener and Mrs. P. A. B. Widener II. of Palm Beach in their box were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Field. Also hostesses at a luncheon party were Mrs. George E. Van Hagen and Miss Elizabeth Van Hagen.

Mrs. Charles Winston of Joliet, who has just arrived to be the house guest of Mrs. Edgar Ingleheart and Mrs. Owen McMahon, was the especial guest at a luncheon given by Mrs. E. Mead Johnson. With Dr. and Mrs. William T. Gilman were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Weller, while in the box of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan were Mrs. E. M. Meder and Mrs. James C. Cox.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Savage, who are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J Fisher aboard their yacht Nakhoda, were with Mr. Fisher at the races last week.

Last Sunday was a particularly full day on the calendar of Mr. and Mrs. George Hughes and their daughter, Mrs. Grant Call, who has been a guest for several weeks at the home of her parents in Coral Gables. After entertaining with a luncheon party and an afternoon cruise, they attended the brilliant reception given by Dr. and Mrs. Bowman F. Ashe for Mr. and Mrs. Hervey Allen, Gregory Piatigorsky, and Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Baker.

Mrs. J. A. Mudd Jr. arrived Tuesday with her two children, Anita and Charles, for a four months' visit with her mother-in-law, Mrs. J. A. Mudd Sr. Mr. Mudd will be down later this month.

Also scheduled to return the latter part of the month is Dr. M. S. Mazelle. He and his wife have recently purchased a home on Indian creek. With them are their daughter, Zelda, and their son, Maurice Georges.

Mrs. Inez S. McKeown of Hubbard Woods has with her in the new home she recently purchased in Miami Shores her father and mother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John C. McKeown. They plan to remain here until the 1st of May. Mrs. McKeown is a newcomer to Miami, having wintered previously in Daytona Beach.

ON CARIBBEAN CRUISE

Mrs. Warner G. Vaughan was Miss Ruth Anne McElvain until her marriage on Dec. 19. She is the daughter of James W. McElvain, Aurora. Mrs. Vaughan attended Northwestern university. Mr. Vaughan was graduated from the engineering school of the University of Michigan. After a cruise to the West Indies, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan will live in Philadelphia.

PALM BEACH, FLA. Additional social ballast adding permanency to the Chicago colony at Palm Beach is the announcement that Sterling Morton has purchased 176 feet of ocean front directly south of the Wolcott Blair villa. And Palm Beach harbors visions of another handsome estate which, like Marathon, will "look on the sea." Moreover, those with an ear to the ground also hear that Mr. and Mrs. William E. Clow Jr. have acquired a nice bit of property, and that David Adler, architect of their Lake Forest house, is busy with plans for a Palm Beach domicile.

The exhibit at the Society of Four Arts draws interested crowds. Nicolas de Molas is staging a one-man show on the lower floor. Pictures lent by Chicagoans include "The Wheeler Boys at Lake Forest," lent by Mrs. Leslie Wheeler; "The Spiegel Family at Highland Park," lent by F. W. Spiegel, and one of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Armour and family, lent by Mr. Armour.

On the afternoon of the preview and tea, Palm Beach was in the throes of one of its annual "unprecedented cold spells" and long white coats with flattering white fox collars were much in evidence. Some had even unearthed heavier furs and many chuckled over the mingled aromas of moth balls and coffee.

On Thursday the Four Arts opened an exhibition of exquisite needlework and laces, lent by members of the society, and arranged by Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy of Chicago. This exhibit is on the upper floor, where there is also a showing of crafts, jewelry and silver, and oil paintings. On Thursday De Molas conducted visitors through the gallery, giving an explanation of his conversation paintings.

Jason F. Whitney, president of the Chicago Opera company, and Mrs. Whitney; Paul Longone, director, and Mrs. Longone were entertained by Mrs. F. O. Butler Thursday night with a dinner at the Seminole club.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth G. Smith are returning on Sunday after a visit to Chicago. Col. and Mrs. Robert H. Morse have returned to their Dunbar avenue villa after a short stay in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. George Randall of Chicago have as their guests at their villa on Coconut row the Countess Yvonne St. Cyr of Paris, Edward F. Wilson of Chicago, and E. Hall Taylor of Oak Park. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Taylor will go on to Nassau next week to board the Normandie on its cruise to Rio. Mr. and Mrs. Randall entertained their guests on Thursday with a cocktail party at the Everglades club.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Driver of Kenilworth are at the Brazilian Court.

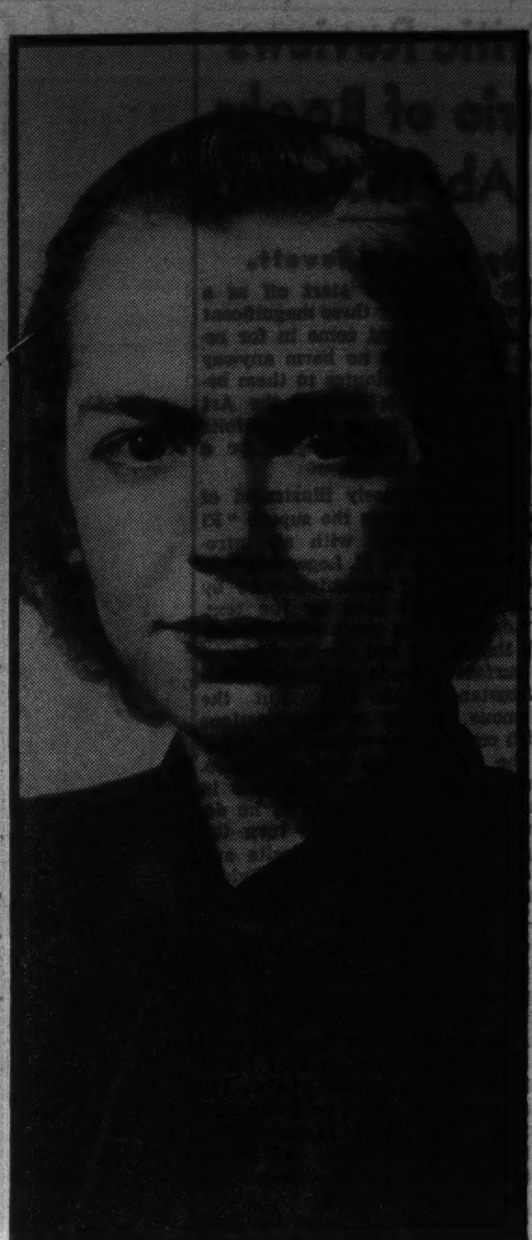
Mr. and Mrs. George Rich are expected this week-end. They are flying in from Phoenix and arrive at Miami airport Sunday night. For the present they will be guests of Mrs. Rich's aunt, Mrs. James H. Kennedy of Boston. Mrs. Kennedy will be hostess on Tuesday of next week at a large reception for them.

On Wednesday night society here was a house divided against itself, some going to the Miami Symphony concert at the Paramount theater, and others to the Everglades club, where a wheel chair race was the attraction. Others dashed from the concert and were able to share in some of the fun.



SHE'S PLANNING TO WED

Miss Mary Jane Fawell's engagement to Joseph R. Buell Jr., was announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Fawell of Highland Park, on New Year's day. Mr. Buell's father is J. R. Buell of Glen Ellyn.

Critic Reviews Trio of Books About Artists

By Eleanor Jewett.

This might easily start off as a literary Sunday, for three magnificent art books have just come in for review. It would do no harm anyway to devote a few minutes to them before turning to a tour of the Art institute [with those new exhibits which opened Friday night] or a round of the galleries.

The most profusely illustrated of the three volumes is the superb "El Greco" [Hyperion] with an introductory chapter by M. Legendre. "El Greco" must be evaluated more by the illustrations than by the text. M. Legendre has dealt very shortly with the painter and merely skimmed the surface of those conditions which circumstanced his life. But the enormous number of reproductions which compose the volume give voice to the genius that was El Greco. The reproductions are excellent in quality and leave nothing to be desired in quantity. As we turn the pages we find a few portraits and then a vast number of religious paintings.

The second book, "Degas," by Camille Mauclair [also published by the Hyperion Press], is possibly the richer and more intriguing of the two, if for no other than the fact that where El Greco painted saints and the Virgin, Degas painted the race track, the ballet, portraits, and figures. The many reproductions, both in color and black and white, give a deeply interesting view of the life of the last century.

The discussion of Degas by Mauclair has been happily followed by a selection of letters written by Degas himself. The combination of the two is a joyful circumstance and gives us a clearer portrait of the artist than either alone could have vouchsafed Having read the prelude and the letters, one turns to the pictures with an intelligent understanding of the personality of the man who pointed them. They take on fresh life. For themselves they are charming; with our deeper knowledge they increase in significance, the deeper qualities they possess rise to the surface, and we stand tense in the presence of one of those men who made history almost in our own lifetime.

The third volume to have come in is "Giovanni Di Paolo" by John Pope-Hennessy [Oxford University Press], with 32 pages of plates. This is more of a book for the art enthusiast. The text is lengthy and instructive, more suitable, perhaps, to a student of early Italian art than to the dilettante who enjoys flirting with culture.

The story of Giovanni Di Paolo is interwoven with a detailed recital of his various works. Toward the end of his life the school or studio of which he was master put its mark upon a great deal of work, detracting from the essential quality which has come to be recognized as his. At his best Giovanni Di Paolo used a tight, precise technique that had very charming results. The primitive elements in his painting will appeal immensely to our modern art devotees. Mr. Pope-Hennessy has succeeded admirably in bringing a 15th century painter out of the shadows.

Three important exhibitions opened Friday evening at the Art institute. Paintings and drawings by Giambattista and Domenico Tiepolo are installed in several of the galleries of the east wing and in others are an exhibit of works by Nicolas Remisoff and a comprehensive exhibition of Swedish art.

The Swedish exhibit is divided into three parts. In the first part may be found those things which belong to the earliest art of Sweden, and by art the crafts are meant, as well as paintings and sculpture. From the Viking period come brooches, breastplates, buckles, shields, battle axes, swords, and other objects in flint, iron, copper, bronze, and gold. Among them are several treasures from the State Historical museum in Stockholm, such as a gold necklace and a unique wooden drinking horn. Two rune stones, said to be the first ever to be shown in America, are included.

The second section of the exhibit consists of antique peasant art, textiles, painted furniture, household implements, and peasant paintings, such as are to be found on the walls of Dalecarlian homes. Here, too, may be seen paintings by Anders Zorn.

The third division contains oil paintings by prominent Swedish artists from the middle of the 17th century to the end of the 19th. Among these are works by Zorn, Carl Larsson, Bruno Liljefors, and H. R. H. Prince Eugene, a brother of King Gustaf and regarded as Sweden's foremost contemporary landscape painter.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Swedish-American Tercentenary association, which is showing it in the larger cities throughout the Unted States.

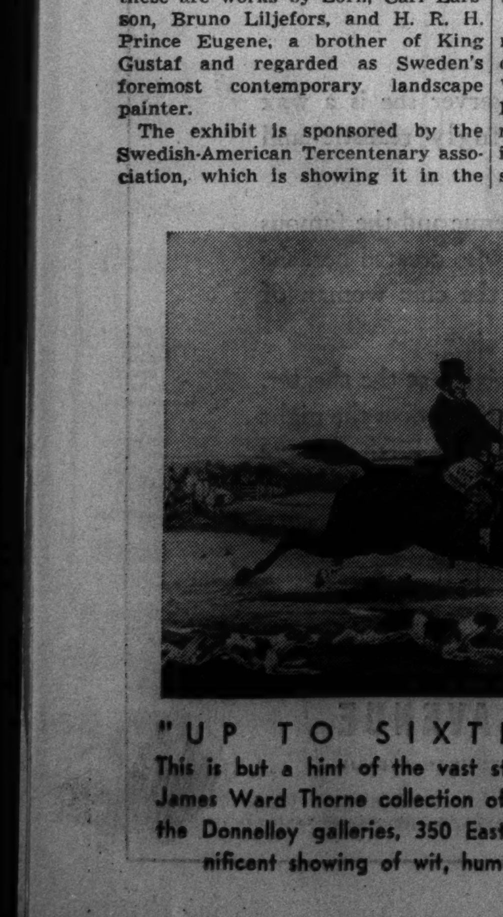
Meanwhile, to keep in touch with the work being done by Swedish-American artists of today on this side of the Atlantic, it is only necessary to go to the Club Women's bureau, Mandel Brothers, where an attractive exhibit of paintings and sculpture is current to Feb. 12. Among the painters whose work you will enjoy are Minnie A. Carlson, Thomas Hall, Cecil Larson, Linus Axel, Carl T. Linden, Mary C. Peterson, Carl Wallin, Gustaf Dalstrom, and Grace Spongberg.

The Hoosier salon in the Marshall Field galleries is one of the exhibitions no one should miss, were it only for the stunning portraits by Wayman Adams and the special room of water colors. But there are more things of interest than these present. The exhibition is remarkably full of brilliant and intriguing work.

No matter what you may miss, do not overlook the unusual exhibit of color aquatints loaned by Mrs. James Ward Thorne and on view in the Donnelley galleries, 350 East Cermak road. If one were going in for capitals it might be described as THE show of the month.



"UP TO SIXTEEN STONE"
This is but a hint of the vast store of treasures in the Mrs. James Ward Thorne collection of color aquatints on exhibit in the Donnelley galleries, 350 East Cermak road, a truly magnificent showing of wit, humor, and draughtsmanship.

Works of Goya and Walter Gay Contrasted in Paris Exhibition

By May Birkhead.

PARIS In spite of many thing to worry about, the educated public in Paris always can be counted on to attend a good art exhibition. It so happens that amateurs are well served at the moment by the display being given at the Museum of the Orangerie. Curiously enough, while the main show is devoted to Goya, it is eked out from the handiwork and collection of an American painter, the late Walter Gay, whose view of life forms a striking contrast to Goya's.

When an art exhibition of this limited type is arranged here, the organizers cast about for a name. The present one is called Paintings by Goya from collections in France. About half a dozen of the smaller provincial museums have several Goyas, and among private collectors represented in the show are several Americans who have long been identified with Paris. A striking portrait of a matador from the Arthur Sachs collection has a reduced replica, it is believed, in the Charles Deering collection in Chicago. Another American who lent one of the principal canvases to this showing is Forsyth Wickes of New York and Paris.

Goya admirers will be somewhat surprised that some of the smaller provincial museums in France should have so many specimens of this amazing artist's best period.

For many years the late Walter Gay was looked upon as the dean of American artists in France. Every one who followed the things of art knows his delicate craftsmanship, with its preference for subdued interiors, an art so much appreciated that examples of it are to be found in scores of public and private collections in both Europe and America.

His widow has not only presented, within the last two weeks, much of Mr. Gay's work to the Louvre, but she also has given to France, as her husband requested, the wonderful treasures which Walter Gay collected during sixty years, and which include drawings by the greatest masters, among them Watteau, Gainsborough, and others.

Poles Will Give Dance in Honor of Kosciuszko

By Betty Browning.

To patriotic Americans February is memorable for the birthdays of Washington and Lincoln. In the minds of Chicago's thousands of citizens of Polish descent the month also is associated with the birthday of Kosciuszko, the hero of whom Byron wrote, "—— freedom shrieked when Kosciuszko fell."

Feb. 12, birthday of Kosciuszko as well as of Lincoln, is the date appropriately chosen for the second annual "Night in Poland" ball to be held by the Kosciuszko Foundation in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

Since its inception twelve years ago, the foundation has granted over $110,000 in scholarships alone for the exchange of 142 professors and students between America and Poland.

A pageant commemorating episodes in the life of the Polish patriot who fought to liberate both this country and his own will be presented during the evening.

The young soldier was the first foreigner of distinction to volunteer his services to Gen. Washington. He fought throughout the revolution as colonel of engineers, prepared the defenses at Fort Ticonderoga, planned the fortifications for the Battle of Saratoga, and directed the construction of the defenses at West Point. He earned the title of brigadier general and was made honorary charter member of the Order of Cincinnati.

Waclaw Gawronski, Polish consul general, is chairman of the honorary committee for the ball. Walter F. Panka, president of the Polish Singers Alliance of America, heads the executive committee which is arranging the event for the Chicago branch of the foundation. President Henry Noble MacCracken of Vassar college heads the national organization.

Lincoln's birthday has been chosen as the date for the twenty-fourth birthday celebration of Gen. Henry Dearborn chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. The annual white breakfast of the organization will be held Saturday noon in the Crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel.

The Rev. Dr. John Timothy Stone will speak on "Birthdays and Life," and Jessie Steck, soprano, will give a musical program. Mrs. Walter E. Mielly, social chairman, will be in charge. Mrs. S. Oliver Stone is regent.

George Washington will play an important part in the program of the American Daughters of Sweden Tuesday evening, and in that of the Colonial Coverlet Guild of America on Wednesday.

A sound motion picture, "George Washington's Railroad," will be presented before the American Daughters at the La Salle hotel. Miss Margaret Dahlstrom will sing. On Saturday afternoon the organization will visit the exhibit of the Swedish American Art association in the club woman's bureau of Mandel Brothers' store.

Mrs. Arthur W. Barwick, a descendant of Lawrence Washington, will speak on Sulgrave Manor, ancestral home of George Washington in England, before the Colonial Coverlet guild. A noon luncheon will precede her talk. A George Washington coverlet made by Mrs. William T. Daum of Elmhurst will be on display.

The annual celebration of Lincoln's birthday at the Chicago Woman's club always is noteworthy for the presentation of the winner of an essay contest for high school students on the subject, "If Lincoln Could Speak Today."

Next Saturday morning, before an audience of civic leaders, club members, and high school teachers and pupils, Henry Puharich of the Farragut High school will read the essay that won him the Helen Wooster Cooley $100 scholarship award this year. The reading will be broadcast.

Mr. Puharich, president of the student council at Farragut, will use this award and one he received in the Union League club's oratorical contest last year to study at Northwestern university.

Dr. Horace Bridges will be the principal speaker at a luncheon following.

On Saturday at Springfield, Ill., Mrs. Malcolm Douglas of Seattle, Wash., and Daniel C. Doherty, as national leaders of the American Legion and its auxiliary, will place wreaths on Lincoln's tomb. This ceremony, an annual event, will be broadcast. Afterward there will be a dinner and dance, at which Mrs. A. A. Pantelis, Illinois department president of the auxiliary, also will be a special guest.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, May 1, 1889.

Dear Julia: Yesterday Chicago—nearly one million of us there are now — sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," as doubtless you in New York—how many millions have you now?—did, too. A great anniversary, wasn't it? The United States 100 years old! [See footnote.]

Not since the reception to Gen. Grant, ten years ago, has our city put on such garments of rejoicing. All the streets blossomed out in flags, flowers, wreaths, and portraits of Washington. Glancing up and down at State and Madison streets, our busiest intersection, was like gazing into a forest of flags.

Tugboats on the river woke us with their screeching early this morning. At 9 o'clock the church bells rang for service. We live near Holy Name cathedral, you know, and so saw a great procession moving toward the church, where a solemn military mass was celebrated, with Archbishop Feehan assisting. City schools, of which we now have eighty-nine, offered programs—a grand lesson in patriotism. Great massmeetings were held in the afternoon in Battery D, Farwell hall, the Chamber of Commerce building, Central Music hall, the 2d Regiment armory, and in two large tents on the lake front.

At one of these the Rev. Dr. Samuel F. Smith, who wrote the words of "America," was present—a dear old man past 80 years of age. I saw him sitting with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Robey, whose guest he was.

As I gazed at his benevolent face I thought of the words Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote about him in his poem, "The Boys." "The Boys," you remember, were the members of the Harvard class of 1829, gathered for a reunion years after their graduation, many of them famous in various lines.

Our country was already singing "America," and of Dr. Smith, Holmes wrote:

Now, there's a nice fellow, of excellent pith;
Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith;
But he shouted a song for the brave and the free;
Just read on his medal: 'My Country, of Thee.'

We had supplements to the music sheets distributed and found Dr. Smith's new stanza printed on these. It was written for the centennial, and while not so good as the first stanzas, it was well received, because it was appropriate and was written by Dr. Smith:

Our joyful hosts today
Their grateful tribute pay,
Happy and free;
After our toils and fears,
After our blood and tears,
Strong with our hundred years,
O Lord, to Thee.

Will and I went to Central Music hall and heard J. M. Thurston of Omaha, introduced by Robert T. Lincoln. Young Dr. Simon J. McPherson spoke eloquently, and Clarence Eddy made the organ talk.

At the Union League club last night—no ladies invited, so I couldn't go—Will heard some of the great orators of the country eulogize the founders of our republic. I suppose the one who stood first on the list was Mr. Justice Harlan of the Supreme court, who came from the capital to laud the first President. Robert T. Lincoln offered a toast to the memory of Chief Justice Marshall. Will said it was a memorable occasion.

Crowds in the street were so great that many were injured as they rushed to and from the meetings, so there were many hospital cases. One woman's injury was caused by her corset steels being driven into her side. But even though there were accidents, it was good to see the enthusiasm of the public and the appreciation of many foreign born citizens, who are enjoying here a liberty denied them in their own lands.

Now, with much love, I am
Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

George Washington was inaugurated as President on April 30, 1789.

The Rev. Samuel F. Smith, D. D. [1808-1895], was graduated from Harvard in the famous class of 1829, among whose members Oliver Wendell Holmes was the most outstanding. Dr. Smith wrote more than a hundred hymns, many of which are found in church hymnals. Among these is the well known "The Morning Light Is Breaking." His anthem, "America," written in 1832, has found its way wherever the English language is spoken, and is as popular as it was a hundred years ago.

Famous Places of Europe on Student's Tour

One of the liveliest and most interesting European tours of the coming summer will be that of the Hamburg-American in coöperation with the North German Lloyd line, planned especially for students and covering England, Holland, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, and France. This will be the fourth annual trip. The young people will be under the leadership of Paul G. Delaporte of New Trier High school.

The party will sail from New York aboard the Bremen on July 2, returning on Aug. 19 on the New York. In England the students will see not only the famous spots of London, but will make a motor excursion through the Thames valley, going on another day to visit Oxford.

There will be a four day tour of Berlin, three days in Munich, and a journey into the Bavarian Alps.

Finally there will be memorable days in Paris and time for historic Versailles and Malmaison.

Four Cruises Visit Tropics

While many have already started on Caribbean cruises others have waited until this month to leave gray days behind. March, too, sees voyagers setting out for the tropics.

The Lafayette will make four trips to the West Indies between February and May. The first, due to leave the 18th of this month, covers seventeen days, stopping at St. Pierre, Fort de France, Port of Spain, Grenada, La Guayra, Cristobal, and Havana. The others, of ten and eleven days, visit the Bahamas, Havana, and Bermuda, leaving New York March 10, 24, and April 7.

These cruises appeal to business men and others who do not want to be away from home for an extended time, yet who feel the need of a pleasant winter vacation with plenty of sunshine and time for relaxation. And they come at a time of year when it's most desirable to have a change of scene.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Address: Travel Editor.

SHE LIKES THE SOUTH.

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 16.—To the Travel Editor: I wish you would print some pictures in color of the author of "Gone with the Wind." I have read Dickens, Thackeray, and George Eliot, but that book seemed to be inspired.

I visited Natchez because of THE TRIBUNE's articles, so I knew the background.

Give us pictures and articles about the azalea trail, too. SARAH ALICE REED.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Jan. 21.—To the Travel Editor: Will you please enter the name of Ernest L. Simpson, Masonic sanitarium, Bettendorf, Ia., on your list? He would especially appreciate letters from travelers in far places. But letters from anywhere would help make his days brighter and shorter.

A FRIEND.

Mount Pleasant, Ia., Jan. 20.—To the Travel Editor: Please put my name on your list to receive mail from travelers or from any one else who might care to write me. I have been a shut-in for more than nine years. I would be deeply grateful for cards, letters, travel folders or booklets, or good reading of any kind. My address is Iowa State hospital. [MRS.] CHARLOTTE DIEHN.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—To the Travel Editor: I have a niece who has been a patient in a tuberculosis sanitarium for a number of years and who has been criticially ill for the last year. She would enjoy a few cards or an occasional letter. Address: Mrs. George Fowler, Battle Hill sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga.

February, Florida and Fun!

Enjoy Them All at Their Best and Still Save Expenses

Thousands of travelers, following the sun to Florida, have reaped and are reaping the benefits of our wider scope of vacation pleasures; our more economical plan of vacation expenditures.

Let us give you the information we gave them . . . important data on vacation costs in Florida . . . facts and figures garnered after years of experience and research in this business of winter vacationing . . . valuable hints on how to enjoy the best at less cost.

Our representatives in New York and Chicago—specialists in Florida vacation knowledge—will be glad to give you the "low-down", accurate facts, either in a personal interview (if you are in these metropolitan areas or even in Boston, Philadelphia or Washington) or by correspondence, answering all your questions. This service is yours for the asking. There are no strings to our offer. You do not obligate yourself in any way.

Undoubtedly you know the two great hotels—among the finest resort hotels in the world—that make you this offer: the RONEY PLAZA, America's finest oceanfront hotel, Miami Beach, and the MIAMI BILTMORE, center of the wintertime world, Miami (Coral Gables).

They represent the BEST in vacation living—also, the MOST VALUE for your vacation dollar.

For instance, when you are a guest of either hotel, you are spared the considerable expense of hiring taxis, sightseeing cars or other transportation to get around to all the sports and social activities in this famous playground. There's a private fleet of aerocars—big, comfortable auto lounge cars—available day and night, free of charge, to take Roney Plaza and Miami Biltmore guests to the races, theaters, nightclubs, jai alai, airports, polo games, even to the Florida keys and bring them back. This economy alone saves you approximately one-third of your normal vacation expenses.

And there are many other rare advantages offered by this revolutionary policy of guest privileges and entertainment. One of the greatest courtesies ever offered is that of membership privileges in three of the finest sports clubs in America, after the guest's name has been approved by the clubs' membership committees. These privileges are granted without payment of initiation fees or dues. Think what these privileges would cost you, if you were not a guest of the Roney Plaza or Miami Biltmore. Moreover, this enlarges your vacation opportunities to include every phase of resort pleasure—from surf bathing on a private beach and golf on "the course of champions" to deep-sea fishing at the celebrated Key Largo Anglers Club.

But let one of our representatives tell you about it personally, as well as giving you other valuable information about Florida in general, various costs, routes, resort activities, etc.

TRIPS—VACATIONS

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

TOURS—CRUISES

Mountain Road Leads 12 Miles "to the Stars"

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—[U. P.]—The "million dollar highway to the stars" has been opened to trafic. The roadway, which sometime late in 1939 will carry thousands of people to the top of Mount Palomar to witness the dedication of the world's largest telescope and astronomical equipment, was completed after two years' work.

Between now and the official opening of the Mt. Palomar observatory, the twelve-mile stretch of road, built of decomposed granite to withstand the heaviest type trafic, will see millions of dollars worth of structural steel and extremely delicate instruments moved over its surface.

Work of constructing the observatory to house the 200-inch mirror of the world's most powerful telescope swung into highgear, and its final phase, with the opening of the last three-mile stretch of road.

Already six carloads of structural steel are being pulled up the steep grades by powerful trucks.

This steel—fabricated in Chicago—will be used in construction of the dome, upon which the 200-inch mirror, the largest ever constructed in the history of the world, will be mounted.

Capt. Clyde McDowell, U. S. N., retired, supervising construction of the observatory, will be in charge of this phase of the work.

Ordinances, governing future construction on Mt. Palomar, already are being drafted by the San Diego county supervisors and representatives of the California Institute of Technology who will have charge of the observatory.

Direct lighting of any type will be prohibited within three miles of the observatory. It was said any but indirect lighting would hinder the work of the scientists when the telescope and mirror are placed in operation.

A zoning ordinance which will prohibit construction of commercial enterprises such as hot dog and refreshment stands within a 1,000-yard radius of the observatory also is being drawn. No souvenir vendors will be allowed in the restricted zone, it was indicated.

The base for the giant dome of the observatory already is in place.

While the [illegible] was planned primarily to show the accomplishments of Norway, other Scandinavian lands will take part. Sections are to be devoted to industries, handicrafts, arts, shipping and whaling, tourist trade, and educational and social activities.

DETOUR

By FREDERIC BABCOCK

An American visitor in Monte Carlo figured it out the other day that, small as Rhode Island is regarded in this country, it is a monster when compared with Monaco. . . . In fact, 2,000 Monacos could be put inside Rhode Island, with room to spare. . . . The Lilliputian state boasts of three cities, but only one of them, Monte Carlo, has a reputation among the tourists, and it is known solely because it is one of the world's leading pleasure places.

Due to its casino life, the city is usually thought of as a modern Babylon, where every race rubs shoulders and every tongue is spoken, and where despair and delight play alternating rôles over the gaming tables. . . . In reality it is much more than that. . . . It is a pleasant resort frequented by thousands who never gamble. . . . It is as much English as French in character, and more than 90 per cent of its guests talk our language. . . . Its ocean museum, anthropological museum, and royal palace are far more important in the scheme of things than its roulette and baccarat facilities.

But it can't be denied that the gambling atmosphere is the chief attraction. . . . Citizens of Monaco cannot ignore the importance of the Casino, for its prosperity insures their prosperity. . . . Theirs is the world's only country where the taxes are paid by nonresidents. . . . That is why "the man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo" might break up the financial structure and everything else.

Actually it is only in films and novels that the bank goes bankrupt. . . . Big sums are still made, but only occasionally. Two winters ago an Englishwoman won 70,000 francs in one afternoon—and left by the next train. . . . Her feat was considered highly exceptional.

Curiously, when one looks around the green tables at the players, whom fiction has described as dressed and bejeweled in lordly magnificence, the majority appear almost drab, and of a class unable to afford risking 5 francs on the turn of the wheel. . . . The cathedral-like silence, broken by the subdued voice of the croupier, is about the only thing living up to the legends. . . . All the players have systems guaranteed to win, and all are sure they get at least an even break. . . . But there are various regulations in favor of the bank in each of the games. . . . Which explains why the state taxes are paid by nonresidents.

About the Casino are tropical gardens used by novelists as the scenes of ghastly suicides, usually committed as soon as the victims have been broken by the bank instead of vice versa. . . . The Casino is also the center of the city's theatrical and concert life, and in the winter time there are brilliant performances. . . . The warm Mediterranean is right in Monte Carlo's front yard, and the ski resorts are not far away.

Tallinn Rich in History of Bygone Days

By Mason Warner.

TALLINN, Estonia.—I have heard two descriptive sentences applied to this city, known as Riga under the czars. One was by an enthusiastic American girl who declared, "Gee! Tallinn is a peach of a town!" The other was by an English churchman who remarked, "I consider Tallinn a veritable pearl among medieval cities." Take your choice. Both are correct.

The years from 1917 to 1920 were exciting and terrible ones for little Estonia. Then were fought the wars for her independence. First the Estonians had to defeat the bolshevists and drive them back into Russia. Then Prussia, seeing what looked like a favorable moment to take advantage of a situation, sent in the "Iron Army" of veterans of the world war in an endeavor to make Estonia a duchy in union with the crown of Prussia.

The Estonians turned about from chasing Russians eastward and repelled the invaders from the west, forcing them back whence they came.

The Red Russians, seeing the Estonians so busily engaged, returned to attack the struggling nation. Helped by volunteers from Finland, Sweden, Denmark and England, the Estonians managed to rally enough men who loved liberty or adventure enough to cause them to enlist in their variegated but gallant armies to repel the bolshevists for the second time.

A peace treaty with soviet Russia was signed at Tartu on Feb. 2, 1920, since which date Estonia has been a free and independent nation.

Those wars were no new experience for Estonia. For more than 700 years she was fought over by Danish, German, Swedish and Russian rulers, who continuously cast envious eyes on the Baltic province with its several fine harbors and ports, so valuable in the trade between Europe and Asia.

Peter the Great added Estonia to Russia in the great northern war in 1710, and the Romanov czars ruled over the land until the downfall of Nicholas II. in 1917. The czars delegated their royal prerogatives to the "Baltic barons," descendants of the German Order of Knights who had become masters of the country in 1346 when they bought out the Danes, with whom they had shared sovereignty.

Under the Baltic barons the Estonians were serfs, the same as the peasants of great Russia, subject to forced labor, conscription and taxation by tyrants. They were resentful of the double rule of the Russian czars and the German barons, had been agitating for freedom for centuries, and so were ripe and ready for rebellion when opportunity to strike for freedom offered.

Today the president of the Estonian republic occupies the palace built by Peter the Great in 1718 for his wife, Catherine. It is an ideal "White House," bright and friendly in appearance, shining in the northern sun, with stucco-covered profiles, graceful window frames, and light green tiled roof, surrounded by shady linden trees. From the front entrance of the palace a wide promenade leads down to the sea.

Near the stately palace, but well into the quiet forest, Peter built for himself at the foot of a colossal limestone rock a small Dutch house of five rooms. It is simple, comfortable, "homey." The great czar's little house is carefully preserved as it was when he occupied it. Its furniture, the Dutch-baroque tables, chairs and writing desks with secret drawers, remain as the picturesque despot placed them. Even his well worn, slovenly slippers are under the old four poster bed with its faded green silk ornamentation.

"A Peek Into the Kitchen" Tower.

Estonia is a little country, about half as large as the state of Indiana, and has a population of only 1,200,000. The nation started with a balance of about $25,000 in its treasury, but the national debt is small, the budget is balanced, and the people appear to be contented and prospering.

Tallinn, the capital city, has only 140,000 inhabitants, but its thousand years of history have crowded its compact space with an amazing number of ancient town walls and imposing gates, quaint old forts, towers, castles and churches. There are no sightseeing auto tours in Tallinn. Points of interest are so close together that walking is preferred to clambering in and out of a car every twenty or thirty yards. An hour's stroll in Tallinn has more rewards in variety and number of interesting objects than a city twenty times as large.

"Medieval," so often misapplied, is the only word that describes Tallinn. The cobble stone paved streets are narrow and winding. The sidewalks permit only two persons to walk abreast. In some places the flagstones are wide enough for only one. Pedestrian trafic marches on the right side of the street. Stranges who wander down the wrong side are quickly put right.

The streets run in every direction, up hill and down dale, with many curves and angles. Ancient archways suddenly confront one, and these may be openings into still other crooked streets, queer plazas and irregular corners. Or, it can happen that a stranger, following through, finds himself in the private garden of a fifteenth century mansion.

Old castle towers and walls still stand, but the moats have been filled and made into gardens, parks and promenades. There are "Tall Herman" towers, built by the Danes; flatter fortresses and redoubts, built by the Russians. The old fort tower, the name of which means "A Peek into the Kitchen," was erected by the Swedes in 1533, and cannon balls are still imbedded in its masonry as testimony to its powers of resistance. An old sea gate tower is known as "Stout Margaret," and the name seems appropriate.

Dates takes on much more significance if the imagination be permitted a bit of play. The Old Dome church was started in 1219. Picture the worshippers who have attended services therein during the last 700 years.

The gloomy interior of the church displays ancient banners and coats-of-arms of the knights who ruled the country in olden times, and there are tombstones and epitaphs to the memories of many disgnitaries buried under the church floor.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

A special train will be run to the New Orleans Mardi Gras by the Illinois Central railroad in coöperation with the Hubbell Tours. A special tour is planned, including a gulf coast trip to Biloxi after seeing New Orleans. Besides this holiday of a week journeys to old Mexico or to Florida and Havana can be added in a second week's tour. The Mardi Gras special will leave Chicago on Feb. 26.

Starting last week the New York Central and the Southern and Seaboard Air Line are running a Florida boat train to Miami to catch the steamship Evangeline for Havana. Sailings will be on Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday evenings, and the Florida Sunbeam will connect with the boat both going and returning. Trips back from Havana to Miami will be on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays.

A winter tour of the South Sea Islands and the Antipodes has been arranged by Anglo-American Tours. It will leave from Vancouver Feb. 16 on the Aorangi of the Canadian Australasian Line, visit Hawaii, Fiji, New Zealand, Australia, and Samoa, and return on the Matson Line's Monterey, arriving in San Francisco April 19.

Air travel from Chicago to Southern California is expected to reach a new high this winter. John B. Walker, TWA vice president in charge of trafic, relates there has been a heavy gain in the number of travelers using the overnight service westward.

The New York Central, the Michigan Central, the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie, and the Boston and Albany have been operated for fourteen consecutive years without a passenger fatality in a train accident. President F. E Williamson believes this sets a new world record for safety in transportation. In the fourteen year period the roads have operated a total of 43,472,290,150 passenger miles, which is the equivalent of one person traveling around the earth 1,745,734 times, or 14,023,319 times between New York and Los Angeles.

Frank Seiden, manager of the Floridian hotel at Miami Beach, writes this department that a series of diving and swimming exhibitions by leading performers will be held in the hotel pool in February and March. The pool was built at a cost of $75,000.

Now that it has its ski season under way, under what are reported to be the best snow conditions in years, the Province of Quebec is expanding its facilities. Work is to be started in a week or so on an 80 mile post road, to be known as Maple Leaf trail, in the Laurentian mountains. The trail will run between Shawbridge and Mont Tremblant, scene of some of the most exciting downhill races in eastern Canada.

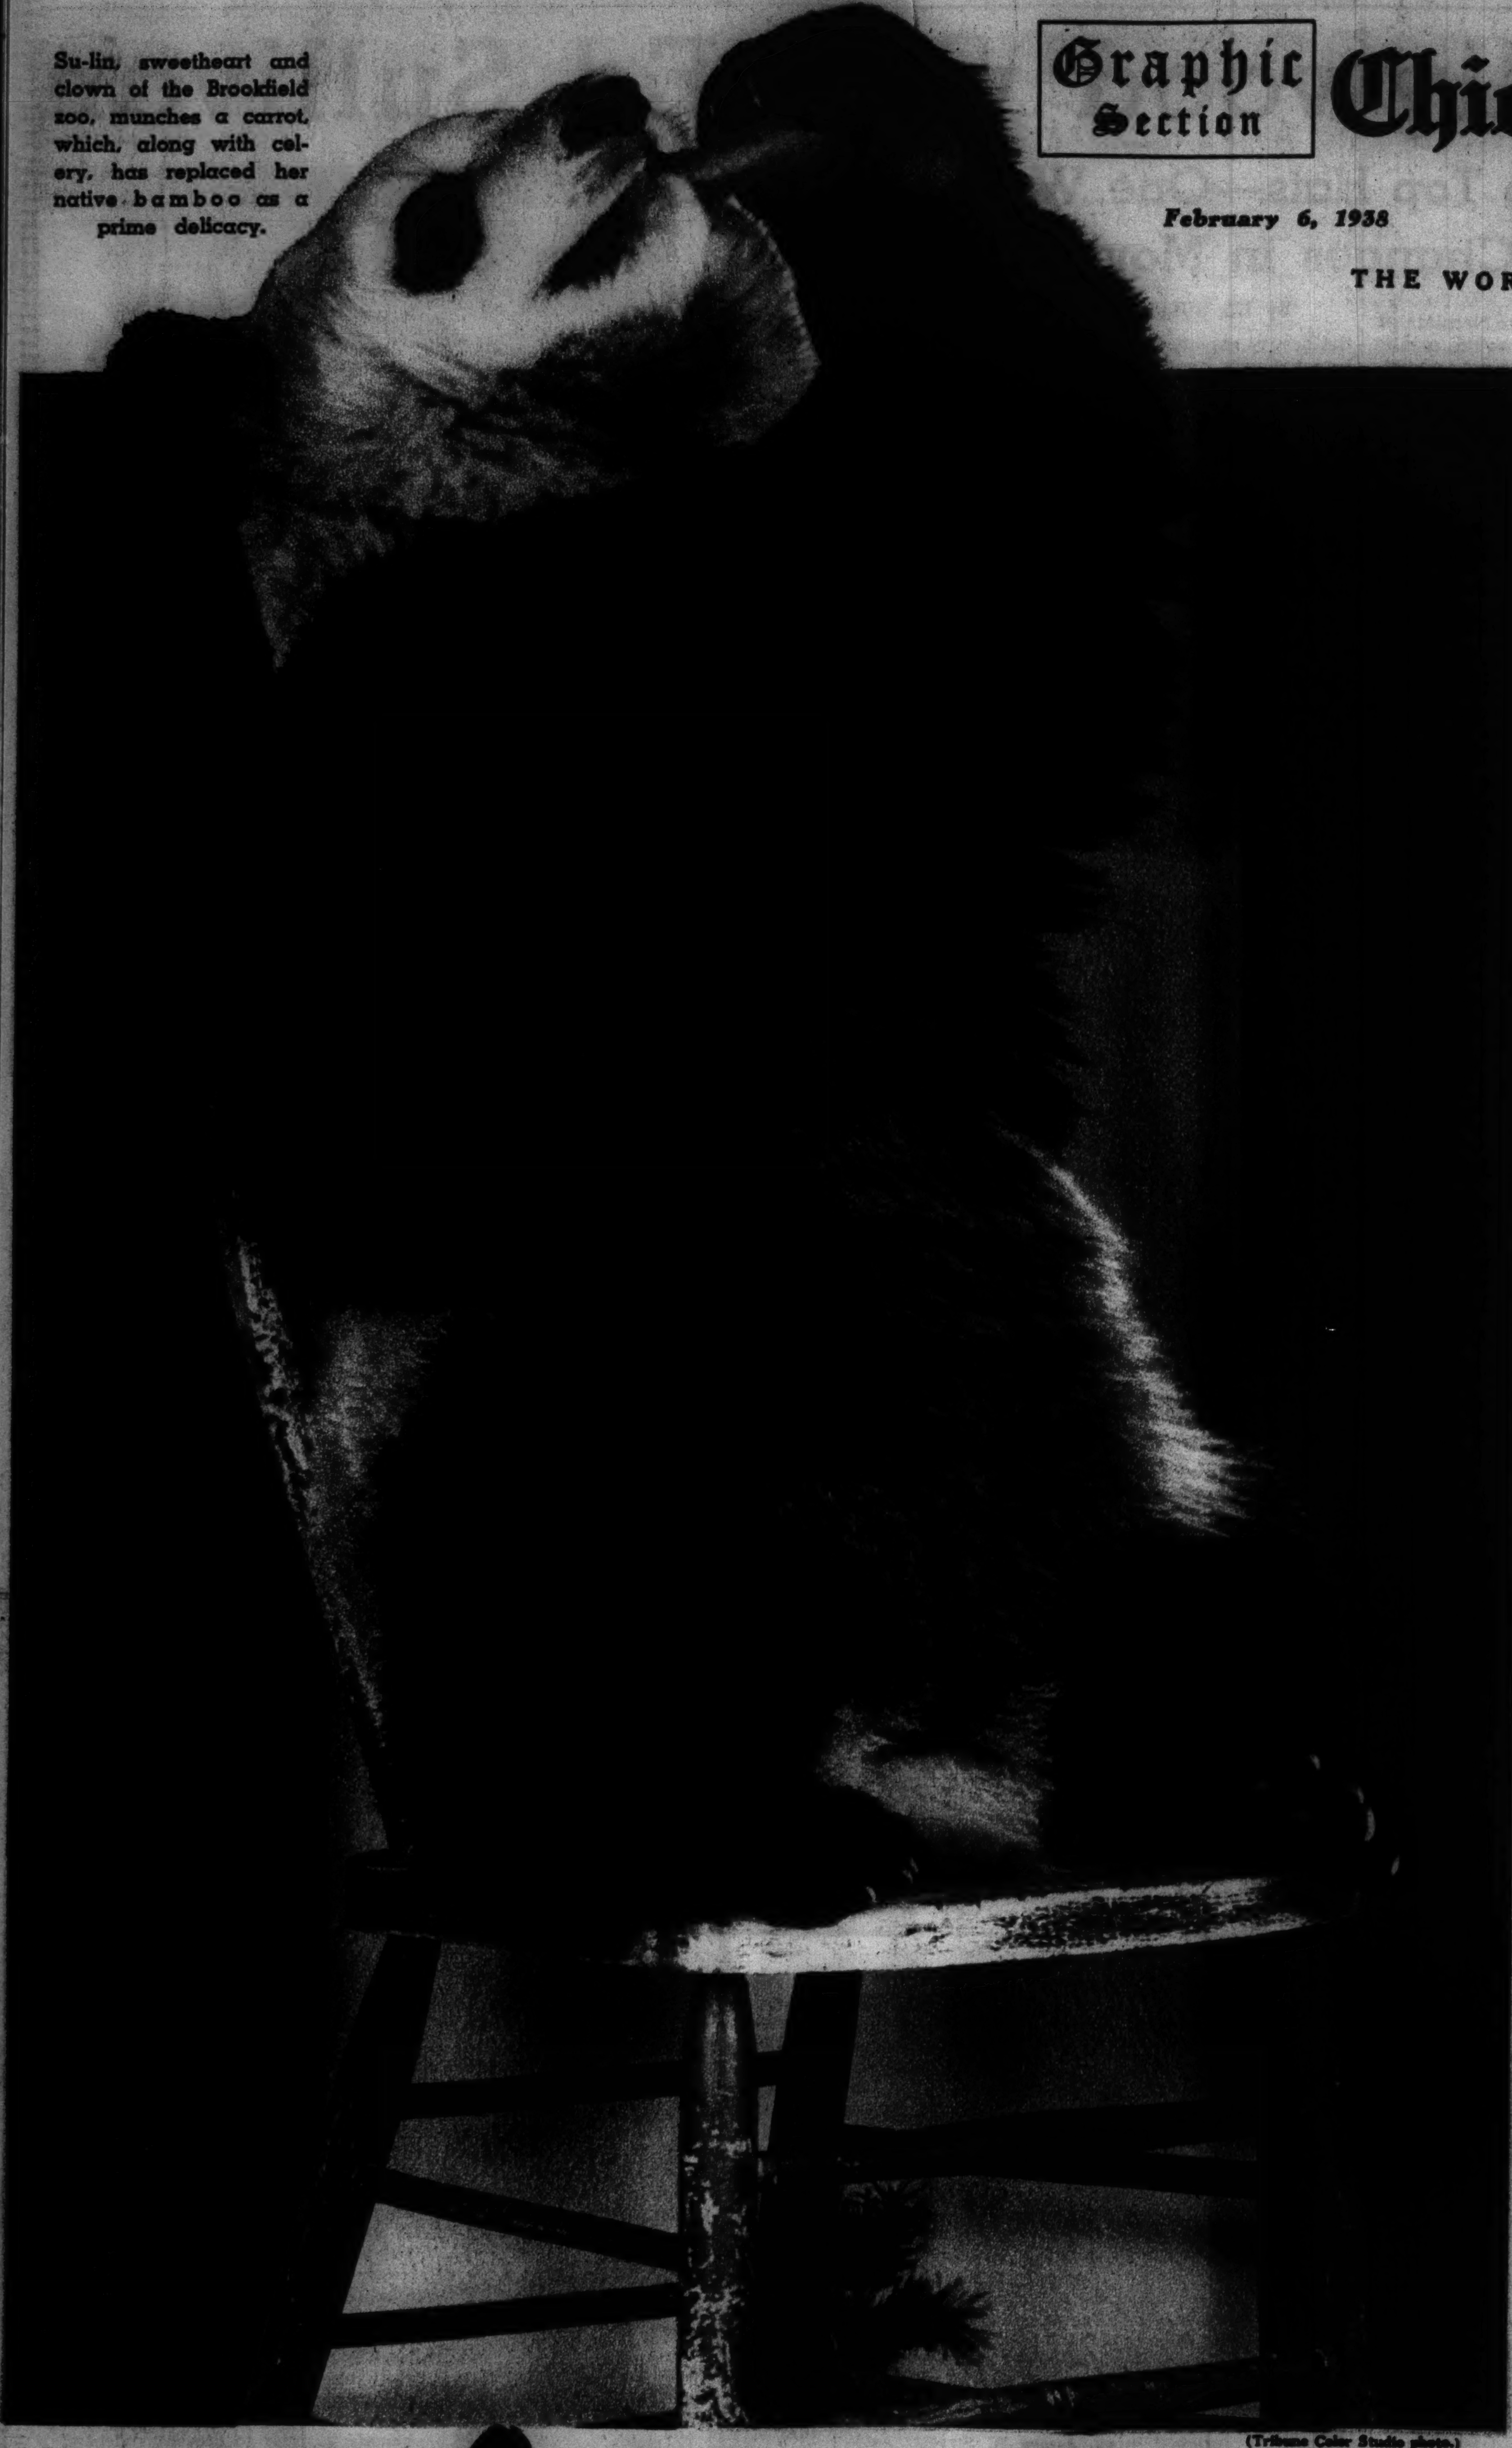
Camera News Review



Su-lin, sweetheart and clown of the Brookfield zoo, munches a carrot, which, along with celery, has replaced her native bamboo as a prime delicacy.

America's New Sweetheart

By GUY MURCHIE JR.

LIKE OTHER INDIVIDUALS, Miss Su-lin, the debutante giant panda at the Chicago Zoölogical park in Brookfield, has a body, a mind, and a soul. Unlike others, Miss Su-lin has a personality that is made up of a hitherto unheard of combination of these three components of individuality.

● To begin with her body: She is absolutely unique in the annals of physiognomy. She is apparently a cross between a surrealistic teddy bear and a limp hot water bottle, being densely woolly, painted like a clown, and equipped with universal joints throughout. Her gait is that of a fat old lady waddling down the aile of a lurching bus, and her expression most of the time is that of a willful child doing what its mother told it not to.

● She weighs about 120 pounds and is gaining at the rate of 3½ pounds a week. She is expected to keep on gaining until about a year from now she should weigh about 220 pounds and be full grown. But, as there has never been a full grown giant panda in captivity, nobody knows what she will be like then. At first it was supposed she would grow more bearlike as she matured, but actually she continues to be as low-slung as ever and can navigate only with a reckless roll of her broad beam such as no self-respecting bear was ever seen doing. It was also assumed that she would sober up with advancing years and become dignified like bears do—but no, Su-lin never has shown the slightest sign of growing up, and continues to shirk responsibility and to flop around like a fish out of water. She is even more chipper and waggish today, if anything, than the day when she arrived more than a year ago.

● Right here is a good place to tell about her mind. She is surprisingly bright, but in a feminine, intuitive way rather than in a cool, logical way. In other words, she is not the chess-playing type, but excels in light repartee and can pick a lock by sheer force of personality, without using a hairpin. Robert Bean, the zoo's assistant director, says that she has easily opened locks that baffled a chimpanzee, supposedly the most intelligent animal next to man. When she wants to reach something that is too high for her she will pull up a chair and stand on that—which is not so dumb.

● She has discrimination, too, when she wants it, and when she sees Mr. Bean's car driving by she often starts somersaulting or going into one of her other numbers in hopes, evidently, of beguiling him into stopping for a social call. Occasionally, also, when she notices that her cage door has been left slightly ajar or insecurely locked, she will suddenly bolt for freedom. Fortunately her constant attendants always have been able to change her mind in time—so far— for it is a moot question how such a capricious creature would use her freedom.

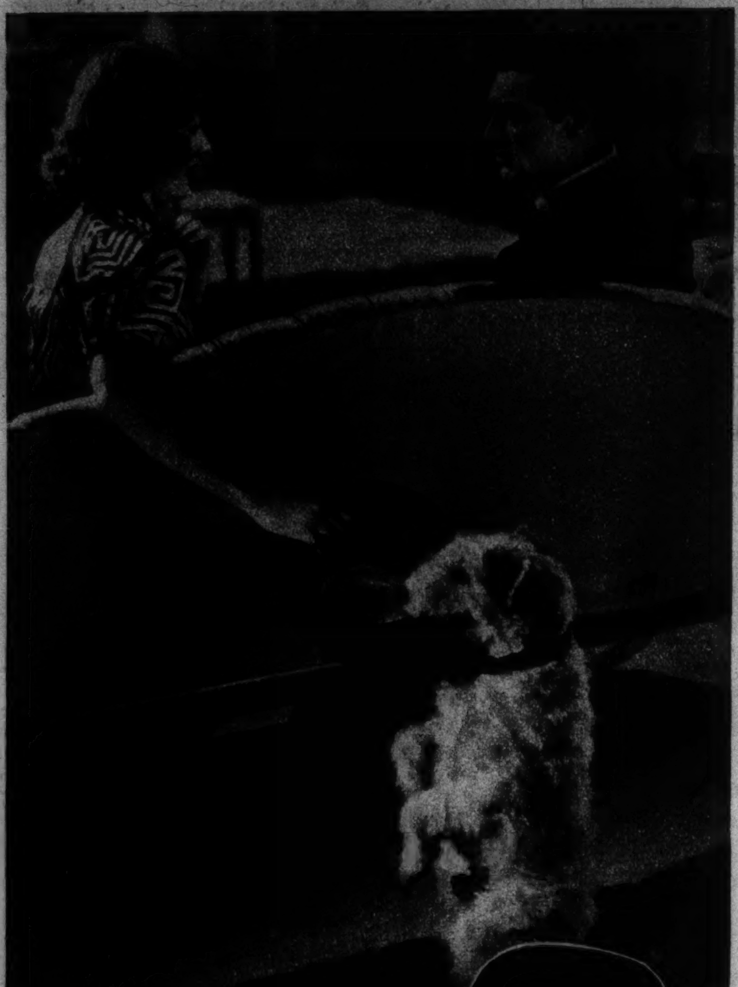
Looking at Hollywood with Ed Sullivan

Caps to Top Hats—One Way of Tracing the Changes in Movie Technique

By ED SULLIVAN



The beginning of a hilarious moment in "The Awful Truth." Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, a dog, and a Derby are the principals.

Hollywood, Cal.

HISTORIANS have been delinquent in failing to point out that what is in a man's head often is influenced by what is on his head. Napoleon, for instance, might have been a completely different guy if he had not been compelled by the social customs of his day to wear a tricornered hat. Only a man wearing a three-cornered hat would be inspired to conquer the world. Had he worn a modern straw hat, or a Derby, I defy you to conceive a Napoleon at Marengo, Austerlitz, Jena, or Waterloo. That, at least, is my story, and I am stuck with it; but it serves to insinuate our way into today's sermon, which really is a treatise on hats.

Hats can be divided roughly into six masculine modes or classes—the straw hat, the Derby hat, the soft hat, the sombrero, the silk topper, and the cap. Each of these has played an important part in the development of the moving picture industry.

For instance, there was one period in the movies when it was nothing short of heresy for an actor to wear anything but a cap. Francis X. Bushman, in moods ranging from pensive to ecstatic, looked out at the world from under the visor of a cap. So did Wally Reid, Conrad Nagel, Neil Hamilton, Doug Fairbanks, Johnnie Walker, Lou Tellegen, and the other heroes of the day. If you didn't have a cap you were, sartorially speaking, of course, a bum. Not any old cap would do, however. The favorite was of heavy, rough material and proportioned so amply that when you set it upon your head half of it ballooned forward well over the visor.

Because of the peculiar proportions of my face I never was able to get a cap that looked well on me. Family album personality portraits reveal me with a cap on my head and a San Quentin-Leavenworth-Alcatraz look on my face. I was never able to wear a cap with the insouciance of a Wallace Reid.

Caps as a vogue had a longer run than golf knickers, mah jong, ouija boards, and miniature golf courses. I believe that President Taft undermined and destroyed the cap era. It was he who first showed up in public prints with a linen cap, and it was whispered about that unless you permitted air to circulate in a hat, baldness would result. American males, who fear baldness as other nations fear the bubonic plague, thereupon got out from under their caps in a national burst of speed that never has been equaled.

The Derby hat, a symbol of rigid middle-class conservatism, became a comedy foil in moving pictures. Charlie Chaplin was the first to exploit the Derby or iron hat as a symbol of levity. His little Derby, dented and degraded, hinted at better days that its owner had enjoyed and added to the serio-comic effects he achieved. Probably no single movie device has traveled so many celluloid miles as Chaplin's Derby. Influenced by Chaplin undoubtedly, Mack Swain, Laurel and Hardy, and other comics have used the Derby for laughs.

The most hilarious scene in "The Awful Truth" was built around a Derby hat—in fact, two Derby hats. When Irene Dunne's dog retrieved the wrong Derby, and Cary Grant put on the oversized hat and it slipped down over his ears, that was the longest and most explosive laugh of the picture. And when Cary says, surveying himself in the mirror, "That's funny, I just bought it," the audience throws itself on the parquet floor of the theater and yells. Slapstick? Certainly, but a refreshing relief from too much sophistication and too much subtlety.

The soft hat has won a spot in pictures as a sure-fire identification of a screen newspaper man. The minute you see an actor with a soft slouch hat, the brim turned down, you know it is a newspaper story. What Hollywood scenarists would do without a newspaper man as a dramatic fulcrum is too horrible to contemplate. If a story bogs down, the writers insert a newspaper man character, and, presto, the story moves on to an orderly conclusion.

The history of Hollywood could be written on the brim of a sombrero. William S. Hart brought the cowboy hat to celluloid as a paying proposition. Tom Mix, George O'Brien, and now Gene Autry have continued the unbroken reign of the eight-gallon hat. Hats may come and caps may go, but the sombrero will last as long as movies last, for the new generation of youngsters demand their two-gun heroes of the western plains, and woe betide a western hero who can't wear a sombrero. It would be as fatal as ham and eggs without ham, and I trust that this simile is not misinterpreted by a sensitive actor.

Although newspaper cartoonists have always used the silk topper for comedy, the movies never have found the silk hat providing laughs. The movies will tell you that what is wrong with a silk hat is that it's much too obvious. W. C. Fields is about the only one who ever has had much success with the silk topper as a laugh provoker.

However, perhaps the movie vogue of the silk hat is at hand. Charlie McCarthy, No. 1 fugitive from a picket fence, wears a silk topper, and it is entirely possible that when little McCarthy appears on the screen in the Goldwyn "Follies" the topper will become identified with comedy. The movies doubt it.

Charlie McCarthy may make the top hat a comedy article, but the movie industry thinks not.

Fredric March betrays his profession (in the movie)—a newspaper man—by wearing a slouch hat in this scene with Carole Lombard.

The mezzanine style of lower lip and the straw hat were brought to movie fame by Maurice Chevalier. Baby Leroy Weinbrenner may have no opinions about the hat, but that lip definitly intrigues him.

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I recently saw the motion picture production "The Perfect Specimen," which starred Errol Flynn. I enjoyed it very much, and I am looking forward to seeing "The Adventures of Robin Hood," also starring Mr. Flynn. His performance in "The Perfect Specimen" was one of his best, and especially since he was co-starred with Joan Blondell. Will you please print a biography of Errol in your Sunday column, and, if you can possibly do it, print a small picture of him? Thank you. I hope you don't mind the letter too much, because it's my first entry to your wonderful column. I remain, I. A.

ERROL FLYNN

Editor's note: Here's that Mr. Flynn. And please don't let your first entry be your last. He was born in Ireland, June 20, 1909. He's 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 180 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes. Educated Lycée Louis le Grand, Paris, and St. Paul's school in London. He married Lili Damita in June, 1935. His hobby is sports. You're welcome.

Dear Miss Tinée: Re your query about the film "Living on Love," which you reviewed the other day: Yes, this film was produced several years ago. The film was produced in 1933 under its original title, "Rafter Romance." Ginger Rogers and Norman Foster had the principal rôles, and Laura Hope Crews, Robert Benchley, and George Sidney had supporting rôles. Both versions of the film were produced by the same studio. Can't understand why this second version doesn't jell; the original picture was—to me at least—a rather nifty comedy. Perhaps it's because the locale of the story has been slightly changed. The two lovers shared (at different intervals, of course) an attic bedroom in the 1933 flicker, which sounds more romantic and cozier than the damp basement bedroom in the 1938 remake. Personally, I think it was rather soon to spring a remake of this once delightful film on an unsuspecting public. The same goes for "Mr. Dodd Takes the Air," filmed five years ago under its original title, "Crooner." David Manners and Ann Dvorak had the leading rôles in this one.

I'm a little peeved with you, Miss Tinée. In reviewing the film "Nothing Sacred" you gave Ben Hecht all of the credit for the film's success. Mr. Hecht, I will admit, did the script for this picture, but the real credit should go to the author of the original story, James H. Street. Aside from peeves, I honestly enjoy your reviews of the films. In your writings you remind me no end of Fannie Hurst, Dorothy Parker, and Edna Ferber, although you have an original style of your own. It's just that you put into your work exactly what they put into theirs, an element known as humanness. You seem to have, as they have, a knowledge of human beings, their feelings and emotions.

Question: Why is Hollywood importing so much foreign talent these days and neglecting old favorites such as Gloria Swanson, Clara Bow, Dorothy Mackaill, etc.?

Very truly yours. LESLIE STORM.

Editor's note: I'm glad to know about "Rafter Romance." Thank you for the information and the rest of your nice letter. As to your last question—time flies, you know.

Dear Miss Tinée: Yesterday morning I was very much surprised to read your review of "They Won't Forget," which is in my opinion one of the best pictures of 1937. If you will glance through some of the lists of best pictures you will find others share my opinion.

This picture tries to show what a terrible thing lynching is. I'm sorry you missed the point. Each year a number of men are lynched in this country, whose constitution says, "No one shall be deprived of life or liberty without due process of law." The need for an anti-lynching bill is great, and the only way to bring it before the people is to show them through a well produced motion picture, where a great number will be reached. I am sure southerners who are not guilty of this crime would not mind seeing the picture.

With best wishes for your continued success, sincerely, HELENE ALBRECHT.

Dear Miss Tinée: I read your column every Sunday and so far have not seen anything about Kenny Baker.

Would you be so kind as to print a cute picture of him and also a brief biography?

Thank you.

BICKY.

KENNY BAKER

"Cute" picture for a constant reader.

Editor's note: Is this picture cute enough? Kenny Baker was born in Monrovia, Cal., Sept. 30, 1912. He's 6 feet tall, weighs 161 pounds, and has brown hair and blue eyes. His hobbies are photography and sports. He sang in cabarets before going into pictures. He's married.

Dear Miss Tinée: Can you please tell me why Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey are shown together in pictures and called "Hollywood's newest singing team." I saw "Rosalie" and do not remember them singing together.

Thank you, HELEN RYAN.

Editor's note: She sang alone in "Rosalie" and so did he. If and why they're called "a team"—I don't know.

Dear Miss Tinée: How could you do it? You named twenty-two movies as the best of 1937, a number which you admit is more than twice as great as you usually pick, and what did you do? You omitted Robert Montgomery's "Night Must Fall"! Perhaps this omission was merely an oversight on your part. If not, however, I would like to register a raucous scream of protest. To wit:

Never before in the twelve years that I have been in search of photoplays instead of mere movies have I found a more perfect analysis of a psychopath, a diabolically clever egomaniac, than in "Night Must Fall." Montgomery, for the first time in his career (as far as I know), stepped from the inane, simpering playboy rôles in which his directors have consistently miscast him and played a rôle that is probably without a rival in its own category. Obviously he insisted on the change himself in order to prevent staleness; if so, his judgment was commendable and he is deserving of the highest praise for his stand against his employers. But now to the picture itself.

True, "Night Must Fall" has no epic sweep, it did not cost a million to make, it has no cast of five thousand, it isn't even colossal—but it is the most perfectly conceived and the most perfectly directed, photographed, and acted motion picture that I have ever seen! Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer seems to have been the one studio with the courage to present a play that, though morbid and in a real sense terrifying, is head and shoulders above anything else that has come from Hollywood, London, or any other movie city in the world.

Mr. Montgomery merits the Academy award if any actor ever deserved it. "Night Must Fall" is definitly a one-man show, although he received flawless support from Rosalind Russell and Dame May Whitty. The great mystery to me, Miss Tinée, is that there are so few really great motion pictures, photoplays, produced, and that you should have missed this masterpiece in compiling your list! Ordinarily you and I agree; I saw fifteen of the twenty-two pictures on your list, and most of these fifteen would be on my list of the twenty best pictures of 1937. But that omission! How could you? Sincerely,

NORBERT KRUBY.

Editor's note: I deserve that!

Romance on the Campus?

How It Affects Smith College Girls

Foreward This, the second article of a series of four on the question, "What part does romance play in college life today?", deals with the subject as investigated at a strictly girls' college, Smith college at Northampton, Mass. Subsequent articles will present the results of similar surveys made at Northwestern university, a coeducational institution in a large city, and Yale university, a men's school.

On an ordinary week-end college men stream to Smith college by the hundreds. A Saturday's dance sees a fair sprinkling of them with their Smith dancing partners between dances on the staircase of Dewey house, the college's oldest dormitory.

By MARCIA WINN

WHENEVER the townsfolk of Northampton, Mass., a quiet little hamlet in the New England hills, see a young man stroll toward the portals of Smith college with a blanket under his arm, they smile knowingly to themselves. "O," they say, "he's going to Paradise."

In the fall and in the spring the feet of the girls at Smith college and the young collegians who traverse from seven to a hundred miles to see them for three hours turn inevitably toward Paradise pond, a smiling little lake set down between the campus hills with a special eye, it would seem, to dating. For when it is dark the hilly slopes along the banks of Paradise seem studded with the lights of a thousand fireflies. These are the glowing cigarets of the Smith girls and their college boys.

Life at Smith college is radically different from that of a coed at a state university. It is meant to be. Although as many, if not more, girls date, they do so on a smaller around-the-clock scale. This is purely a matter of volition with the girls, as the college sets no limitations whatsoever upon dating, knowing full well what the girls have found out—that to be graduated from Smith a girl has to give at least as much time to study as to men, and probably much more.

In fact, the rules and regulations of the college have only three sentences dealing with dates. These, coming in a handbook replete with "don'ts" on every possible subject, say merely (1) girls desiring to attend dances at nearby colleges or academies should consult the dean's office, (2) freshmen who wish to ride with a man (or men) must bring permission from home, and (3) man visitors "under no circumstances" may go upstairs in the various houses except with special permission from the head of the house.

Since its founding in 1867 Smith has differed from other women's colleges in its open official encouragement of dating. Although some colleges still are conducted on the female seminary plan, with only one date a week permitted, and that under strictest supervision, Sophia Smith, the founder of Smith college, long ago specified that men not only be graciously received on her campus but that men have an equal voice in its guidance. Even so, there was a fight from the very beginning to make it a coeducational college.

Sophia Smith was a wealthy spinster of considerable enlightenment. She contended that women, if given a chance, could assimilate higher education as readily as men, and she added the dubious contention that a deep knowledge of Greek was a positive help in baby tending!

Smith thus became the butt of many jokes. At nearby Yale university in Smith's early years, when Greek was an entrance requirement, the young collegians spoke frequently of "the many cases of brain fever incurred at Smith each week in the effort to make women know as much as men."

Others held that men would shy away from educated women as prospective wives. They advanced the theory (which still has a widespread following) that if you sent your daughter to a woman's college she would come to a spinsterly end.

Taking notes at a lecture. To be graduated from Smith a girl has to give at least as much time to study as to men, and probably much more.

Statistics shatter both these contentions. The college has gone into the matter thoroughly in careful surveys, conducted every five years. It has found that the marriage ratio is so rapidly on the increase that at the present rate the Smith graduate of 1955 will receive her diploma with one hand and her marriage license with the other.

So long ago as 1905 the president of the college in his annual report attacked the matter thus: "Marriages of convenience," he declared, "are not made as often by college graduates, for they do not feel obliged to marry in order to escape poverty or dependence, and they marry more frequently educated men who desire congenial companionship. There are accordingly fewer divorces among them."

And although the average Smith graduate of today marries into the upper stratum of society, that stratum where divorce comes most frequently and fiercely, the Smith divorce rate still is abnormally low. For its graduates of over a period of fifty years it is 1.6 per cent. For its graduates of ten years ago (class of 1927) it is one-third of 1 per cent (as compared with 1.8 per cent for the same group at a coeducational university).

Fully half of the 2,200 girls at Smith college are wealthy. They have to be, as the average girl spends $1,500 a year there. Some, such as the 1936 graduate who had ermine rugs and satin draperies in her small bedroom, spend much more. Many girls are there on liberal scholarships. Others earn from a third to a half of their expenses. But one and all they were admitted into the college only because they were able to pass stiff college board examinations. And, similarly one and all, if they are lacking in brains, or in that which sometimes passes for brains, out they go.

But on the campus, erudite or not, they all look alike in their great democracy of dress, which, all must agree, is adopted purely for comfort.

They wear brightly colored sweaters and skirts, low ankle socks (all winter long), and scuffed brown and white oxfords. If the oxfords are clean they are out of fashion. There are no exceptions.

When dining, shopping, or merely walking in Northampton they wear this same self-styled uniform. When dining with men, however, they usually slip into sheer silk stockings and high heels. Even then their attire generally stays on the side of sports, although for formal affairs they wear the most sophisticated and glamorous of evening gowns.

In warm weather they wear shorts, with a coat thrown over bare legs for classroom attendance. In the winter, ski suits. And one out of every three girls rides a bicycle around the campus.

Most of the girls live in comfortable cottages, twenty-five or so of them to a house. Recently a few modern quadrangles de luxe, imposing structures of red brick and high white pillars, have been built. These are complete with luxurious smoking rooms, lounges, dance halls with muraled walls, and single bedrooms.

If you find a Smith girl who does not smoke you had better pinch yourself to see that you are not dreaming. The same applies to drinking, for the girls, especially those from wealthy families, like their liquor and like it hard.

The college's one ruling is that liquor may not be consumed in college buildings or on college grounds and that "strict adherence" to the Massachusetts laws is expected. But the Massachusetts law, which provides that liquor may not be sold to a girl under 21, is not enforced. It makes, college authorities say with a sigh, "a maddening situation."

Center of Laura Scales and Franklin King houses, two Smith dormitories, as seen from the Mandelle quadrangle looking across the Great quadrangle.

And well it might, for some of the Smith girls drink like fish. They tell, in fact, of even more drinking than they are observed doing. Vodka cocktail parties, it seems, are the most fashionable. One vivacious young junior spoke animatedly of one of these.

"Well, there we were," she recounted. "We'd been at that party all afternoon, pouring vodka down, and we were going to a dance that night. And there was ———, as tight as a goat. I managed to pilot her upstairs to our room and stand her up while I began trying to get her into her formal——"

The episode reached an unexpected climax, she revealed, when her roommate's escort for the dance, as sottish as she, climbed a fire escape and into their bedroom. However, she added gayly, all worked out well. He descended the fire escape as quickly as he had climbed it.

If Smith were not so ideally located from a standpoint of nearby men's colleges and academies, its 2,200 girls might be quite lonesome. But Amherst is only seven miles away, Dartmouth and Williams are near, and Yale is a two hours' drive (with a Yale man at the wheel).

On an ordinary week-end the college men stream to Smith by the hundreds, according to Mrs. Laura Scales, graduate of 1901 and warden (social arbiter) of the college for the last fifteen years. "I mean," she added, "under 500 rather than in the scores."

There are no dating requirements other than that the date must be held during the hours the houses are open. This is from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m., or until midnight on Saturdays.

The favorite pastimes are dancing to a nickelodeon at the Draper hotel, drinking at Rahar's, roller skating at the Gables, or dancing at Toto's Zeppelin, a weird, silvery, elongated building on a nearby pike, or the Wayside—or sitting on the banks of Paradise.

"There is absolutely no limit on dates," Mrs. Scales said. "A girl can have as many here as she can safely handle. She may come to grief, but——" and white-haired, patrician Mrs. Scales shrugged her shoulders.

Two sophisticated young juniors from Evanston, one of whom now is engaged, told a different story.

"The college doesn't put any real limit on dates," they explained, "but if you have too many, pretty soon you get a call to see Mrs. Scales. We did. We both dated Amherst men every night in the week.

"Then we got a call from Mrs. Scales. She was very nice about it, and she didn't come out and tell us to stop dating, but she suggested that possibly our work was being hurt."

"She pointed out that I was flunking German," the other spoke up cheerfully, "but then I would have anyway."

"So what did you do?" they were asked.

"O," they laughed, "we cooled off for a while, and then we started up again."

Possibly a fourth of the girls at Smith do not date at all. As at the University of Illinois, the reasons may lie in (1) unattractiveness, (2) no dating clothes, (3) no chance to meet men, or (4) engrossment in studies.

Mary Louise Nolker of St. Louis, a junior, gave a lucid explanation of Smith dating.

"I should say about one-tenth of the girls living at this house [Parsons, one of the cottages] date during the week," she said. "A good three-fourths date over the week-end. The girls don't go away every week-end, because they can't, but they date here if they don't.

"At some houses the girls date every night. I think other houses go out more than this one does. You see, after all, the girls here are just as much interested in college as in going out, whereas in other houses the girls are just interested in boys. You just can't go out every night and get your work done, too."

The girls usually date college men their own age. One-tenth of the boys are from Amherst, especially during the week, because of its proximity. The rating of the men so far as Smith is concerned is (1) Amherst, (2) Yale, (3) Dartmouth, (4) Williams, (5) Harvard business school.

From the very day that college opens in October the men's schools and their forthcoming social events are an all-engrossing topic. The Dartmouth carnival, the Yale prom, the Yale-Harvard game, the Amherst hop—and so on. Many of the girls go to not one but all of these.

College authorities, however, put one stringent damper on too much visiting at the men's colleges. A girl may be absent

Their House Was Better Than Average Then

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

GATHERED around a dining room table marked by its simplicity of chinaware and tableware are three boys, aged 15, 8, and 5 years, and a most striking man.

The boys are attired in the quaint manner of the times, spreading white collars covering the shoulders of the short jackets of the two youngest, and the eldest with his coat closely buttoned to his turnover collar. One does not say that these boys are greatly in need of haircuts, for at this time their long locks are quite in fashion.

The man, tall, gaunt, beardless, and with hollow cheeks, seemingly is careless of his appearance. His feet are in rundown slippers. His rusty black coat is wrinkled. His hair, of which he has an abundance, is not neatly brushed. But upon his face is a marvelous smile. Obviously this is a day that finds him in rare humor, for he tells one joke after another to keep the boys laughing.

The business of the four at the table, the father and three sons, has to do with the stowing away of a hearty breakfast. In an adjoining room two women flutter about an ornamented wood-burning cook stove, busily engaged in preparing corn cakes, pouring the batter on sizzling griddles and stacking upon a huge platter the cakes as they are baked. It is said of the tall man at the table that he can keep two women busy baking such cakes, so stupendous is his appetite for them. He eats the cakes with a relish, putting them away, between jokes tossed at the boys, in large chunks that have been saturated with molasses. The boys, like all boys in good health, also eat heartily.

This is a scene that carries us back eighty years. The house in which this breakfast was eaten was a two-story, unimposing frame affair at the northeast corner of 8th and Jackson streets in Springfield, Ill. The amazing man who ate the corn cakes with such gusto was the lawyer and ex-congressman, Abraham Lincoln. The boys were his three surviving sons—Robert Todd, the eldest; William Wallace (Willie), and Thomas (Tad), the youngest. The women in the kitchen were the lawyer's wife, Mrs. Mary Todd Lincoln, and the Lincolns' hired girl.

Thus we have a fleeting glimpse of the Lincoln family in 1858, less than three years before it went to dwell in the White House in Washington. The house in question was the one occupied by the family for seventeen years. Today, as the property of the state of Illinois, it is a shrine of a nation, the people of which next Saturday will observe the 129th anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

A description of how the Lincolns lived as plain small-town folk in the years before they went to the White House should give a better understanding of their natures, characters, and habits than any account of their necessarily artificial life as the first family of the land. That they were little if any different from other folk in their circumstances at that time is proved by the accounts of their home life which have been handed down to us through the generations.

When Lincoln, with his newly acquired license to practice law, moved from the village of New Salem to Springfield on April 15, 1837, he carried with him the worry of a debt incurred in the first-named place, where he had been both storekeeper and postmaster. This was a debt that weighed heavily upon him in the years that followed but which eventually was paid in full.

On Nov. 4, 1842, Lincoln married Mary Todd, daughter of Robert S. Todd of Lexington, Ky. He had met the young woman, who was more than nine years his junior, in 1839, while she was residing in Springfield at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ninian W. Edwards. The following year they had become engaged, and in January, 1841, the engagement had been broken. The romance finally being patched up, the two were wedded in the Edwards' home and immediately went to live in the Globe tavern, a public boarding house in Adams street, Springfield. It was there on Aug. 1, 1843, that their eldest son, Robert Todd, was born.

Shortly after the birth of their first child Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln moved to a one-story frame house, the location of which today remains in dispute. One notable authority says the cottage was located in Monroe street, another that it was at 214 South 4th street. At any rate they resided in it only a brief while.

On Jan. 4, 1844, Lincoln entered into an agreement to purchase from the Rev. Charles Dresser, the minister who had officiated at his marriage, the house at 8th and Jackson streets, which had been erected five years earlier. This was the house that has come to be known as the famous Lincoln home of Springfield. On May 2 of that year the deed was passed, and shortly afterward Lincoln and his little family moved in. For the property the young lawyer gave $1,500. Three hundred dollars of this was covered by the transfer by Lincoln to the minister of a small shop opposite the public square. That there was a $900 mortgage on the property he was purchasing Lincoln was aware, although it was not mentioned in the deed. He was confident that the Rev. Mr. Dresser would pay off the mortgage, which he finally did. The lot upon which stood the newly acquired Lincoln home had a fifty-foot frontage on 8th street and extended for 150 feet along Jackson street.

So here, in this house in 8th street, dwelt the Lincoln family from the spring of 1844 to shortly before it moved to Washington in 1861. It was in this house that the Lincolns were living when their three youngest sons were born; Edward Baker (Eddie) on March 10, 1846; William on Dec. 21, 1850, and Thomas on April 4, 1853. Here also were they dwelling when their second son, Edward, died on Feb. 1, 1850.

The house, as the accompanying floor plans and illustration reveal, was quite modest even after its top half story had been raised to a full second story in 1856. Though boasting of nothing in the way of architectural grandeur and somewhat limited in space and facilities, it was far better than the average in the Springfield of the forties and fifties. Even when the Lincolns returned from Washington in March, 1849, after the head of the family had served a term in the house of representatives, Springfield was a town of only 4,500 people. Its streets were unpaved and unlighted, and hogs wallowed in mud puddles in front of some of the best residences. While Lincoln was in Washington as a congressman, it might be mentioned here, he rented his Springfield home for a whole year to Cornelius Ludlum for $90, reserving the use of the north room upstairs for the storage of furniture.

The house as originally purchased, and as indicated in the preceding paragraph, was a story and a half in height. Improvements made in 1856 included the raising of the second floor half story to a full story, as already noted. The Illinois State Journal of Jan. 6, 1857, set forth the fact that an "addition to the house on 8th street for A. Lincoln cost $1,300."

Six years prior to this improvement of his house Lincoln decided to build a fence with a brick foundation extending along the front of his property and for a short distance on the Jackson street side. In a memorandum prepared by him on June 8, 1856, he stated that during the previous June bricks had been supplied to him for the fence foundation, so it seems likely that the fence was not completed until some time in 1855, or possibly later. The tall fence undoubtedly made the story-and-a-half cottage appear squat, a fact that might have been responsible for the decision to raise the half story to a full story.

In the yard of the Lincoln home were a barn, or stable, the customary outhouse, and a woodpile. In the barn Lincoln kept his means of traveling from one county seat to another, his heavy-hoofed horse, Old Buck. Also in the barn was kept the family cow when it was not grazing on the grassy plots along the streets of the town. Lincoln curried and fed his horse himself, and took care of and milked the cow. He also was the master of the woodpile, cutting his wood into proper lengths to fit his stoves and toting it into the house to fill the wood box. As the reader already may have suspected, there was no bathroom in the Lincoln home at that time. Springfield folk of the forties and fifties, like those of other communities of that day, did not bathe so frequently as people do today, and when they did bathe they used a common wooden tub.

There were always two or three cats in residence at the Lincoln domicile, but it is not recorded that the family while in Springfield ever possessed a dog. The Lincoln yard was bare of flowers, although once, it is said, the head of the house set out some rose bushes. And only once did Lincoln plant a vegetable garden in his yard. It may have been drouth, weed, bugs, or merely a natural disinclination that discouraged him against any further activity in this line.

The Lincoln home was furnished in the midwestern fashion of the day. Various pieces of furniture, chiefly of the type that has come to be known as early Victorian, were set about the rooms after a strictly square and uniform pattern. There was a stiffness about the appearance of the interiors that was common in virtually all of the homes of the land at that time. Pictures on the walls definitly were not art, even though they were draped with fringed scarfs. Women of the times favored an abundance of knickknacks on mantels and whatnots, and mottoes and various gewgaws upon the walls.

Within this Lincoln home was at least the average amount of family harmony, despite the fact that Mrs. Lincoln frequently displayed violent outbursts of temper and also despite the fact that her husband was subject to moods of distraction and melancholia. Mrs. Lincoln's flareups foreshadowed the complete mental collapse that was to make her later years so tragic. Lincoln's moody spells were not infrequently conquered by his reading of sentimental verse. He was extremely fond of poetry, especially that of a mournful nature.

In the main, however, Lincoln was good-natured and full of fun. He was entirely devoted to his sons, and truly in love with his wife. He liked to romp with the boys, take them for long walks in the country, or haul them about the streets of the town in their little wagon. He never reprimanded the boys, permitted them to do just as they wished, and was deaf and blind to their faults. Folk in Springfield used to say that the Lincoln boys were "spoilt" from too much petting.

So considerate was Lincoln of his wife that whenever a thunderstorm came up while he was in Springfield he would rush home to comfort her. She was fearful of thunder and lightning.

The Lincolns while in Springfield generally employed a woman servant, a maid of all work, who, as was common in those days, was called a hired girl. But they had great difficulty in keeping their hired girls. Mrs. Lincoln quarreled with them, and they quit or threatened to quit. In these cases it was Lincoln who smoothed things over. He usually took the side of the hired girl, but he was always tactful in the matter, for he feared the wrath of his wife. It is said that on one occasion he induced a hired girl to remain in his employ by secretly paying her a dollar a week extra.

The Lincoln table more often than not was scantily supplied with food, despite the fact that the master of the house was a hearty eater. He preferred simple fare, such as the corn cakes mentioned in the beginning of this article, and he often would eat between meals during the course of the day. Mrs. Lincoln, so the biographers say, skimped on the table in order to have money to spend on clothing for herself and her boys. It was not the practice of the Lincolns to invite friends to dinner, although Mrs. Lincoln often gave parties and frequently entertained woman friends in her home in the afternoons. At these afternoon gatherings she would call in her sons, nicely dressed for the occasion, and induce them to recite verses for the entertainment of the guests.

On certain occasions, when life was not running too smoothly at home or when he was in the midst of one of his spells of distraction, Lincoln would take his breakfast to his office. Cheese, crackers, and bologna sausage were his favorite foods for these office breakfasts.

In his later years in Springfield Lincoln was away from home about six months of every year, traveling from one county seat to another to try law cases. Though he constantly was making new acquaintances, meeting all types of persons, and creating a legion of friends, he never fell into the habits of the ordinary politicians of his times. That is, he never drank intoxicating liquors and he never smoked. He was a gool fellow out of sheer strength of personality. When his legal duties permitted him to remain in Springfield he spent a majority of hi evenings in his own home. Returning from his office of an evening, he would shed his coat, hi necktie, and his shoes an stretch out in comfort on th floor. As a further concessio to comfort he generally woul slip one of his suspended strap off a shoulder, going about wit his pants held up by only on "gallus," as he called it. Whe visitors would knock at the doo Lincoln would greet them in hi stocking feet.

As pointed out before, Lincol was fond of sentimental vers He also was an avid reader o the newspapers. His favorit form of entertainment was Negro minstrel. He generall attended alone.

To meet the expenses incurre by his family, to keep up hi house, and to pay for his trave ing about the country, Lincol of course, had his fees as a lawyer to fall back upon. The lat Senator Albert J. Beveridge, i writing about attorneys' fees o the forties and fifties in his biography of Lincoln, says that the were usually from $10 to $5 since the general run of case and the work required deserve no greater compensation. Cl ents as a rule gave their note to cover the amounts of the fee and these easily were sold at moderate discount by the lawyers to storekeepers and propr etors of taverns.

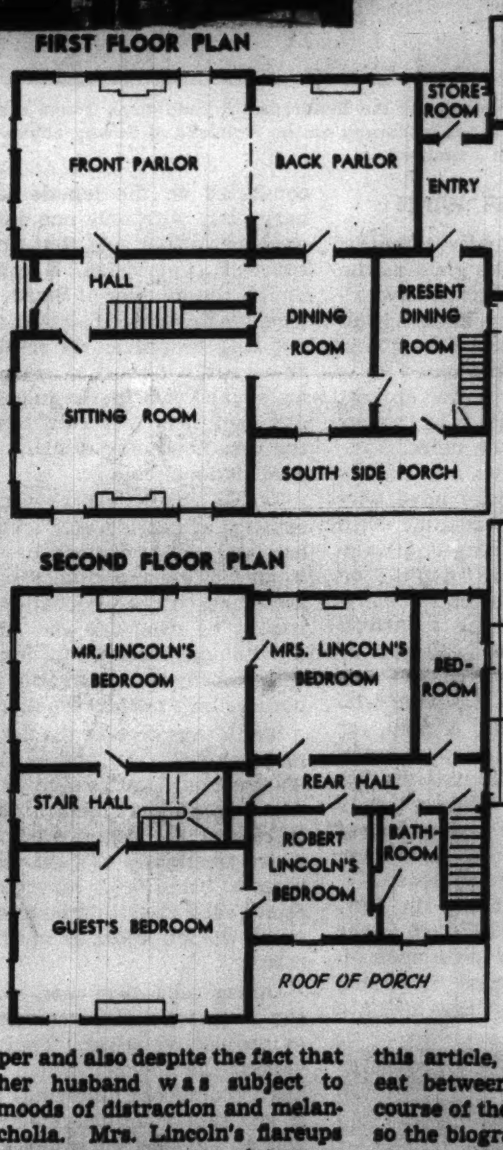
Although Lincoln's early year in Springfield were lean ones i deed, the last decade that h dwelt there revealed him as man of substance. In fact, fo the times he came to be consi ered as quite prosperous. I addition to his income as a lawyer he is believed to have mad some money in dealing in res estate on a relatively modes scale. At one time or anothe he was the owner of conside able real property, and whe ever he obtained surplus fund he invested them conservativel but profitably. At the time h was nominated for the presiden cy he was worth in excess o $10,000, a respectable sum fo the period.

Lincoln frequently lent money occasionally making loans without taking mortgages for security. His largest loan was mad in 1859, when he lent to Norma B. Judd of Chicago the sum o $3,000. The loan was for fiv years and carried an interes rate of 10 per cent a year. I was not paid off, however, unti after the death of Lincoln. A the time of his leaving Springfield to become President, Lincoln had $4,430 invested in mortgages and personal notes, number of pieces of real estate and $600 in cash in a bank.

For the benefit of those wh may wonder what happened t the sons of Lincoln: Edward Baker Lincoln, as previously mentioned, died Feb. 1, 1850 while the family was residing i Springfield. Diphtheria was th cause of his death. William Wallace Lincoln died Feb. 20, 1862 while his father was President He died of an acute malarial infection. Thomas Lincoln, bette known as Tad, lived to be 1 years old, dying of pleurisy o July 15, 1871. Robert Todd Lincoln, the eldest son, survived until July 25, 1926. He wa nearly 83 years old when h died. Mrs. Lincoln, the widow died July 16, 1882.



Plans of the first and second floors of the Lincoln home as they are today, little changed from earlier days.

The bathroom was installed after Lincoln left Springfield in 1861, according to Dr. Paul M. Angle, secretary of the Illinois State Historical society.

Eyes Right for Beauty

By ELEANOR NANGLE

TIME can take the bloom off your complexion, the firmness from your contours, and the color from your hair, but it can't do a blessed thing to your eyes if you grow old with consummate grace and stick to eye beauty resolutions.

There are many important do's and don'ts for keeping your eyes bright, healthy, and beautiful, the vital accent of your face.

You should:

Wear glasses if you need them.

Have an annual eye test.

Be particular about the light by which you read and work and sensible about strain.

Bathe the eyes daily with a good lotion.

Use pads saturated in warm water when your eyes feel tired. Follow with cold water or lotion.

Brush brows and lashes daily.

Pat a rich cream into the thin skin around the lids nightly.

Remember that the line of your brow should follow the line of your lips.

We hope you'll never be tempted, but if you are, don't:

Attempt to dye your own lashes or brows.

Read or knit on jolting trains or buses.

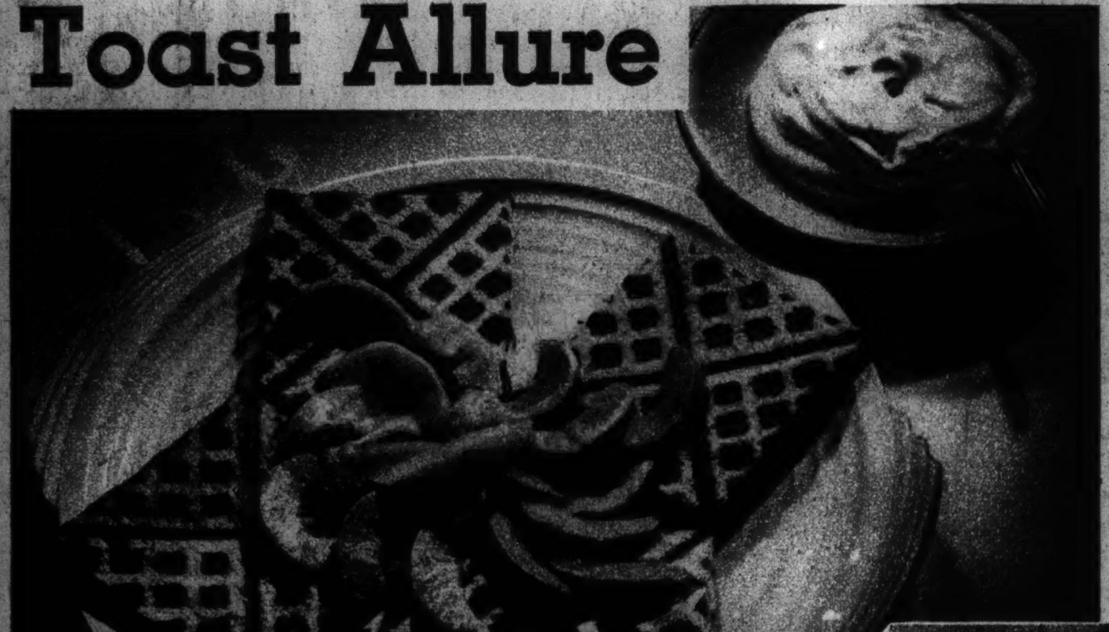
Pluck brows to a thin line.

Use eyebrow pencil in a straight line across the brows. Short up-and-down strokes are much better in effect.

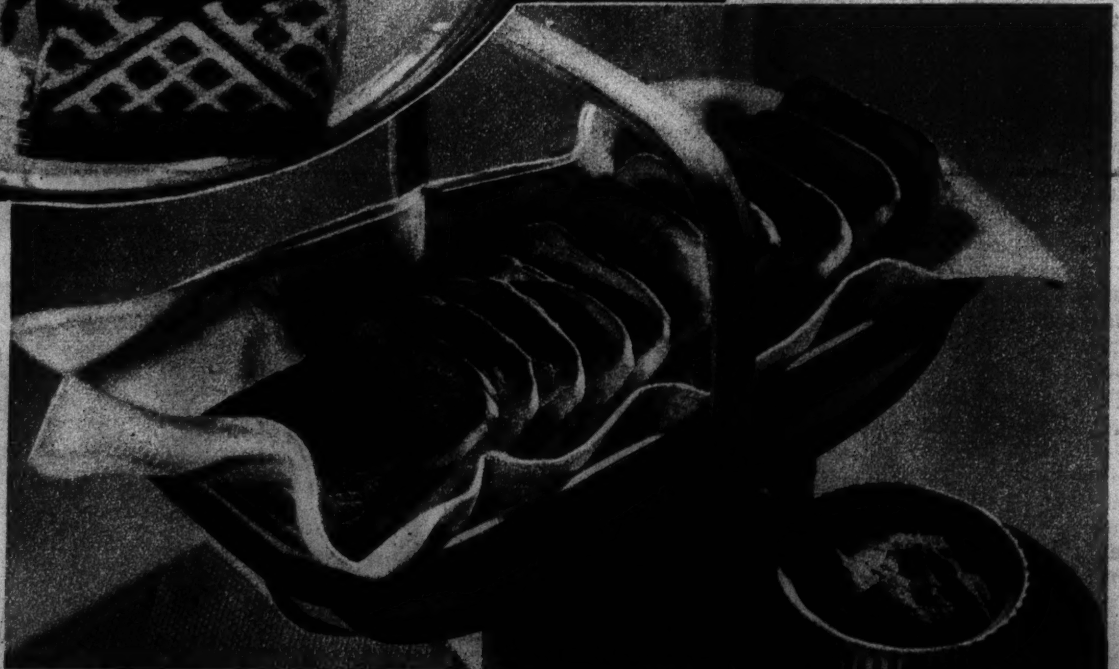
Acquire facial mannerisms! It's giving the lines a head start in the wrong direction!

Eye makeup doesn't mean that Eadie isn't a lady! Subtle eye dramatisation, with the deft use of mascara, shadow, and brow pencil is now one of the most important phases of the business of making oneself picturesque.

Toast Allure



Think these are waffles? They aren't. They're slices of bread "waffled" and served with peaches for breakfast.



Cinnamon toast may be made in several ways. This method of serving it is adapted to the automatic toaster.

By MARY MEADE

BREAKFAST can be monotonous. In the morning we all like a few extra minutes in a warm bed, and for that reason breakfast is neglected. A glass of orange juice, a slice of toast, and a cup of coffee is often all there is time for. Morning after morning this standard breakfast is consumed, just because it's easiest to prepare.

But the toast at least can be modified in form from morning to morning to make breakfast more pleasurable and less businesslike. These two morning toasts won't take much more time than plain toast, and they're a good deal more interesting.

To make waffled bread as pictured, trim the crusts from bread slices and brush both sides of each slice with melted butter. Place in a hot waffle iron and toast until brown and crisp. Cover with sliced canned peaches or sliced fresh fruit and serve with sweetened whipped cream. Or serve the waffled slices spread with apple sauce, covered with scrambled eggs, or by themselves, accompanied by jam or jelly.

Cinnamon toast may be made in several ways. If you make toast in the oven, keep a mixture of sugar and cinnamon on hand. Sprinkle this over hot buttered toast and return the toast to the oven for a moment to let sugar and cinnamon melt into the butter.

If you make toast in an automatic toaster at the table, have a mixture of confectioners' sugar, butter, and cinnamon ready to spread on the hot slices. Enough topping for ten slices of toast can be made by creaming 4 tablespoons of butter and working in 4 tablespoons confectioners' sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, and 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Automatic Pilots Guide Modern Airliners

Gyroscopes Take Burden Off Human Shoulders

By WAYNE THOMIS

A TWO-MAN crew has come to be required the world over for the flying of large multi-engined airplanes, whether these be commercial or military craft. Moreover, as ranges and speeds of these machines have increased, the duties of the two flyers have become manifold and so involved that every effort is being made to relieve them of mental and physical strain wherever possible.

The result has been the admission to the cockpits of the newer and better equipped airplanes of an inanimate but highly efficient third crew member — the automatic pilot. This tireless mechanism, capable of far more precise flying than the best human pilot, today is assuming most of the burden of actually controling large airplanes once these craft are in the air.

The human crews are allowed to turn their attention to their engines, which under current operating technique require constant adjustments to deliver maximum efficiency; to navigation, to radio communication with ground station and reception of radio navigation signals, to observation and evaluation of weather conditions, and to a study of the two hundred-odd instruments which tell how every part of the modern airliner is behaving.

What, you ask, is an automatic pilot?

It is a device which keeps an airplane on a predetermined course at a predetermined altitude without the touch of a human hand. It detects the slightest departure of the aircraft from its proper track and acts simultaneously to correct the controls.

There are several different manufacturers throughout the world building these devices, but the most successful, without question, has been developed and virtually perfected by the Sperry Gyroscope company of Brooklyn, N. Y. Similar instruments are built by British, German, and Italian concerns.

The Sperry gyropilot was created about 1930 by combining two important blind-flying instruments, both of which were operated through small high-speed gyroscopes. One of these instruments is the directional gyro, a supplement to the magnetic compass. The other is the gyrohorizon, which creates for a pilot an artificial horizon as a point of reference for flying at times when the natural horizon is obscured by fog or cloud.

To understand the gyropilot it is best to know how and why these two blind-flying instruments operate.

Accurate steering in an airplane requires a fixed point of reference, such as a star, the sun, or a mountain. These may be used as points of comparison with the airplane's course. But in flying such fixed points seldom are found, and in the early days pilots depended upon the magnetic compass.

Practice showed that the slightest deviation from a straight course sends the compass card or needle to oscillating, and this oscillation does not cease until after the airplane has been flying a straight, level course for some time. The directional gyro was created to provide an instrument that, regardless of the attitude of the airplane, would show whether the plane was turning or flying straight, and the degree of the turn.

A gyroscope was the obvious answer to this. A compass card was attached to a small gyroscope operated by a stream of air admitted through a pilot tube. The tendency of the gyroscope to stand still kept the card still as the airplane turned about it.

Thus the directional gyro remains fixed, does not oscillate. By watching the card a pilot can steer accurately any heading, even in rough air. Precise turns can be made and stopped at any desired heading, as the instrument responds instantly, without lag.

The gyrohorizon was designed to be the nearest approach to the natural horizon which a pilot uses to determine his position in the air when flying in clear weather. The gyroscope is attached to a pointer bar on the face of the instrument. A small airplane is painted in silhouette on the glass face of the dial in front of the bar. As the airplane in which this instrument is installed banks, climbs, or glides, the silhouette does likewise in reference to the pointer bar, which is held exactly horizontal by the gyroscope.

In fog, darkness, or any bad-weather condition it is only necessary to keep the silhouette in line with the pointer bar in order to maintain proper flight.

Maj. James H. Doolittle, then a crack test pilot for the army air corps, proved the accuracy and precision of these two instruments in a series of exhaustive service flights in 1929. It was later that same year that the Sperry company began combining the two to form the prototype of the present gyropilot.

The only addition necessary to the two instruments was a system which enabled the gyroscopes in them to actuate the airplane controls and thus correct for deviations from level flight. This actuation system when finally worked out was quite simple.

The gyroscopes which form the directional gyro and the gyrohorizon spin at about 12,000 r.p.m. under the impulse supplied by a stream of air. As the airplane banks or turns these air streams are arranged so that they open and close valves of a hydraulic system filled with oil under pressure of about 200 pounds to the square inch.

The oil thus provides the power for moving the airplane controls. Adjustment of the amount of oil allowed past the various valves determines the amount of control movement. The gyrohorizon unit controls the ailerons and elevators and the directional gyro unit controls the rudder in the gyropilot.

There are manual controls—knobs—on the face of the automatic pilot unit which enable the human pilots to change the flight of their ship as desired. With the automatic pilot still in command of the airplane it is possible to put the machine into shallow or steep banks, climbs, or glides at will.

The men most familiar with the latest system of instrument landing of airliners down an ultra-high-frequency radio beam plan to use the gyropilot in exactly this fashion in making their landings, because they find that their flying is more precise and accurate when done with the aid of the automatic pilot.

The entire pilot unit weighs but sixty pounds in its present form. This has been pared down from an original weight of 200 pounds when experiments first were conducted. The rotors or gyroscopes in a modern automatic pilot unit spin at the rate of about 12,000 r.p.m., are about two inches in diameter, and weigh approximately three-quarters of a pound each.

Finest of machining is required in their manufacture, and they also need the best of care in use and frequent maintenance. Surveys show that transport pilots are using the automatic pilots under all conditions. United Air Lines reports that its gyropilots fly the airplanes in which they are installed 85 per cent of the time the machines are in the air.

The human pilots now make merely the takeoffs and landings, and the latter may soon be made entirely automatic.

In addition to the country's commercial air lines, the army and navy air corps are good Sperry customers. All the army's new bombers from the four-engined "flying fortress" types to the twin-engined Douglas B-18s which are just going into service are fitted with gyropilots. More than 100 of the pilots have also been sold to other countries.

First experiments were begun in 1909, but not until four years ago were the devices sold commercially. One "co-piloted" the late Wiley Post on his world flight five years ago.

The Zoo's Artful Prima Donna

itself better than when she takes it into her woolly head to go climbing. (She has numerous large tree branches and log piles in her spacious pen for the purpose.) As her awkward body labors up the trunks her spirit is plainly soaring even higher—dangerously higher. If only her body were as agile as her winged spirit all would be well—but the flesh is weak, and always there comes a place beyond which her blithely coördinated physique is not capable of taking her. Suddenly there is a giddy feeling of impending disaster—a frantic clutching of panda claws against bark, a gasp of dismay, and the very bottom seems to drop out of the world as Miss Su-lin plummets into a sprawly heap on terra firma.

Speaking of a gasp, Su-lin's voice is something which many of her fondest admirers don't know about. She is a bit prima-donna-ish about using it in public and reserves it mainly to stave off boredom during the long hours when she is left alone, or to hail a passing friend. But she is a capable mimic and can imitate both a dog and a horse to perfection. Yes, she has a bark, and it comes in mighty handy when one's stomach is yerning for another dish of celery and nobody seems to realize the fact. And as for a whinny, you'd think there was a pony in that pen on the brisk wintry mornings when the winsome lady saunters outside and inhales a delicious draft of fresh air.

Did somebody mention celery? There's a dish that pleases a panda palate to perfection. The orthodox diet for giant pandas, according to authorities who have studied Su-lin's forbears in her native Chinese highlands, is bamboo shoots. But Su-lin thinks that the folks back in the old country would all switch to celery if they only knew. She won't eat bamboo at all, but takes to celery with a frenzy that would make your hair curl. And carrots! According to Mr. Bean, "The perfect panda bait is carrots." And Su-lin would never deny it. When carrots are in the offing she is too busy to deny anything.

Apples, rice, breakfast food, milk, alfalfa, green cornstalks, and plain grass are other items on Su-lin's menu, and she has lapped up a daily dose of cod liver oil since she was a baby. White grapes are a treat that she is allowed now and then if she is a good girl, and once in a while Mr. Bean, in the spirit of research, has tried giving her meat or fish. She once ate a helping of hamburger and once fell for a dish of salmon — but only once. At heart she is just another vegetarian, the only difference between her and others being that she has a tendency to be emotional about it.

In table manners Su-lin is not famous for her daintiness, but rather prefers to play with her food and dabble in her milk like many another spoiled child. She is a model of neatness in sanitary matters, however, and, in spite of never having been told about such things by her mother or anybody else, she is as nearly house-broken as it is possible for her to be.

She sleeps as close to the door as she can get, even on cold winter nights—for, being encased in the woolliest sleeping bag that anybody ever had, she has no fear of the cold. All day she fools around out of doors in her big yard, sometimes sleeping on a log, most of the time just showing off. She came from a long line of ancestors who adhered to the creed of nocturnalism quite strictly, but Su-lin never saw things their way. "I don't care if I am first cousin to a raccoon," she long ago said to herself. "Nothing happens around here at night, and I would be foolish to sit up all night and then have to sleep in the daytime when I have company and things to do and—best of all—a chance at a dish of celery or maybe carrots." And so Su-lin is no more nocturnal than a sunflower, in spite of her heritage.

Some people have the idea that giant pandas are delicate animals. It may be true of others, but it's certainly not true of Su-lin. She can stand practically any temperature, because her wool acts as insulation against heat as well as cold, and her limp flexibility of body makes her impervious to the frequent shocks of her rough-and-tumble life. So far she hasn't ever been ill in the slightest degree, and the only times she has even been uncomfortable were on hot, damp days. Being dressed for the high altitudes of southwestern China, it is natural that she should feel a little stuffy when the sultry mugginess of Lake Michigan sogs into her nostrils. Now, however, an air-conditioning unit has been installed in her apartment, so that the management need not feel that they have given her even the slightest cause for complaint.

Why all this fuss over a raccoon's cousin? Is it because Su-lin is valued at about $10,000? Yes, partly—but even more it is because she has a personality that has caught the public fancy more universally than that of any animal since Jumbo the elephant. Toy pandas and panda picture books are being sold all over the country and in foreign lands—all because of Su-lin. And in large measure it is Su-lin's extraordinary sense of showmanship that has done it. She is a natural performer who can be relied on to keep a crowd in stitches as long as they can stand and watch her. She never fails. And with it all, in spite of her increasingly formidable size and her big teeth, she extends a friendly welcome to anybody who will enter her cage to play with her. If she sometimes gets too rough and frightens people a bit (she nipped a lady visitor the other day) it is only because of her youthful excitement and the difficulties of controling her 120 pounds of loose-jointed exuberance.

Summing her up, she is far and away the most precious inmate of the zoo at Brookfield and has a firm hold on the heartstrings of the world. But the big question is: Are all giant pandas like Su-lin, or is she just an odd psychological case?

Nobody knows the answer to this puzzler right now, but you have no doubt heard of the new little girl panda who is due to arrive at Brookfield from China some time very soon. She may cast some light on Su-lin's character. Certainly after this new baby is installed and starts to grow up, Su-lin will have to mind her p's and carrots—for at last the alienists will really have something to go on.

Su-lin exercises on one of her many legs.

A Six-Story Shovel That Digs for Coal

The 2,500,000-pound, $450,000 Bucyrus-Erie electric shovel at Buckheart mine near Canton, Ill. Its size is indicated by the crowd watching it. It scoops up 1,800 cubic yards of earth and shale an hour to lay bare a rich vein of coal.

HAVE a typical Chicagoan describe a coal mine. The chances are that he will paint in dull black a word picture of underground galleries, roofed with slate or limestone, through which move little cars drawn by solemn, ill-tempered mules. In side passages will crouch begrimed workmen, lights above the visors of their caps, who swing short picks and bend creaking backs to their shovels as they win from the unwilling earth the precious fuel that makes modern civilization possible.

That is mining as it is practiced in the deep shafts of England and Pennsylvania and in the mountainsides of West Virginia and Kentucky. But turn to the newest mine in Illinois, the only one opened in the state during 1937, and the picture will be no more like that than a huge naval gun is like a toy pistol.

This Buckheart mine, which has been called the most efficient in the world, lies six miles southwest of Canton in Fulton county. Its coal is mined in the open air. There are no underground passages, no crouching, no exhausting bending of labor's back, no black damp, and no ever-present fear of the cave-in. One of the principal dangers of the Buckheart miner is that he may get sunburned.

Traditional methods of mining could not be followed in this section even if mine operators wished to—which they don't. A solid seam of coal five to six feet thick underlies many thousands of Fulton county's acres. Over it is thirty to sixty feet of earth, limestone, and shale. Engineers learned more than fifty years ago that the proper way to mine this excellent coal was to clear away the overburden of inert material and take the coal from the top.

The method is known as strip mining. It has many advantages over the underground digging. It is safer for men at work and it permits the recovery of 90 per cent of the fuel which nature stored in past eons, compared to the 50 or 60 per cent average in the deep mines. And it is, under favorable conditions, the lowest-cost mining of all.

It took courage to open Buckheart in 1937. The existing facilities for production of bituminous coal the country over were regarded as superabundant. Government was striving to limit the freedom of mine operators, to stabilize prices at levels that would keep marginal producers in business. Labor was making sharp demands.

But the management (the mine is owned by the United Electric Coal company, which has other large holdings in Illinois and Indiana) figured that with modern machinery adapted to the job Buckheart would be a success. It spent $1,500,000 in getting the equipment ready, and in late November production was started.

Stripping away of the overburden is done by a mammoth electric shovel. It weighs two and a half million pounds and has a dipper or bucket of thirty cubic yards capacity; in that bucket thirty men can stand without crowding. The dipper handle is 72 feet long and the boom 108 feet from end to end. There are only five of these huge shovels in existence, all in the strip mining fields, and engineers call them without qualification "the largest pieces of machinery that move on the earth's surface." A large railroad locomotive weighs only a quarter as much.

With a single bite the shovel lifts forty tons of material, swings it aside, and dumps it. The operator, comfortably seated in a cab, turns electric controls, swings the dipper back, raises another load the same size; minute by minute he repeats the whole process. The rated work capacity of this shovel under the conditions at Buckheart is 1,600 cubic yards an hour. And it doesn't have to dump its earth and shale at a low level; the dipper can lift its load 74½ feet—say, as high above the shovel base as a six-story building.

In effect this huge machine cuts a ditch in the earth that is fifty feet wide at the bottom. The bottom is the solid seam of coal. As the stripper moves on with its ditch digging another shovel takes up the work of loading the coal after it has been shattered by explosive charges. Large, too, this shovel, but a pigmy compared to the stripper.

Its dipper lifts five to seven tons at a swoop and dumps it into a fifty-ton truck. Once loaded, the trucks transport the coal to the mine house, where it is washed—a simple misnomer for an elaborate treatment that removes slate, stone, and other impurities and grades the fuel by size. It is then dried by machinery. In the final step the finished product moves into the tipple and is dumped into freight cars waiting below.

Through the whole process, from the beginning of the stripping to the shipment of the fuel, there is a minimum of hand work. The trucks dump automatically into conveyors that carry the coal to the washery. Machinery and gravity together send it down to the cars.

According to Louis Ware, president of the operating company, the costly machinery (if you want to buy one of the stripping shovels alone the price is about $450,000) has justified itself. Buckheart in its first month produced 40,000 tons; its annual capacity to produce exceeds a million tons.

"But production, of course, will depend on the rate at which we are able to sell coal," said Mr. Ware. "The machinery is so efficient that it cuts mining costs to a low level. Something like this was needed to bring the Fulton-Peoria section back as a large producer. Its underground mines were distanced by those in southern Illinois, which were highly mechanized some years ago.

"New, modern strip mines will again win this section its full share of the business that naturally belongs to it. Ours is mining in a lovely setting, with miners working seven hours a day and earning from $6 to $10 in that time. Many of them are farmers who find it possible to combine their work on the soil with their labor at Buckheart.

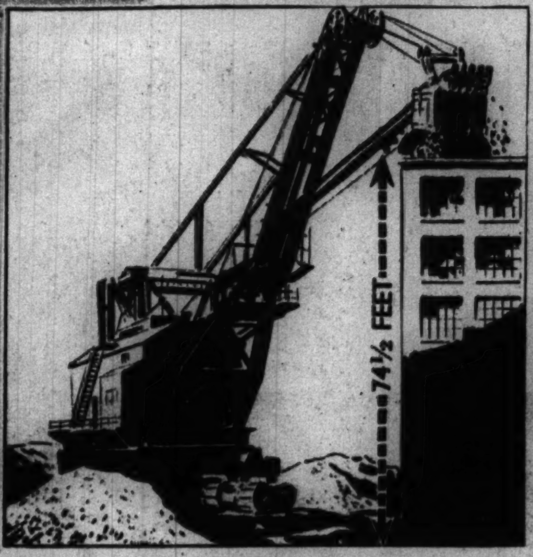
"I have done both underground and strip mining in many parts of the United States and in South America, and I am sure there is no place in the world that offers such splendid conditions for the strip miner as the strip mines of the middle west. They are far safer for personnel than the older mines. Accidents are fewer and less tragic, and the open air makes for health."

Used in 'Strip' Mine Where Sunburn Is Danger

Despite the low costs of its operations, Buckheart cannot sell its output at prices below those of less efficient operators. Under the Guffey-Vinson act the government has set up a bituminous coal commission which specifies prices at which coal must be sold in all markets. This system of regulation went into effect on Dec. 15. Many experts believe that its stringent provisions will make it more difficult to keep coal from losing ground to other fuels, particularly oil and natural gas. The minimum price prevents the more efficient operators from passing their savings on to consumers.



The shovel could dump its load on the roof of a six-story building.

For many years it has been assumed that strip mining makes deserts of the regions in which it is practiced. Frequently it has been charged that it defaces the countryside, once fair and fertile, into lumpy hillocks bare of vegetation and separated from each other by useless sloughs. The officials of United Electric Coal maintain that the description is overdrawn; even that it is untrue.

"The land comes back fast," said M. M. Moser, vice president in charge of operations. "We restore it in large part. After finishing the stripping and mining the big Bucyrus-Erie shovels we have been talking about go back over the mine. They put the shale and the stone into the holes the coal came from. On top they put the soil. It weathers. We find that excellent crops of sweet clover can be grown on land that was mined ten to twenty years ago.

"Near Danville, along the Vermilion river, a tract of many hundreds of acres has reforested itself, without the aid of man, in two decades. Much of this land is low, and lagoons formed by the digging have filled with water and been stocked with fish.

"The demand for such land, to be used as game preserves, is growing. Some has been leased, and a club at Danville recently purchased 320 acres from us."

His company, Mr. Moser added, is now coöperating with the state forestry department, which believes the stripped-over land can be planted with trees of desirable varieties that will eventually grow into great forests. The first planting on a tract 600 feet wide and a half mile long near Duquoin is to be tried this spring. Part of the expense is to be borne by the mining company.

So we have a new picture of coal mining. A large strip mine in central Illinois lies fallow to the sun. In it work miners, each of whom is able, with the aid of gigantic machines, to win eighty tons of coal a day from the earth. Its executives talk of the beauty of the setting and of forestry. A long way it seems from the underground galleries with the mule cars, in which a miner does well when he averages six to eight tons a day. And in truth a long way it is.

What Became of Cleopatra's Twins?

Editor of the Graphic Section:

The history by John A. Menaugh in The Tribune of Jan. 9 was marvelous. Please in an early issue tell of the twins borne to Antony by Cleopatra. Were they boys? Girls? Or boy and girl? If boys, were they fraternals? JANE GERARD.

55th street at the lake, Chicago.

THE FOREGOING letter refers to a biographical article on Augustus Cæsar, and specifically to a paragraph of this article that told how the Roman conqueror of Egypt spared the lives of the twin children of Mark Antony and Queen Cleopatra after he had put to death Julius Cæsar's son by Cleopatra and Antony's son by his early wife, Fulvia.

The twins in question were a boy and a girl. They were born in the autumn of 40 B. C. and were named Alexander Helios (Alexander the Sun) and Cleopatra Selene (Cleopatra the Moon). Three years later Queen Cleopatra gave birth to a fourth child, a son of Antony, who was named Ptolemy. Her son by Julius Cæsar, usually referred to in history as Cæsarion, also was called Ptolemy.

CLEOPATRA

Immediately after the deaths of Antony and Queen Cleopatra and the conquest of Egypt, the younger Ptolemy, Antony's son, and the younger Cleopatra, one of the twins, were taken to Rome. Later Alexander Helios was transported to Rome, and in the great victory procession there, to celebrate the annexation of Egypt by Rome, Alexander and Cleopatra, the twins, marched as captives.

The three children of Antony and Cleopatra were given refuge in the house of Octavia, the wife whom Antony discarded to marry the Egyptian queen. History reveals that Cleopatra Selene and Alexander Helios grew to adulthood, but is strangely silent as to what became of little Ptolemy. Cleopatra Selene became the wife of Juba, king of Numidia, who later was proclaimed king of Mauretania. These two are known to have been the parents of at least two offspring, Ptolemy, who succeeded to his father's throne in A. D. 19 and later was murdered at the orders of Caligula, emperor of Rome; and Drusilla, who is believed to have become the wife of Antonius Felix, procurator of Judea. Accounts mentioning the later life of Alexander Helios are extremely vague. Some authorities say that he married one Iotapa, thought to have been a princess of Media.

Water Tanks Now Made Attractive

A 2,000,000-GALLON water tank made of the finest and toughest of steels, yet possessing the graceful lines of a Grecian urn, is the latest contribution of modern engineering with its dual emphasis on utility and beauty and symmetry of design.

That the engineer has become acutely conscious of the appearance of his colossal structures is evidenced by the photographs (1) to (3).

Ideal water tanks for municipal use must satisfy two mutually exclusive requirements—they should have a large capacity and supply this water at a constant pressure. Since in any practical water tank a certain drop in pressure cannot be avoided, the trend has been to build tanks so that the deviation from the ideal shall be a minimum.

In order to crystalize our ideas as to how these two factors operate at cross-purposes let us investigate the origin of the water pressure. The pressure of water issuing from a tank of this kind is determined largely by the height of the water column above the point at which water is to be used. The weight of one cubic foot of water is about 62 pounds and if we consider this cubic foot of water confined to a cylinder whose cross-sectional area is one square inch, then the height of the column would be 144 feet. Since pressure is force or weight per unit area (square inch in this case), the pressure of this column of water would be 62 pounds per square inch. The water level of actual tanks is about 100 feet above the city mains and hence the pressure at this point is 43 pounds per square inch, while a 75 foot level would give rise to a pressure of 32 pounds per square inch. If the maximum allowed variation is 10 pounds per square inch, then the water level can change by only 25 feet. Any storage capacity in such a gravity system below this level is not effective capacity.

Some of the common types of storage tanks that have been in use are sketched in the accompanying diagram. The first three tanks have been drawn foi a pressure of 43 pounds per square inch with a maximum variation of 10 pounds per square inch and should be compared with the novel "radial cone bottom" tank. The shaded areas are ineffective storage. The important point to observe is that in the standpipe nearly three-quarters of the volume is wasted, since it lies below the critical level. If the effective volume were the same in all four types of tanks, then the drop in pressure in the standpipe amounts to 43 pounds per square inch, while the others would vary proportionately, reaching a minimum in the radial cone bottom design. The last three sketches illustrate this point.

The problem of developing a water tank to allow most of the volume to be useful yet sufficiently shallow so that the pressure variation does not become intolerant has received serious consideration in the design of the "radial cone bottom" tank.

The first photograph in this article is of a 500,000 gallon colonial design elevated tank with the radial cone bottom erected at Fresno, Cal. It is 65 feet to bottom and 90 feet to the high water line. Here most of the 500,000 gallon capacity is utilized.

The bottom of this newest of tanks has the appearance of the inside of an opened umbrella, the ribs being supported by tubular columns. By allowing the steel between ribs to be curved rather than flat, the engineer is able to utilize to best advantage the tensile strength of steel in supporting the water and to decrease the shearing stresses on the ribs. A flat bottomed tank would necessitate elaborate and hence costly supporting structures. Tanks of this type with dome roofs are amenable to artistic designing and hence may be erected in residential districts where the storage facilities will do the most good.

The development of water tanks of such unusual capacity offers an interesting insight into the problems of municipal engineering. These problems arise from the fact that at present there are two general methods of operating water works systems. First, by direct pumping whereby the water is pumped directly from the source or from ground level storage into the distribution mains. The second method is to utilize the earth's gravitational field by providing elevated storage facilities of sufficient capacity.

Not many cities are favorably located near large bodies of fresh water and must therefore pump water for domestic and industrial use from deep wells into the distribution mains. The serious problem arises of how to maintain the necessary pressure in the pipes and also have on hand an adequate volume of water for fire emergencies. Fire insurance classifications are affected considerably by the fire fighting facilities and by the water works system. Insurance companies normally require a certain fire flow for a definite number of hours over and above the amount of water used for general consumption.

Again municipalities near lakes or rivers experience trouble of this nature. During certain times of the day the rate of consumption of water reaches a peak, which in some instances may be as much as five times the average load. Although the pumping facilities may be adequate to supply the total volume of water consumed if the rate of consumption is normal, they cannot meet the peak load without seriously impairing the efficiency of the equipment.

Herein lies the reasons for the rapid development of elevated storage tanks. With sufficient storage capacity pumps may be operated at a uniform rate with maximum efficiency and thus fill the storage tanks during the night when the load is below average. At peak load the tanks are allowed to float on the distribution mains supplying the needed capacity.

Mostly About Dogs

Bones Can Be Harmful to a Dog

JUST HOW MANY, if any, bones should I give my dog? This question puzzles many a dog owner every year, because there are differences of opinion regarding the need or value of large bones in a dog's life. Some dog owners feel that a dog isn't happy unless it gets a more or less constant supply of large, smooth bones. Others have been told (usually by veterinarians) that a grown dog which is given many bones on which it may gnaw by the hour is bound to suffer from damaged teeth.

If there is any owner who feels that his pet's life is going to be incomplete because it is not given a huge, smooth bone every few days, we want to assure him that an imitation bone or very hard rubber ball is a pretty good substitute. For years we have supplied a very hard rubber ball to one of our large dogs, and as far as we could tell he never was depressed because there wasn't a real bone at hand.

We go along with those veterinarians who advise that too many hard bones for the dog mean wornout teeth at a fairly early age in the dog's life. Years ago we owned a spaniel that was given a lot of bones. This dog would lie on the grass and match his ivory with those bones by the hour. It was great fun for the dog. We do not deny that. But we noticed how quickly the dog's teeth were being worn down. This dog died when only 5 years old. But his teeth were so worn down by his battling the large, hard bones that he looked as if he were 10 years old. Since this experience we have believed that an occasional bone is enough for a dog. A constant supply, on the other hand, apparently does the dog more harm than good. If you will talk to several veterinarians we believe you will find that they maintain the same theory.

When it comes to giving puppies bones it's another story. The pups need them. A bone amuses a pup and also helps him during the teething stage. But after the pups have grown many bones do more harm than good to an average dog. Such being the case, we give our dogs only an occasional bone. If they want something hard which is good for their teeth and gums they get some of those hard biscuits.

DOG NOTE

In Vancouver, B. C., a German shepherd dog saved its master from possible death in an unusual way. The dog's master was driving an 1,800-pound horse when the animal slipped and fell on the man. The man's frantic shouts to the horse failed to stir the frightened animal. The dog then bit the horse on the flanks and forced it to move off of the man's body.

Some Rare Breeds—the Kuvasz

THERE are more than 100 breeds of dogs recognized by the American Kennel club, only about seventy-five of which are at all common. Of these seventy-five the average dog owner would be able to recognize perhaps twenty-five of the best-known breeds. Therefore there are many breeds of dogs recognized by the A. K. C. about which the general public knows very little. For example, we doubt if very many people ever saw a flat-coated retriever, or a Sussex spaniel, or a harrier, Maltese terrier, otterhound, Bouvier des Flandres, Japanese spaniel, Great Pyrenees, border terrier, Kurasz, Skye terrier, Puli sheep dog, or papillon.

Believing that there are many dog owners who want to become better acquainted with some of these uncommon breeds, this department plans to publish pictures and short descriptions of some of them.

The Kuvasz is the first one. It was recognized by the Kennel club in 1935. It's a large white dog which reminds one in some respects of the St. Bernard. The Kuvasz, however, is smaller and its head isn't so massive. This sturdy breed comes from Hungary, although its ancestors are of Tibetan origin. Originally owned exclusively by royalty and high officials, the name Kuvasz was given to these dogs because they were "guardians of the lords."

The strong body of the Kuvasz, combined with the natural beauty of its white coat, makes it outstanding in appearance. In Hungary, where these dogs are used as guardians, their alertness and fidelity were developed to a high degree. The dogs also have been used for work with cattle and sheep.

The coat of the Kuvasz is pure white. If a yellow saddle is found on a Kuvasz it is considered a fault. A male should stand about 28 inches high. The general appearance of the Kuvasz is that of a tall dog with good muscles, well proportioned throughout, with no physical features overemphasized. The appearance must evidence force, courage, agility, and endurance. The facial expression must be intelligent and good-natured but watchful toward strangers.

COLLEGE TABLE BOARD

Arthur, the pledge, is late for dinner and is offering the head of the house a very poor excuse. Something about noticing a spot of ink on his finger and rushing back to the dorm to clean it off. Arthur is a "legacy," and is one of those unattractive pledges who never get away with anything.

Commons is crowded today and Frank will probably have to take the seat at the professor's table just vacated by the English instructor, right bang up next Professor Finberg of the romance languages department, worse luck. Frank and Finny had a slight argument last week and Frank told Finny he didn't know how to teach French, and there is a coolness.

Lester earns his board at the fraternity house by washing dishes. He knows just how much dried egg can be scratched off a fork with the fingernail to save washing. Should a brother complain about congealed food on a cup or plate, Les will say, "Yeah? It's cleaner than your hands ever get!"

Harry is the card of the freshman class, the practical joker and self panicker. At Commons he shakes with glee after putting salt in a friend's coffee. Goes wild with joy when the waiter slips on a pat of butter!

Sunday breakfast at the "House," showing the brother who is bright and cheery much too early in the day. Tells the two hangovers from Saturday night parties how he stayed home and got to bed early and feels just dandy. When some one grumbles because the eggs aren't on the table, he will say, "All things come to them that wait," and laughs happily. Very depressing.

Sunday night supper. The boys at the Iota Epsilon House get it themselves and, boy, it's just Heaven for the "make-your-own" amateur cooks. Three-decker sandwiches with everything and anything between layers.

Some of the boys prefer the college cafeteria at which Hazel, the beautiful cashier, works. Hazel dresses just like a co-ed, only much more so, and is so vivacious that sleepy late risers can hardly bear it at breakfast time. Hazel is given to short-changing, but that's because she is in love with the man who runs the pants pressing parlor. That's what love does.

Fraternity alumnus who shows up around dinner time and has to be entertained. Likes to linger at table and reminisce about the time he and old Chuck Dowdy broke into chemistry lab and stole Doc Thorne's pants and left them on Mrs. Prexy's front stoop, etc., etc.

These brothers are huddled up at one end of the dinner table trying to decide whether to give Mrs. De Lousy, the house mother, a $5, $10 or $20 birthday gift. Will her feelings be hurt at anything under $20, etc., etc. Some say $5 is too much and the discussion gets pretty heated. Ends in a loud uproar when a tactless freshman brother asks, "Why give the old bum anything?"

Does Cupid Haunt the Campus?

Smith college girls of an earlier day play tennis, but without the revealing clothes freedom of modern coeds.

overnight from the campus only seven nights a semester (with the exception of the regular holiday seasons). She may go wherever she pleases, but not more than seven times.

"If they have to have more than seven nights out," calmly elucidated Dr. William Allan Neilson, the beloved, erudite little president of Smith, as he jerked up his knees and jutted out his white goatee, "we get rid of them. They can . . . umph"—with contempt—"go to Vassar!"

That may have much or little to do with the fact that few Smith girls marry while in college. Mrs. Scales cited four last winter, four during the summer. All withdrew. Four seniors now are married, two having married during the summer, one during her junior year, the fourth in her freshman year.

"We drop girls for getting married if they don't tell us," President Neilson said, "as you can easily see that secret marriages, with men hanging around, place the girls in an ambiguous position.

"We insist, too, on knowing what the arrangements will be if they stay on here. They have to convince us it is a working arrangement, but"—gayly—"we don't lose our hair because a girl gets married."

The one stipulation, he said, is that the marriage have parental approval.

The average Smith graduate, statistics show, marries at the age of 26 or 27, five years after graduation. Her husband is a business or professional man. She will have 2.6 children.

Not always has this been true. Fifty years ago only every other graduate married. But since the beginning of the century there apparently has been a marital swing toward the highly educated woman.

A few flat statistics show this:

Of the class of 1890, 47.6 per cent were married during the 40 years following graduation.

Of the class of 1900, 58.91 per cent were married during the 30 years following graduation.

Of the class of 1910, 60.35 per cent were married during the 20 years subsequent to commencement.

Of the class of 1920, 73.2 per cent were married by 1930.

Of the class of 1927, 66.5 per cent now are married. (This was found in a scrutiny of class files; a scientific questionnaire, authorities say, would reveal a much higher percentage.)

Of the class of 1932 (using the same unscientific method), 56.5 per cent now are married, five years after graduation.

These facts, officials believe, forever refute the charge that women's colleges breed a race of vinegar-veined spinsters.

Many Smith girls (although probably not so many as coeds) are engaged before the end of their senior years, engaged to those same young gallants from Amherst, Yale, Dartmouth, and elsewhere, who have been courting them so assiduously across the hills and hollows of New England. But of the class of 1927 only 12 were married their first year out of college.

Smith college officially takes little notice of either marriage or engagement. It doesn't even offer a course in domestic science for its future brides. All it brags about is that there are few dismissals for academic reasons—and Smith's standards are high. It smiles, too, at its low divorce rate. ("I hope," said Warden Scales, "it means that it is a group that is more intelligent in handling its life in general.") It gives proud confirmation to the fact that most of its girls wait until they have diplomas to marry their men.

"Well, of course, that's the way it is," came the pert, gay comment of Avis Bailey, a junior from Evanston, Ill., who has a beau in every nearby college. "If I wanted a husband, you know, I'd go to a state university.

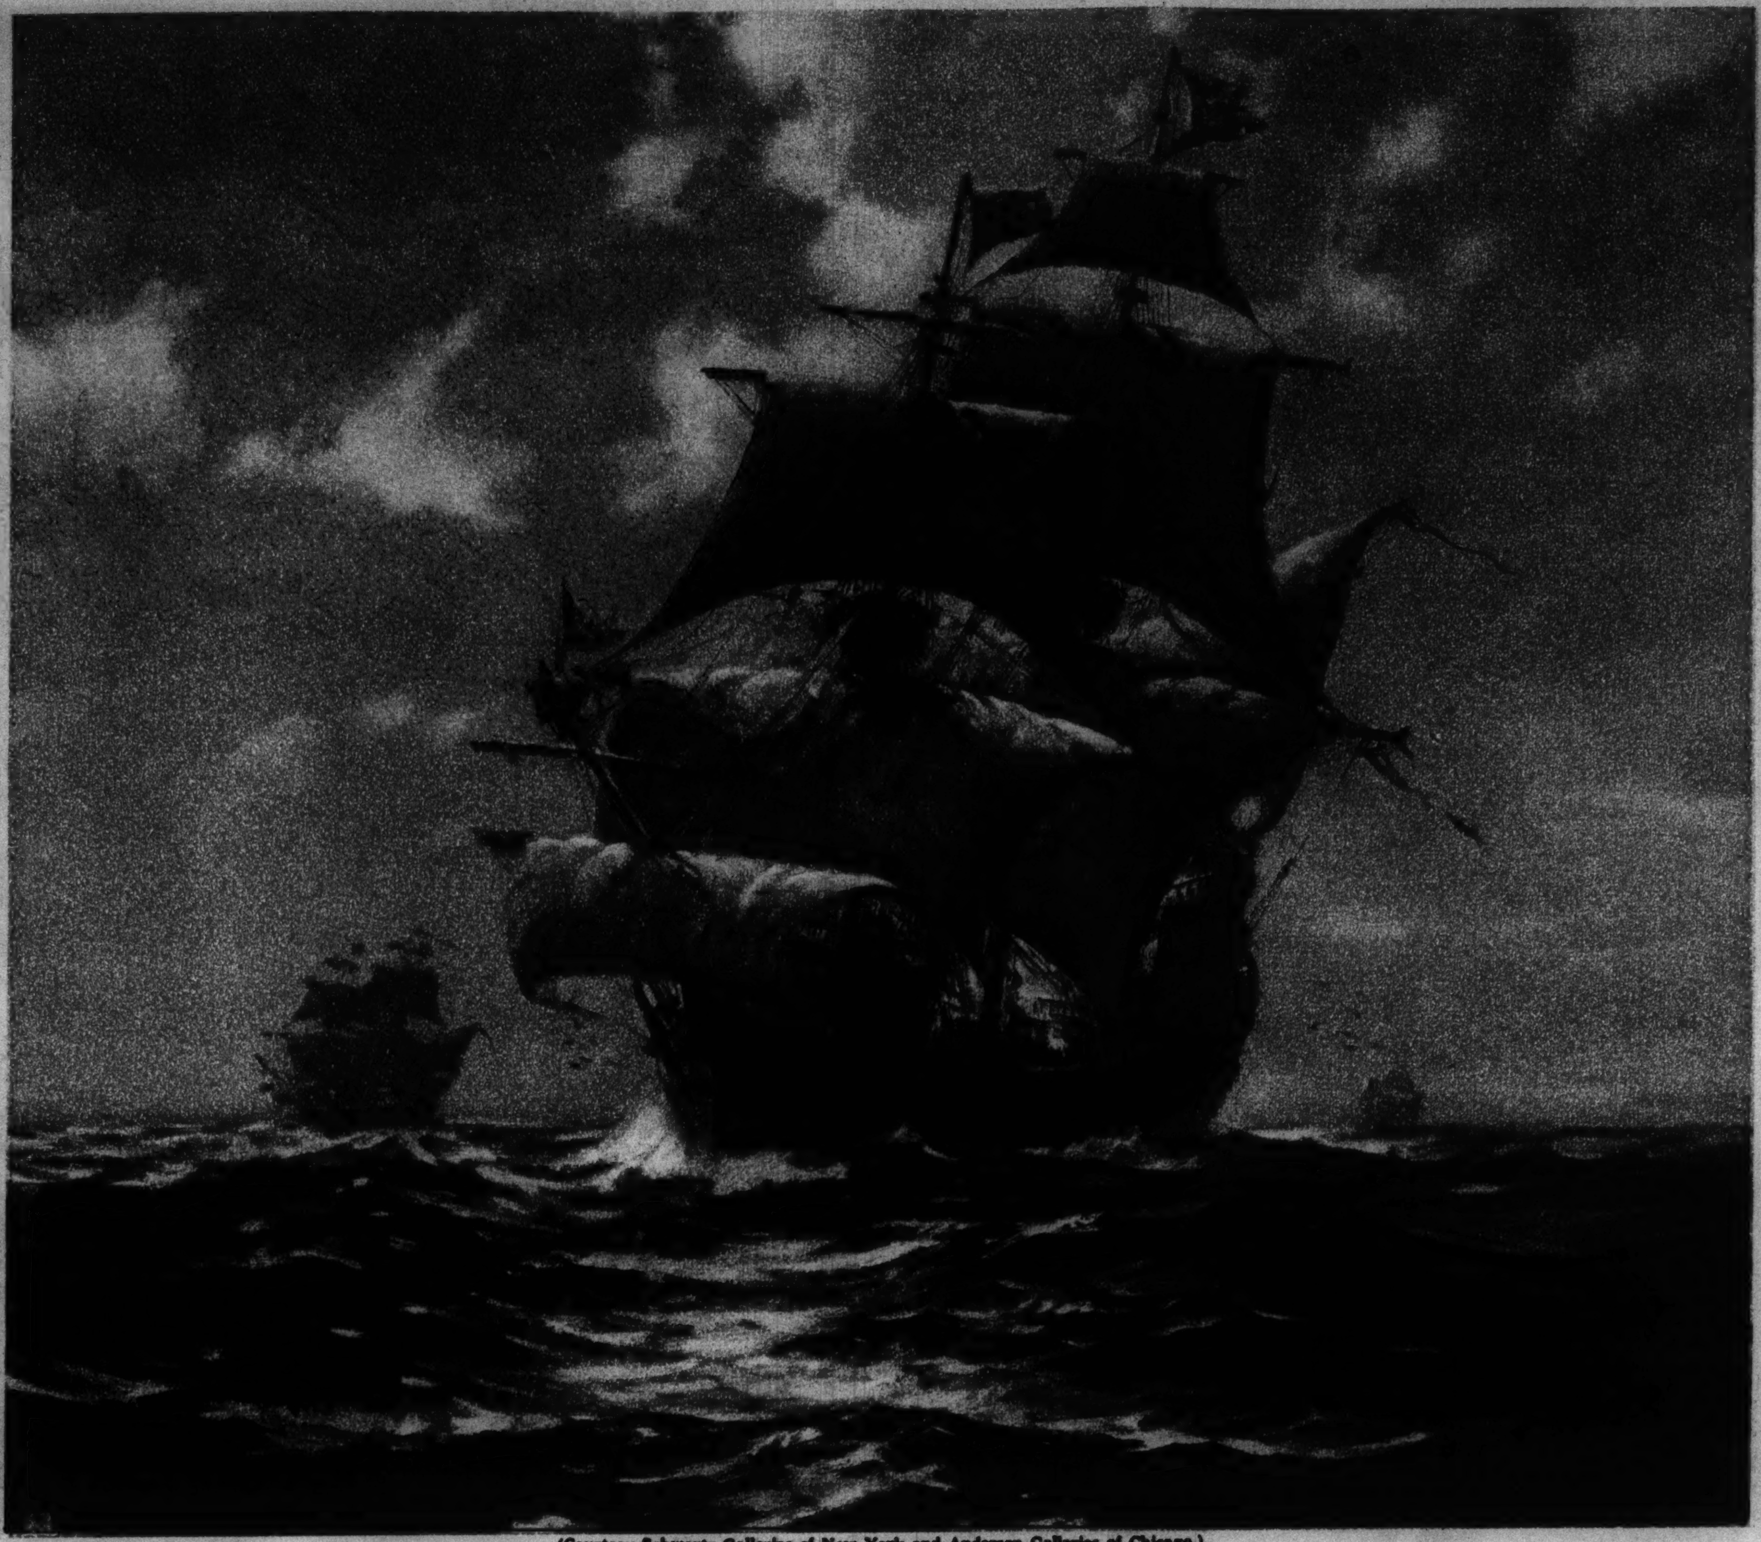
Glamor Surrounds Treasure Ships of Old

Their Modern Counterparts Colorless

Five Billion in Gold Shipped Since 1933



(Courtesy Schwartz Galleries of New York and Anderson Galleries of Chicago.)
From the painting "The Treasure Galleons," by Frank Vining Smith.

SINCE 1933 more than five billion dollars' worth of gold has poured into the United States of America in the closely guarded strong boxes of treasure ships. The larger part of this rich and collectively vast cargo of the precious metal has come from France and Great Britain. Foreigners were so eager to dispose of their gold at America's buying price of $35 an ounce and so satisfied to accept American dollars in return, which they considered the safest medium for capital, that today this government possesses nearly thirteen billion dollars' worth of monetary gold, more than half of the entire stock of the world.

● In this unparalleled movement of the metal across the oceans few weeks passed, prior to last autumn, that did not see vessels from foreign ports unloading millions in gold upon our shores. This has been even a greater movement of gold, both in value and in tonnage, considering the time involved, than that of the peak days of the historic galleons which sailed from the Spanish Main for Europe, wallowing deep in the water from the vast weight of metal in their holds.

● The modern treasure ships, steaming on fixed schedules, without the fear of buccaneers and English privateers, and wit little fear of calamitous storms are prosaic and colorless besid the gilded galleons of Spain tha took back to Europe the treasures of Montezuma and the roya Incas. No one ever will kno just how much gold the Spanis conquistadores took from th treasuries and mines of th American Indians during the sixteenth century. At least it wa sufficient to warant the sailin of many a noble fleet for Spain Even so late as the early part o the eighteenth century a grea Spanish treasure fleet fro Porto Bello and Vera Cruz wa overtaken by British and Dutc warships at the very entranc to Vigo harbor. British an Dutch guns roared, and to th bottom of the sea, in water to deep to be dredged, sank th Spanish gold ships and 100 million dollars' worth of gold.

● Gone are the days of galleons of preying sea captains with letters of marque, of long-haire pirates, of cannon royal and culverins that fire red-hot shot.

● Modern treasure ships stea serenely on their way. Thei departures and arrivals ar marked by no ceremonies, generally only briefly noted in th newspapers, and are of littl concern except to bankers an other financiers.

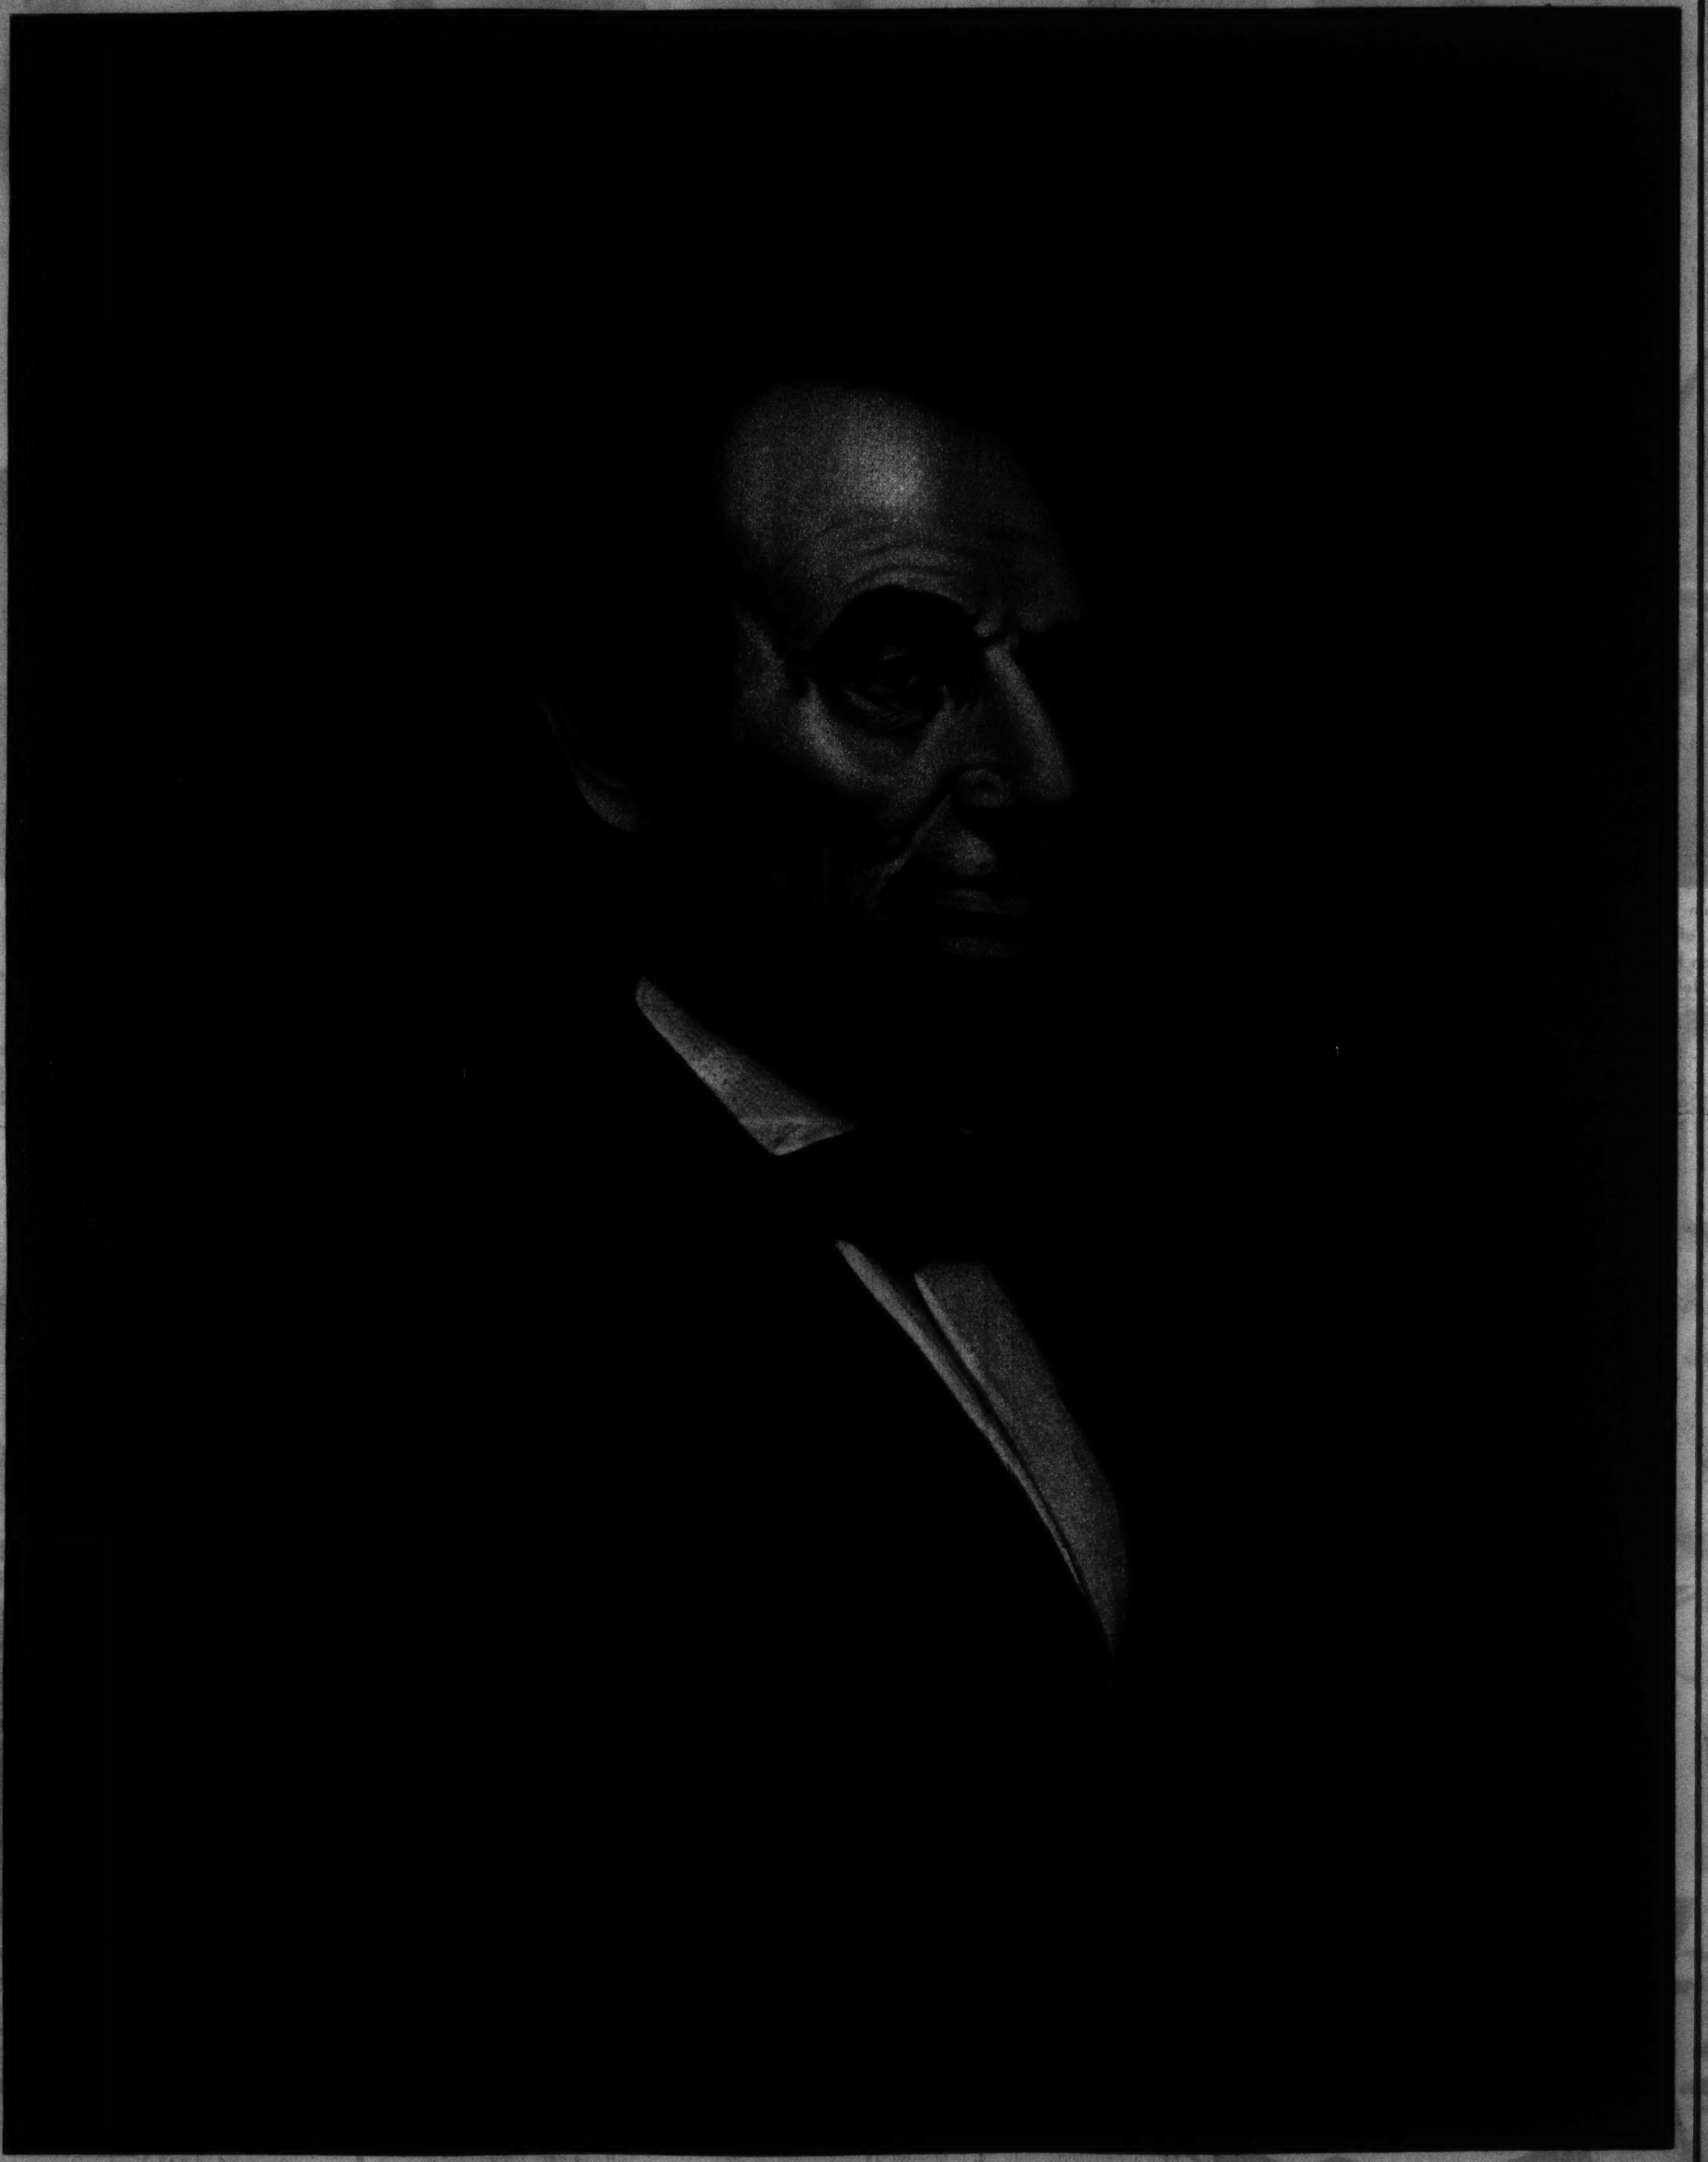
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

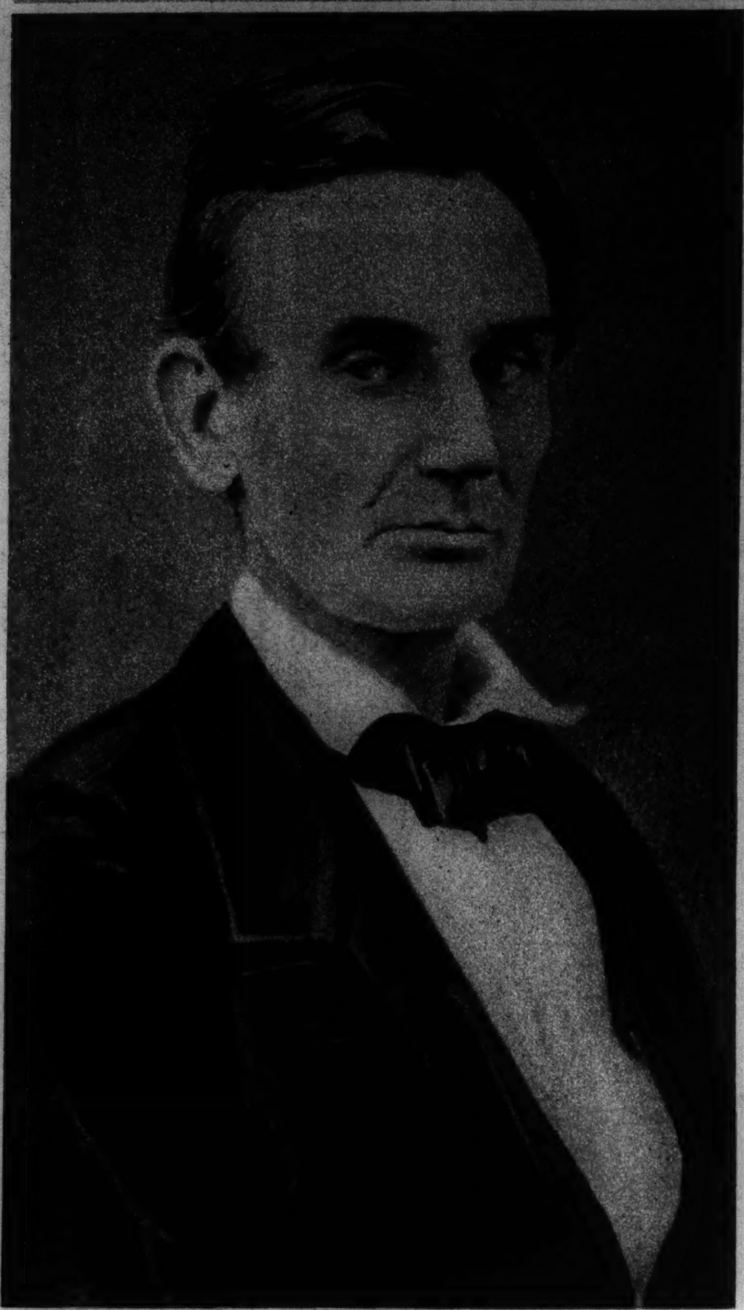
February 6, 1938



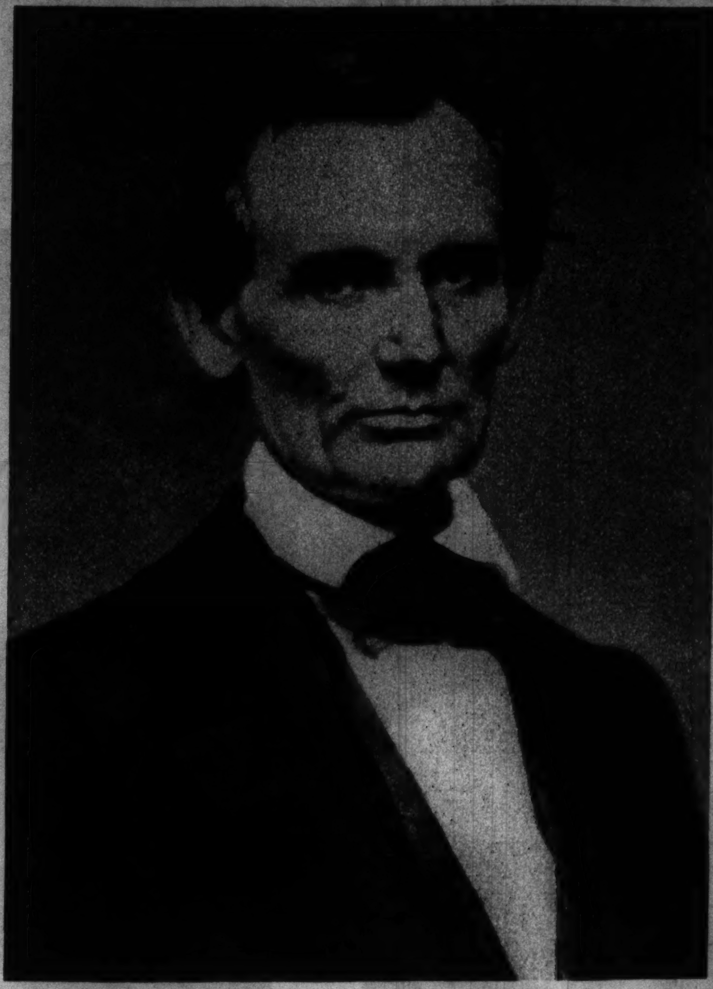
ABRAHAM LINCOLN—A portrait painted from life by William Cogswell at the same time he executed the full-length portrait which hangs in the White House. A prized possession of the artist for many years, this canvas is now on exhibit at the Chicago Historical society, by whose courtesy it is reproduced here. . . . In the Graphic section of this issue appears an article concerning Lincoln.

Copies of the above painting, in the size and colors shown and appropriately framed under glass, can be obtained at the Chicago Tribune Public Service offices, Tribune Tower and 1 South Dearborn street. Each, $1.00; by prepaid express, $1.50.

'59 to '65: Rare Photos of Lincoln



1859 Abraham Lincoln in a photograph taken by S. M. Fassett of Chicago on October 4. Lincoln had stopped in Chicago on his return from Milwaukee, where he had delivered an address.



1860 The Cooper Union photograph taken by M. B. Brady on Feb. 27, 1860, date of the famous Cooper Union address. This photograph was widely circulated during the campaign, and it often is said that it gained many votes for Lincoln. It is one of the last showing him without a beard.

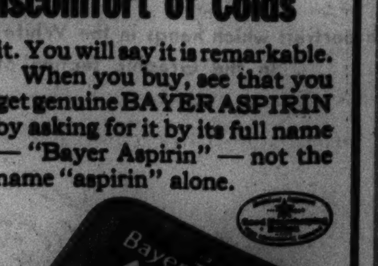
1865 Lincoln and his son, "Tad," posed in Washington for this photograph by Gardner on April 9. No photograph of Lincoln was taken after that date; five days later he was assassinated.

I'D GIVE ANYTHING TO RELIEVE THESE AWFUL ACHES AND PAINS—GET MYSELF SOME SLEEP
HURTS LIKE BLAZES WHEN I SWALLOW - I'M HOARSE AS A FROG
HAVE A TEMPERATURE TOO, THIS IS THE LAST TIME I'LL BE CAUGHT WITHOUT BAYER ASPIRIN IN THE HOUSE



COLDS

Less annoying when given 2-way relief at start

DIRECTIONS: Take 2 Bayer Tablets with a full glass of water.

Crush 3 Bayer Tablets in ⅓ glass of water—gargle twice every few hours.

If temperature does not go down—if throat pains and aches are not quickly relieved—call your family doctor.

The Simple Speedy Way To Ease Pain and Discomfort of Colds

The speed with which Bayer tablets act in relieving the discomfort of colds and accompanying sore throat is utterly amazing . . . and the treatment simple and pleasant. This is all you do.

Take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets internally, with a full glass of water — then crush and dissolve three genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in one-third glass of water. Gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases promptly; rawness is relieved.

And — when you use this Bayer Aspirin treatment you are acting on medical experience.

For, instead of unknown remedies you are using a remedy known to doctors throughout the world—a daily stand-by in millions of families.

Use this way regularly to ease the pain of sore throat accompanying a cold. We believe your doctor will approve it. You will say it is remarkable.

When you buy, see that you get genuine BAYER ASPIRIN by asking for it by its full name — "Bayer Aspirin" — not the name "aspirin" alone.

—is Campbell's Tomato Soup. My youngsters love its lively taste. My husband says it hits the spot! And just lately I've found it makes a grand sauce for all kinds of meat dishes, too."

TRUTH TO TELL, I don't know of anything that keeps bobbing up on my shopping pad as regularly as Campbell's Tomato Soup. My family like to have it often. And that's all right with me, because it's such good eating for so little trouble and cost."

The keen, lively taste that delights you each time this soup is served comes of tomatoes specially grown for Campbell's. Luscious beauties they are, finer than you'd likely find in many a long tramp through the markets. Of these Campbell's chefs make a smooth, thick purée, and skillfully enhance it with fine table butter and rare, delicate seasonings.

Think now—are you serving it to your family as often as they would like to enjoy it? Start your next grocery list with: Campbell's Tomato Soup.

A Dramatic Record of Human Frailty

Next Sunday's Coloroto Graphic of the Chicago Sunday Tribune will present the first instalment of one of the most unusual documents ever printed.

In "The Doctor's Diary," a physician gives an honest and non-technical account of his observations as a specialist in the treatment of syphilis.

It is the dramatic record of human frailty and misery caused by ignorance of the dangers of this insidious plague.

Be sure to read it starting next Sunday in the Coloroto Graphic of the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

The Calendar said: "CALL IT OFF"

MIDOL said: "LET THEM COME"

DO you still let pain take precedence to pleasure certain days each month? Do you still let the calendar regulate your life—giving up enjoyment and giving in to suffering which you think is unavoidable?

If you do, you should know that doctors have discovered severe or prolonged periodic functional pain is not natural to most women. And that thousands of women have discovered it is not necessary. For unless there is some organic disorder demanding a physician's or surgeon's attention, Midol helps most women who try it.

Why not give Midol a chance to help you—to render those dreaded days of menstruation as carefree as any other? Midol is offered for this sole purpose. It acts quickly. In all but unusual instances it brings definite relief. Many women declare they have no pain at all, or even discomfort, since they learned to rely on Midol.

When the calendar says "quiet", let Midol help you "carry on". Instead of favoring yourself, let Midol take care of the pain. A few Midol tablets should see you comfortably through your worst day. Druggists have Midol on the counter in convenient purse-size tins.

MAZOLA
The Salad Oil of Character

MAZOLA and LEMON
The Modern Salad Dressing of the Epicure

● Many people think rich heavy salad dressings are fattening—so the Epicure is serving the light, modern Mazola Dressing made this way:

● First rub wooden bowl (or other bowl handy) with a bit of garlic, put in chopped salad greens —pour ½ cup of Mazola over them, then juice of one lemon, and salt and pepper to taste. Mix together and serve. By pouring Mazola on before lemon juice is added, the oil clings to the vegetables and none of it is wasted.

Try this for lunch or dinner—you will never go back to the heavy dressings that give a "I'm-filled-up" feeling.

Always
Ask Your Family Doctor

Before You Give Children Unknown Preparations

"You can always reach me when in doubt about your child's medicine."
"I wouldn't think of giving Junior anything until you approved it, Doctor."

It's a mistake to experiment on yourself. But it's worse to "try out" an unknown medicine on children. Always consult your family doctor.

There is no such thing as a "bargain" in unknown remedies—no matter how little you pay. That is true especially of "Milk of Magnesia"—so often given to children. The brand known to doctors and public alike for 50 years is "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia." That is the brand to ask for at the store—PHILLIPS'—because it is safe for children.

Children often like Phillips' in the newer form—the tiny, peppermint flavored tablets they chew like candy. Each one equals a teaspoonful of the liquid. A tin of 30 costs only 25¢.
